RFA REQUEST FOR CONTINGENCY PLANNING IN ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI

From DHS OPS:

BLUF: At this time for St. Louis, the FBI continues to plan on having adequate resources in the city and do not have plans on utilizing DHS contingency forces at this time. Therefore, DHS will only execute our contingency if something totally unexpected were to occur. At this point, there is a low probability that any DHS forces will be needed in St. Louis.

FBI and DOJ forces along with other State/local agencies have the situation well in hand. That said, DHS OPS is offering contingencies.

1. Air surveillance: CBP/AMO can offer up [REDACTED] (b)(7)(E) and [REDACTED] (b)(7)(E) with surveillance capability. It will take these aircraft approximately [REDACTED] hours to get on scene from initial request (about [REDACTED] hours for pre-flight preps and about [REDACTED] hours flight time to St. Louis).
2. Ground Forces: In addition to funding limitations noted last evening and authorities issues
  1. FPS:
    1. Inside St. Louis, FPS will have [REDACTED] District Commander, [REDACTED] Area Commanders and [REDACTED] officers (total [REDACTED]). Within a [REDACTED] hour radius of St. Louis, FPS could call in an additional [REDACTED] officers for a maximum of [REDACTED].
    2. FPS will also provide LNOs to the various command posts and EOC inside St. Louis for coordination.

3. FPS was going to inquire with SAC on how to get local authorities/powers cross-designated to DHS LEOs if DHS LEOs were requested for support off of Federal property. If used for security around federal facilities, we are all set with our own organic authorities to include other DHS components who could be brought in to augment FPS. Currently though, no DHS component has LE powers off of federal property unless the locals convey such authority. If your SAC ever sought about using DHS LEOs in that role, we would seek assistance in coordinating with the locals to get the appropriate legal authorities cross-designated to DHS.
  4. Funding for DHS support on non-federal property is the other issue requiring a funding solution to avoid an Anti-Deficiency Act (ADA) violation. Funding is a non-issue if DHS is kept to securing federal property.
2. ICE:
1. ICE has a standby Rapid Deployment Team of [REDACTED] on a [REDACTED] at Benning, GA. If additional DHS ground forces were requested, we would launch this team first. USCG would be the transport provider. Once this team arrived in St. Louis, the aircraft could gas up and relaunch to Detroit to pick up the ICE team and return to St. Louis.
  2. Both teams in GA and MI are proactively working to get USMS deputization completed today. If this ICE contingency were utilized and the team(s) were employed off federal property, they would both need local authorities transferred as well. And there's the funding piece noted above for off federal property support.
3. USCG
1. USCG can transport the ICE team(s) as noted above.

FPS has requested USBP assistance to augment FPS personnel on site at the Federal buildings and Federal statues in Seattle, WA. 1.

INTRODUCTION

“President Trump, in pushing a law-and-order message for his re-election campaign, has embraced a dark vision of Portland as a lawless place filled with people who ‘hate our country.’ His administration’s crackdown has brought armed officers from a wide variety of federal agencies to the streets, where they have been firing tear gas and pulling protesters into unmarked vans.”

– The New York Times, July 21, 2020

On Saturday, July 18, 2020, Mr. Paul stood alongside retired military veterans, moms, nurses, Black Lives Matter advocates, legal observers, and other peaceful civil rights activists protesting police brutality outside the Justice Center in downtown Portland. Without warning, federal agents, acting under the orders of President Trump and Secretary Wolf, stormed the streets of Portland and began mercilessly attacking peaceful protesters with military weapons.

3.

Using a baton, federal agents viciously beat and mutilated Mr. Paul about the body and face, without provocation, sending Mr. Paul to the emergency room, where he stayed overnight receiving treatment.

JURISDICTION AND THE PARTIES

This Court has jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1331 because this complaint presents federal questions and alleges violations of the U.S. Constitution. Venue is proper in this district under 28 U.S.C. § 1391 because Mr. Paul was beaten and mutilated in downtown Portland.

Plaintiff Mr. Paul is an American citizen and a peaceful civil rights activist. Mr. Paul is a special education paraprofessional employed by Seattle Public Schools, working to create learning environments more inclusive to people of all backgrounds and abilities. He is also a Recreation Leader with Seattle Parks and Recreation, working to develop programs that promote equity and opportunity. Since George Floyd's murder in Minneapolis, Mr. Paul has been actively involved in civil rights protests, mostly in Seattle where he lives. Mr. Paul believes it is fundamentally important for citizens to protest the treatment of Black lives – racist treatment that has been systemic and generational. Mr. Paul decided to come to Portland to protest with the thousands of other peaceful people who have flooded the streets. Mr. Paul traveled to Portland to have his voice heard, and to engage in peaceful protest with the rest of the people in Portland, as the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution allows.

6.

7.

Defendant Chad Wolf is the acting Homeland Security Secretary of the United States. Wolf's predecessor, Kevin McAleenan, departed the office in part over concerns that the messaging and tone of the department had become too political.

8.

John Does 1-100 are unidentified federal agents, senior White House officials, and other co-conspirators who aided and abetted President Trump and Chad Wolf in the politically-motivated violations of the U.S. Constitution as alleged in this complaint, or who participated in the unprovoked attack on Mr. Paul.

FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS

This complaint's allegations are based on personal knowledge as to Mr. Paul's behavior and made on information and belief as to the behavior of others.

10.

In May of 2020, hundreds of thousands of American civil rights activists began protesting the murder of George Floyd, a Black man killed by police officers in Minneapolis, Minnesota.

11.

President Trump has repeatedly advocated the use of force against Black demonstrators and civil rights activists protesting the murder of George Floyd.

12.

President Trump posted on social media about the protests, stating that “when the looting starts, the shooting starts,” which is a racist slogan used by former Miami police chief Walter Headley in 1967 to advocate for police brutality and discriminatory practices targeting African Americans. President Trump later tweeted, “These people are ANARCHISTS. Call in our National Guard NOW” and “This isn’t going to stop until the good guys are willing to use overwhelming force against the bad guys”.

President Trump personally called on governors to “dominate your city and your state” and warned that he was prepared to “do something people haven’t seen before” when referring to the protests. During remarks in the White House Rose Garden, President Trump said that if “a city or a state refuses to take the actions that are necessary to defend the life and property of their residents, then I will deploy the United States military and quickly solve the problem for them.”

14.

President Trump's statements about Black demonstrators and civil rights protesters were different from his statements about other demonstrators. President Trump has routinely been sympathetic to demonstrators who share his own political agenda.

15.

For example, President Trump expressed support when heavily armed and predominantly white demonstrators threatened lawmakers and stormed statehouses to object to coronavirus stay-at-home rules. In response to the 2017 white nationalist Unite the Right rally in Charlottesville, Virginia, President Trump said, "You had very fine people, on both sides".

16.

In July of 2020, Secretary Wolf and senior DHS officials, acting under the orders of President Trump, took to the airwaves and social media to amplify President Trump's political message of law and order, using Portland, where protests over racial inequality and police brutality persisted, as an example.

17.

DHS law enforcement officers from Immigration and Customs Enforcement and Customs and Border Protection, two of the department's immigration agencies, were deployed to Portland. According to Oregon's governor, Secretary Wolf was "on a mission to provoke confrontation for political purposes." "The Trump administration needs to stop playing politics with people's lives."

18.

"Demonstrators in Portland have been protesting racial inequality and police brutality for the last 50 nights, US Attorney Billy J. Williams said in a statement. Federal authorities have protected the Mark O. Hatfield US Courthouse and, at times, interaction between protesters and law enforcement has gotten violent. Last weekend, one protester was seriously injured after the man was shot in the head with impact munition."

– CNN, July 20, 2020

As of the date of this complaint, the U.S. Attorney for the Oregon District has requested an investigation into DHS and its treatment of protesters in Portland.

According to U.S. Senator Jeff Merkley, “Authoritarian governments, not democratic republics, send unmarked authorities after protesters. These Trump/Barr tactics designed to eliminate any accountability are absolutely unacceptable in America, and must end.”

21.

Secretary Wolf recently told Fox News, ““I offered DHS support to help them locally address the situation that’s going on in Portland, and their only response was: please pack up and go home. That’s just not going to happen on my watch.”

22.

On July 18, 2020, Mr. Paul and other peaceful protesters were exercising their First Amendment right to assemble, speak, and petition the government in downtown Portland. Mr. Paul and others were engaging in political speech to address, through the exercise of their constitutional rights, the infection of overt and systemic racism in the American criminal justice system.

23.

Black people are arrested at twice the rate of their population, detained pretrial at a rate three-and-a-half times higher than white people, and imprisoned at a rate of almost six times that of white people. Black people are three times more likely to be killed by the police than white people. On July 18, 2020, Mr. Paul was exercising his First Amendment right to protest and to change these systematic issues.

As alleged in this complaint, in order to silence Mr. Paul and to stop him from peacefully exercising his First Amendment rights, federal agents, at the direction of Secretary Wolf, in order to carry out the political agenda of President Trump, beat and mutilated Mr. Paul so badly that he had to spend the night in the emergency room. The beating and mutilation of Mr. Paul by federal agents was under the direction of President Trump and other senior White House officials.

25.

On July 20, 2020, DHS Deputy Secretary Ken Cuccinelli tweeted videos and images of Portland, falsely labeling the unfolding situation as “terrorism” and projecting President Trump’s political message of instability. Secretary Wolf said in a Fox News interview that the department will intervene as it sees fit.

26.

“It’s not the first time DHS – the largest federal law enforcement organization – has found itself acting upon Trump’s long-held feuds against Democratic-run cities. Earlier this year, the department barred New York residents from applying to some Trusted Traveler Programs, like Global Entry, over legislation passed in the state relating to undocumented immigrants. Before then, the administration weighed retaliatory measures against so-called sanctuary cities.”

CLAIMS FOR RELIEF*— Claim One against Secretary Wolf and John Does 1-100 —*First Amendment Violation

As alleged in this complaint, defendants violated the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution by depriving Mr. Paul of his right to freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, and freedom to petition the government. Defendants deliberately violated well-established limitations on the exercise of speech in and assembly in public places, and did so for political reasons. Defendants' actions were based on the viewpoint being expressed by the peaceful protesters, including Mr. Paul. Defendants' violent actions were not a reasonable regulation of the time, place, or manner of Mr. Paul's First Amendment protected activity. These actions were not justified by a compelling—or even substantial—government interest justifying the infringement of Mr. Paul's First Amendment rights. Even if there were a compelling government interest in beating and mutilating peaceful protesters outside the Justice Center, defendants' actions were not narrowly tailored to serve any government interest in a lawful manner. Secretary Wolf and John Does 1-100 are jointly and severally liable to Mr. Paul under Bivens v. Six Unknown Named Agents of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, 403 U.S. 388, (1971), for this violation of his rights.

— Claim Two against Secretary Wolf and John Does 1-100 —

Fourth Amendment Violation

As alleged in this complaint, defendants violated the Fourth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution by using excessive physical force, including chemical agents, frightening loud munitions, batons and shields, and a physical charge at peaceful protesters including Mr. Paul, in order to forcibly remove or force them to move from the area outside the Justice Center, without a warrant or probable cause to arrest them—and the actions of Secretary Wolf in ordering such uses of force, violated Mr. Paul’s rights under the Fourth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution to be free from unreasonable seizures. Secretary Wolf and John Does 1-100 are jointly and severally liable to Mr. Paul under Bivens v. Six Unknown Named Agents of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, 403 U.S. 388, (1971), for this violation of his rights.

— Claim Three against all Defendants —

First Amendment Threatened Violation

Defendants' practice of deploying physical force against peaceful protesters to remove them from places in which they have gathered with others to express their political opinions, as manifest by their actions against Mr. Paul outside the Justice Center on July 18, 2020, by their repeated threats to deploy violence against protestors demonstrating against racial injustice generally and in Portland specifically, and by President Trump's statements as alleged in this complaint, threatens Mr. Paul with violations of his First Amendment rights of freedom of speech and assembly when he carries out his stated intention to return to the Justice Center when it is open to the public to express his political views. By depriving Mr. Paul of the opportunity to express his views on such future occasions, defendants will impose irreparable harm on Mr. Paul.

— Claim Four against all Defendants —

Fourth Amendment Threatened Violation

Defendants' practice of deploying excessive physical force without provocation, warning, or legal grounds to do so, against peaceful protesters to force them to halt or to move, as manifest by their actions against Mr. Paul and others outside the Justice Center on July 18, 2020, by their repeated threats to deploy violence against protestors demonstrating against racial injustice generally and in Portland specifically, and by President Trump's statements as alleged in this complaint, threatens Mr. Paul with violations of his Fourth Amendment rights when he carries out his stated intention to return to the Justice Center when it is open to the public to express his political views. By subjecting Mr. Paul to such unreasonable seizures, defendants will impose irreparable harm on Mr. Paul.

— Claim Five against Secretary Wolf and John Does 1-100 —

Conspiracy to Deprive Rights

As alleged in this complaint, Secretary Wolf and John Does 1-100 conspired together to deprive Mr. Paul of his civil rights in violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3). The conspiracy included those involved with law enforcement actions outside the Justice Center on July 18, 2020 between 6:00 pm and 7:00 pm including President Trump, Secretary Wolf and John Does 1-100. The conspirators engaged in overt acts in furtherance of the conspiracy, including the use of excessive violent force against civil rights activists outside the Justice Center. The conspiracy targeted Black people and their supporters. Both groups are protected classes under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3). President Trump, Secretary Wolf and others directed the conspiracy to take these actions because of their adverse effects on an identifiable group—namely, civil rights activists. The conspiracy targeted protected rights of Mr. Paul, who is a civil rights activist. The conspiracy targeted Mr. Paul’s protected First Amendment activities because defendants held animus towards Mr. Paul’s viewpoints. The violent actions of the conspirators directly and unlawfully interfered with Mr. Paul’s First Amendment activities. The conspiracy violently interfered with Mr. Paul’s right to demonstrate outside the Justice Center, a place of public accommodation.

— Claim Six against Secretary Wolf and John Does 1-100 —

Failure to Prevent a Conspiracy to Deprive Rights

As alleged in this complaint, Secretary Wolf and John Does 1-100 violated 42 U.S.C. § 1986 by failing to meet their duty to prevent or aid in preventing conspiracies to deprive civil rights. Secretary Wolf and John Does 1-100 knew that a Section 1985 violation was about to occur or was occurring, had the power to prevent or aid in preventing it, and neglected or refused to prevent or aid in preventing it. Law enforcement's failure to stop unlawful violence by a Section 1985(3) conspiracy when they know it is about to occur is a quintessential Section 1986 violation. As alleged in this complaint, the Section 1985 conspiracy consisted of using violence against peaceful civil rights activists. Secretary Wolf and John Does 1-100 knew that such violence was planned and could have taken actions to stop or limit that violence. Secretary Wolf and John Does 1-100 willfully or negligently took no such action. Secretary Wolf and John Does 1-100 could and should have refused to comply with unlawful orders, refused to use excessive force when clearing the area outside the Justice Center, or attempted to appeal to superiors to take a different course of action. As a result of defendants' failure to prevent or aid in preventing the Section 1985 conspiracy, Mr. Paul was injured and his rights were violated.

JURY TRIAL REQUEST

Mr. Paul requests trial by jury.

PRAYER FOR RELIEF

Mr. Paul respectfully requests a judgment declaring that the acts of defendants described in this complaint violate the First Amendment, the Fourth Amendment, 42 U.S.C. § 1985, and 42 U.S.C. § 1986, an injunction ordering defendants to cease engaging in the unlawful acts described in this complaint, fair compensation for damages sustained by Mr. Paul as alleged in this complaint, attorney fees, costs, and any other relief that the Court may deem appropriate.

The level of support we're providing is incredible! Thank you for your continued leadership and unwavering support of not only our DHS/FPS colleagues, but our state and local law enforcement partners.

Please pass along my heartfelt and sincere appreciation to all the personnel who have been and continue to step-up, again and again to protect the America people and uphold the rule of law. Their relentless dedication and self-sacrifice represents the the essence of our great organization!

Regardless of the on-going unjustified and mis-placed rhetoric out there, I know without a doubt the majority of the American people appreciate and support our men and women.

Thanks,

Folks,

The level of support we're providing is incredible! Thank you for your continued leadership and unwavering support of not only our DHS/FPS colleagues, but our state and local law enforcement partners.

Please pass along my heartfelt and sincere appreciation to all the personnel who have been and continue to step-up, again and again to protect the America people and uphold the rule of law. Their relentless dedication and self-sacrifice represents the the essence of our great organization!

Regardless of the on-going unjustified and mis-placed rhetoric out there, I know without a doubt the majority of the American people appreciate and support our men and women.

Thanks,

Mark

From DHS OPS:

BLUF: At this time for St. Louis, the FBI continues to plan on having adequate resources in the city and do not have plans on utilizing DHS contingency forces at this time. FBI and DOJ forces along with other State/local agencies have the situation well in hand. That said, DHS OPS is offering contingencies.

1. Air surveillance: CBP/AMO can offer up (b)(7)(E) and (b)(7)(E) with (b)(7)(E) capability. It will take these aircraft approximately (b)(7)(E) hours to get on scene from initial request (about (b)(7)(E) hours for pre-flight preps and about (b)(7)(E) hours flight time to St. Louis).

 Federal, State, And Local Requests For Assistance

3. FPS was going to inquire with SAC on how to get local authorities/powers cross-designated to DHS LEOs if DHS LEOs were requested for support off of Federal property. If used for security around federal facilities, we are all set with our own organic authorities to include other DHS components who could be brought in to augment FPS. Currently though, no DHS component has LE powers off of federal property unless the locals convey such authority. If your SAC ever sought about using DHS LEOs in that role, we would seek assistance in coordinating with the locals to get the appropriate legal authorities cross-designated to DHS.
  4. Funding for DHS support on non-federal property is the other issue requiring a funding solution to avoid an Anti-Deficiency Act (ADA) violation. Funding is a non-issue if DHS is kept to securing federal property.
2. ICE:
1. ICE has a standby Rapid Deployment Team of [REDACTED] on a [REDACTED] at Benning, GA. If additional DHS ground forces were requested, we would launch this team first. USCG would be the transport provider. Once this team arrived in St. Louis, the aircraft could gas up and relaunch to Detroit to pick up the ICE team and return to St. Louis.
  2. Both teams in GA and MI are proactively working to get USMS deputization completed today. If this ICE contingency were utilized and the team(s) were employed off federal property, they would both need local authorities transferred as well. And there's the funding piece noted above for off federal property support.
3. USCG
1. USCG can transport the ICE team(s) as noted above.

From DHS OPS:

BLUF: At this time for St. Louis, the FBI continues to plan on having adequate resources in the city and do not have plans on utilizing DHS contingency forces at this time. Therefore, DHS will only execute our contingency if something totally unexpected were to occur. At this point, there is a low probability that any DHS forces will be needed in St. Louis.

FBI and DOJ forces along with other State/local agencies have the situation well in hand. That said, DHS OPS is offering contingencies.

1. Air surveillance: CBP/AMO can offer up (b)(7)(E) and (b)(7)(E) with (b)(7)(E) capability. It will take these aircraft approximately (b)(7)(E) hours to get on scene from initial request (about (b)(7)(E) hours for pre-flight preps and about (b)(7)(E) hours flight time to St. Louis).
2. Ground Forces: In addition to funding limitations noted last evening and authorities issues

1. FPS:

1. Inside St. Louis, FPS will have (b)(7)(E) District Commander, (b)(7)(E) Area Commanders and (b)(7)(E) officers (total (b)(7)(E)). Within a (b)(7)(E) hour radius of St. Louis, FPS could call in an additional (b)(7)(E) officers for a maximum of (b)(7)(E).
2. FPS will also provide LNOs to the various command posts and EOC inside St. Louis for coordination.

3. FPS was going to inquire with SAC on how to get local authorities/powers cross-designated to DHS LEOs if DHS LEOs were requested for support off of Federal property. If used for security around federal facilities, we are all set with our own organic authorities to include other DHS components who could be brought in to augment FPS. Currently though, no DHS component has LE powers off of federal property unless the locals convey such authority. If your SAC ever sought about using DHS LEOs in that role, we would seek assistance in coordinating with the locals to get the appropriate legal authorities cross-designated to DHS.
  4. Funding for DHS support on non-federal property is the other issue requiring a funding solution to avoid an Anti-Deficiency Act (ADA) violation. Funding is a non-issue if DHS is kept to securing federal property.
2. ICE:
1. ICE has a standby Rapid Deployment Team of [REDACTED] on a [REDACTED] (b)(7)(E) at Benning, GA. If additional DHS ground forces were requested, we would launch this team first. USCG would be the transport provider. Once this team arrived in St. Louis, the aircraft could gas up and relaunch to Detroit to pick up the ICE team and return to St. Louis.
  2. Both teams in GA and MI are proactively working to get USMS deputization completed today. If this ICE contingency were utilized and the team(s) were employed off federal property, they would both need local authorities transferred as well. And there's the funding piece noted above for off federal property support.
3. USCG
1. USCG can transport the ICE team(s) as noted above.

From DHS OPS:

BLUF: At this time for St. Louis, the FBI continues to plan on having adequate resources in the city and do not have plans on utilizing DHS contingency forces at this time. Therefore, DHS will only execute our contingency if something totally unexpected were to occur. At this point, there is a low probability that any DHS forces will be needed in St. Louis.

FBI and DOJ forces along with other State/local agencies have the situation well in hand. That said, DHS OPS is offering contingencies.

1. Air surveillance: CBP/AMO can offer up [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] with [REDACTED] capability. It will take these aircraft approximately [REDACTED] hours to get on scene from initial request (about [REDACTED] hours for pre-flight preps and about [REDACTED] hours flight time to St. Louis).
2. Ground Forces: In addition to funding limitations noted last evening and authorities issues
  1. FPS:
    1. Inside St. Louis, FPS will have [REDACTED] District Commander, [REDACTED] Area Commanders and [REDACTED] officers (total [REDACTED]). Within a [REDACTED] hour radius of St. Louis, FPS could call in an additional [REDACTED] officers for a maximum of [REDACTED].
    2. FPS will also provide LNOs to the various command posts and EOC inside St. Louis for coordination.

3. FPS was going to inquire with SAC on how to get local authorities/powers cross-designated to DHS LEOs if DHS LEOs were requested for support off of Federal property. If used for security around federal facilities, we are all set with our own organic authorities to include other DHS components who could be brought in to augment FPS. Currently though, no DHS component has LE powers off of federal property unless the locals convey such authority. If your SAC ever sought about using DHS LEOs in that role, we would seek assistance in coordinating with the locals to get the appropriate legal authorities cross-designated to DHS.
  4. Funding for DHS support on non-federal property is the other issue requiring a funding solution to avoid an Anti-Deficiency Act (ADA) violation. Funding is a non-issue if DHS is kept to securing federal property.
2. ICE:
1. ICE has a standby Rapid Deployment Team of [redacted] on a [redacted] (b)(7)(E) at Benning, GA. If additional DHS ground forces were requested, we would launch this team first. USCG would be the transport provider. Once this team arrived in St. Louis, the aircraft could gas up and relaunch to Detroit to pick up the ICE team and return to St. Louis.
  2. Both teams in GA and MI are proactively working to get USMS deputization completed today. If this ICE contingency were utilized and the team(s) were employed off federal property, they would both need local authorities transferred as well. And there's the funding piece noted above for off federal property support.
3. USCG
1. USCG can transport the ICE team(s) as noted above.

Dennis,

Could you ask our guys if they are attending the brief? They are listing a large contingency of agencies but I have not seen AMO.

CBP Portland Team Sit Rep 08/03/2020 to 08/04/2020:

At 1700 PST, August 3, 2020, USBP SOG, SOD, MRT and BLW, OFO SRT, SOG US Marshals, ERO SRT, Oregon State Police (OSP) and FPS Team leaders attended a briefing at the Edith Green Federal Building. Law Enforcement personnel will be deployed at the (b)(7)(E) and (b)(7)(E). The posture will be reactive only by teams. Federal enforcement action from the Federal buildings will only take place as requested by OSP as a response to major felonies occurring, including attempts to breach the courthouse, setting fire to the structure, or attempts to barricade the egress points. CBP agents/officers will conduct quick reaction force (QRF) duties in support of FPS and OSP operations providing security and safety to Federal property/personnel.

Our guys attended when I was there and it sounded like they had been going.

I have been reading this for the past few days and it looks like a cut and paste.

If we are attending, could you get them to correct the report?

From DHS OPS:

BLUF: At this time for St. Louis, the FBI continues to plan on having adequate resources in the city and do not have plans on utilizing DHS contingency forces at this time. Therefore, DHS will only execute our contingency if something totally unexpected were to occur. At this point, there is a low probability that any DHS forces will be needed in St. Louis.

FBI and DOJ forces along with other State/local agencies have the situation well in hand. That said, DHS OPS is offering contingencies.

1. Air surveillance: CBP/AMO can offer up to (b)(7)(E) and (b)(7)(E) with (b)(7)(E) capability. It will take these aircraft approximately (b)(7)(E) hours to get on scene from initial request (about (b)(7)(E) hours for pre-flight preps and about (b)(7)(E) hours flight time to St. Louis).
2. Ground Forces: In addition to funding limitations noted last evening and authorities issues
  1. FPS:
    1. Inside St. Louis, FPS will have (b)(7)(E) District Commander, (b)(7)(E) Area Commanders and (b)(7)(E) officers (total (b)(7)(E)). Within a (b)(7)(E) hour radius of St. Louis, FPS could call in an additional (b)(7)(E) officers for a maximum of (b)(7)(E).
    2. FPS will also provide LNOs to the various command posts and EOC inside St. Louis for coordination.
    3. FPS was going to inquire with SAC on how to get local authorities/powers cross-designated to DHS LEOs if DHS LEOs were requested for support off of Federal property. If used for security around federal facilities, we are all set with our own organic authorities to include other DHS components who could be brought in to augment FPS. Currently though, no DHS component has LE powers off of federal property unless the locals convey such authority. If your SAC ever sought about using DHS LEOs in that role, we would seek assistance in coordinating with the locals to get the appropriate legal authorities cross-designated to DHS.
    4. Funding for DHS support on non-federal property is the other issue requiring a funding solution to avoid an Anti-Deficiency Act (ADA) violation. Funding is a non-issue if DHS is kept to securing federal property.
  2. ICE:
    1. ICE has a standby Rapid Deployment Team of (b)(7)(E) on a (b)(7)(E) at Benning, GA. If additional DHS ground forces were requested, we would launch this team first. USCG would be the transport provider. Once this team arrived in St. Louis, the aircraft could gas up and relaunch to Detroit to pick up the ICE team and return to St. Louis.
    2. Both teams in GA and MI are proactively working to get USMS deputization completed today. If this ICE contingency were utilized and the team(s) were employed off federal property, they would both need local authorities transferred as well. And there's the funding piece noted above for off federal property support.
  3. USCG
    1. USCG can transport the ICE team(s) as noted above.

From DHS OPS:

Office: CBP SITROOM- Senior Watch Officer

Updated: July 29, 2020, 1000hrs

U.S. Customs and Border Protection
4th of July Weekend 2020, Law Enforcement Support

CBP Is Standing By And Ready To Support
 Federal, State, And Local Requests For Assistance

BLUF: At this time for St. Louis, the FBI continues to plan on having adequate resources in the city and do not have plans on utilizing DHS contingency forces at this time. Therefore, DHS will only execute our contingency if something totally unexpected were to occur. At this point, there is a low probability that any DHS forces will be needed in St. Louis.

FBI and DOJ forces along with other State/local agencies have the situation well in hand. That said, DHS OPS is offering contingencies.

1. Air surveillance: CBP/AMO can offer up [REDACTED] (b)(7)(E) and [REDACTED] (b)(7)(E) with [REDACTED] (b)(7)(E) capability. It will take these aircraft approximately [REDACTED] hours to get on scene from initial request (about [REDACTED] hours for pre-flight preps and about [REDACTED] hours flight time to St. Louis).
2. Ground Forces: In addition to funding limitations noted last evening and authorities issues
  1. FPS:
    1. Inside St. Louis, FPS will have [REDACTED] District Commander, [REDACTED] Area Commanders and [REDACTED] officers (total [REDACTED]). Within a [REDACTED] hour radius of St. Louis, FPS could call in an additional [REDACTED] officers for a maximum of [REDACTED].
    2. FPS will also provide LNOs to the various command posts and EOC inside St. Louis for coordination.
    3. FPS was going to inquire with SAC on how to get local authorities/powers cross-designated to DHS LEOs if DHS LEOs were requested for support off of Federal property. If used for security around federal facilities, we are all set with our own organic authorities to include other DHS components who could be brought in to augment FPS. Currently though, no DHS component has LE powers off of federal property unless the locals convey such authority. If your SAC ever sought about using DHS LEOs in that role, we would seek assistance in coordinating with the locals to get the appropriate legal authorities cross-designated to DHS.
    4. Funding for DHS support on non-federal property is the other issue requiring a funding solution to avoid an Anti-Deficiency Act (ADA) violation. Funding is a non-issue if DHS is kept to securing federal property.
  2. ICE:
    1. ICE has a standby Rapid Deployment Team of [REDACTED] on a [REDACTED] (b)(7)(E) at Benning, GA. If additional DHS ground forces were requested, we would launch this team first. USCG would be the transport provider. Once this team arrived in St. Louis, the aircraft could gas up and relaunch to Detroit to pick up the ICE team and return to St. Louis.
    2. Both teams in GA and MI are proactively working to get USMS deputization completed today. If this ICE contingency were utilized and the team(s) were employed off federal property, they would both need local authorities transferred as well. And there's the funding piece noted above for off federal property support.

FBI and DOJ forces along with other State/local agencies have the situation well in hand. That said, DHS OPS is offering contingencies.

1. Air surveillance: CBP/AMO can offer up [REDACTED] (b)(7)(E) and [REDACTED] (b)(7)(E) with [REDACTED] (b)(7)(E) capability. It will take these aircraft approximately [REDACTED] hours to get on scene from initial request (about [REDACTED] hours for pre-flight preps and about [REDACTED] hours flight time to St. Louis).
2. Ground Forces: In addition to funding limitations noted last evening and authorities issues
  1. FPS:
    1. Inside St. Louis, FPS will have [REDACTED] District Commander, [REDACTED] Area Commanders and [REDACTED] officers (total [REDACTED]). Within a [REDACTED] hour radius of St. Louis, FPS could call in an additional [REDACTED] officers for a maximum of [REDACTED] (b)(7)(E).
    2. FPS will also provide LNOs to the various command posts and EOC inside St. Louis for coordination.
    3. FPS was going to inquire with SAC on how to get local authorities/powers cross-designated to DHS LEOs if DHS LEOs were requested for support off of Federal property. If used for security around federal facilities, we are all set with our own organic authorities to include other DHS components who could be brought in to augment FPS. Currently though, no DHS component has LE powers off of federal property unless the locals convey such authority. If your SAC ever sought about using DHS LEOs in that role, we would seek assistance in coordinating with the locals to get the appropriate legal authorities cross-designated to DHS.
    4. Funding for DHS support on non-federal property is the other issue requiring a funding solution to avoid an Anti-Deficiency Act (ADA) violation. Funding is a non-issue if DHS is kept to securing federal property.
  2. ICE:
    1. ICE has a standby Rapid Deployment Team of [REDACTED] on a [REDACTED] (b)(7)(E) at Benning, GA. If additional DHS ground forces were requested, we would launch this team first. USCG would be the transport provider. Once this team arrived in St. Louis, the aircraft could gas up and relaunch to Detroit to pick up the ICE team and return to St. Louis.
    2. Both teams in GA and MI are proactively working to get USMS deputization completed today. If this ICE contingency were utilized and the team(s) were employed off federal property, they would both need local authorities transferred as well. And there's the funding piece noted above for off federal property support.

RFA REQUEST FOR CONTINGENCY PLANNING IN ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI

From DHS OPS:

BLUF: At this time for St. Louis, the FBI continues to plan on having adequate resources in the city and do not have plans on utilizing DHS contingency forces at this time. Therefore, DHS will only execute our contingency if something totally unexpected were to occur. At this point, there is a low probability that any DHS forces will be needed in St. Louis.

FBI and DOJ forces along with other State/local agencies have the situation well in hand. That said, DHS OPS is offering contingencies.

1. Air surveillance: CBP/AMO can offer up [REDACTED] (b)(7)(E) and [REDACTED] (b)(7)(E) with [REDACTED] (b)(7)(E) capability. It will take these aircraft approximately [REDACTED] hours to get on scene from initial request (about [REDACTED] hours for pre-flight preps and about [REDACTED] hours flight time to St. Louis).
2. Ground Forces: In addition to funding limitations noted last evening and authorities issues
  1. FPS:
    1. Inside St. Louis, FPS will have [REDACTED] District Commander, [REDACTED] Area Commanders and [REDACTED] officers (total [REDACTED]). Within a [REDACTED] hour radius of St. Louis, FPS could call in an additional [REDACTED] officers for a maximum of [REDACTED].
    2. FPS will also provide LNOs to the various command posts and EOC inside St. Louis for coordination.

3. FPS was going to inquire with SAC on how to get local authorities/powers cross-designated to DHS LEOs if DHS LEOs were requested for support off of Federal property. If used for security around federal facilities, we are all set with our own organic authorities to include other DHS components who could be brought in to augment FPS. Currently though, no DHS component has LE powers off of federal property unless the locals convey such authority. If your SAC ever sought about using DHS LEOs in that role, we would seek assistance in coordinating with the locals to get the appropriate legal authorities cross-designated to DHS.
  4. Funding for DHS support on non-federal property is the other issue requiring a funding solution to avoid an Anti-Deficiency Act (ADA) violation. Funding is a non-issue if DHS is kept to securing federal property.
2. ICE:
1. ICE has a standby Rapid Deployment Team of [REDACTED] on a [REDACTED] (b)(7)(E) at Benning, GA. If additional DHS ground forces were requested, we would launch this team first. USCG would be the transport provider. Once this team arrived in St. Louis, the aircraft could gas up and relaunch to Detroit to pick up the ICE team and return to St. Louis.
  2. Both teams in GA and MI are proactively working to get USMS deputization completed today. If this ICE contingency were utilized and the team(s) were employed off federal property, they would both need local authorities transferred as well. And there's the funding piece noted above for off federal property support.
3. USCG
1. USCG can transport the ICE team(s) as noted above.

Michael H. Simon, District Judge.

“Open government has been a hallmark of our democracy since our nation’s founding.” Leigh v. Salazar, 677 F.3d 892, 897 (9th Cir. 2012). “When wrongdoing is underway, officials have great incentive to blindfold the watchful eyes of the Fourth Estate.” Id. at 900. “The free press is the guardian of the public interest, and the independent judiciary is the guardian of the free press.” Id. This lawsuit tests whether these principles are merely hollow words.

Plaintiffs Index Newspapers LLC doing business as Portland Mercury, Doug Brown, Brian Conley, Sam Gehrke, Mathieu Lewis-Rolland, Kat Mahoney, Sergio Olmos, John Rudoff, Alex Milan Tracy, Tuck Woodstock, and Justin Yau (collectively, “Plaintiffs”) bring this putative class action against: (1) the City of Portland (the “City”); (2) numerous as-of-yet unnamed individual and supervisory officers of the Portland Police Bureau (“PPB”) and other agencies allegedly working in concert with the PPB; (3) the U.S. Department of Homeland Security (“DHS”); and (4) the U.S. Marshals Service (“USMS”). The Court refers to DHS and USMS collectively as the “Federal Defendants.” Plaintiffs are journalists and authorized legal observers. They allege violations of the First and Fourth Amendments of the United States Constitution and Article I, sections 8 and 26 of the Oregon Constitution. Plaintiffs seek declaratory and injunctive relief and money damages.

Before the Court is Plaintiffs' motion for preliminary injunction against the Federal Defendants. Plaintiffs allege that agents of the Federal Defendants from around the United States, specially deployed to Portland, Oregon to protect the federal courthouse, have repeatedly targeted and used physical force against journalists and authorized legal observers who have been documenting the daily Black Lives Matter protests in this city. These federal agents include special tactical units from U.S. Customs and Border Protection under the U.S. Department of Homeland Security ("BORTAC") and other special tactical units from the U.S. Marshals Service under the U.S. Department of Justice ("Special Operations Group" or "SOG").

Although these federal agents are highly trained in some areas of law enforcement, Plaintiffs contend that neither these agents nor their commanders have any special training or experience in civilian crowd control. Plaintiffs allege that some of these officers have intentionally targeted and used physical force and other forms of intimidation against journalists and authorized legal observers for the purpose of preventing or deterring them from observing and reporting on unreasonably aggressive treatment of lawful protesters. In response, the Federal Defendants argue that they are merely protecting the federal courthouse and its personnel from potential or actual violence and that any interference with protected First Amendment activity is merely incidental.

The Ninth Circuit has stated:

Demonstrations can be expected when the government acts in highly controversial ways, or other events occur that excite or arouse the passions of the citizenry. The more controversial the occurrence, the more likely people are to demonstrate. Some of these demonstrations may become violent. The courts have held that the proper response to potential and actual violence is for the government to ensure an adequate police presence and to arrest those who actually engage in such conduct, rather than to suppress legitimate First Amendment conduct as a prophylactic measure.

Collins v. Jordan, 110 F.3d 1363, 1372 (9th Cir. 1996) (citation omitted). Here, the actions of the Federal Defendants, or at least some of their officers, prevent, deter, or otherwise chill the constitutionally protected newsgathering, documenting, and observing work of journalists and authorized legal observers, who peacefully stand or walk on city streets and sidewalks during a protest. As further explained by the Ninth Circuit in Collins:

It has been clearly established since time immemorial that city streets and sidewalks are public fora. Restrictions on First Amendment activities in public fora are subject to a particularly high degree of scrutiny.

Id. at 1371 (citations and quotation marks omitted).

The Federal Defendants also argue that Plaintiffs are seeking special protections for journalists and legal observers under the First Amendment but that journalists and legal observers are entitled to no greater rights than those afforded to the public generally. In support, the Federal Defendants cite Branzburg v. Hayes, 408 U.S. 665, 680-82 (1972), which held that although the First Amendment protects news gathering, it does not provide a reporter's privilege against testifying before a grand jury. In that case, the Supreme Court noted: "It has generally been held that the First Amendment does not guarantee the press a constitutional right of special access to information not available to the public generally." Id. at 684; see also Cal. First Amendment Coal. v. Calderon, 150 F.3d 976, 981 (9th Cir. 1998) (same). The Federal

Defendants argue, in essence, that Plaintiffs' requested preliminary injunction violates the traditional "nondiscrimination" interpretation of the First Amendment's Press Clause.<sup>1</sup>

At first glance, one might think that the journalists and legal observers here are seeking protection against having to comply with an otherwise lawful order to disperse from city streets after a riot has been declared, when the public generally does not have that protection. When local law enforcement lawfully declares a riot and orders people to disperse from city streets, generally they must comply or risk arrest. The question of whether journalists have any greater rights than the public generally, however, is not actually presented in the pending motion for preliminary injunction. That is because the Federal Defendants are not asserting that they have the legal authority to declare a riot and order persons to disperse from the city streets in Portland; nor does the authority they cite for their presence and actions in Portland so provide.<sup>2</sup> It is only

<sup>2</sup> The Federal Defendants cite 40 U.S.C. § 1315 and its implementing regulations. That statute authorizes DHS to "protect the buildings, grounds, and property that are owned, occupied, or secured by the Federal Government." § 1315(a). The governing regulations prohibit, as relevant here: (1) disorderly conduct for persons "entering in or on Federal property," 41 C.F.R. § 102-74.390; (2) persons "entering in or on Federal property" from improperly disposing of rubbish on property, willfully damaging property, creating a hazard on property, or throwing articles at a building or climbing on any part of a building, 41 C.F.R. § 102-74.380; and (3) requiring that "[p]ersons in and on property" must obey "the lawful direction of federal police officers and other authorized individuals." 41 C.F.R. § 102-74.385. This latter regulation, although not specifically stating on "federal" property, has been construed as including this requirement, that the persons be on federal property. See United States v. Baldwin, 745 F.3d 1027, 1029 (10th Cir. 2014) (then-Circuit Judge, now Justice Gorsuch) ("The first says '[p]ersons in and on [Federal] property must at all times comply . . . with the lawful direction of Federal police officers and other authorized individuals.'" (alterations in original) (quoting 41 state and local law enforcement that may lawfully issue an order declaring a riot or unlawful assembly on city streets. That is simply part of a state or city's traditional police power.

Here, Plaintiffs and the City have already stipulated to a preliminary injunction that provides that the Portland Police will not arrest any journalist or authorized legal observer for failing to obey a lawful order to disperse. Thus, the question of whether an otherwise peaceful and law-abiding journalist or authorized legal observer has a First Amendment right not to disperse when faced with a general dispersal order issued by state or local authorities does not arise in this motion.<sup>3</sup>

C.F.R. § 102-74.385); see also United States v. Estrada-Iglesias, 425 F. Supp. 3d 1265, 1270 (D. Nev. 2019). Thus, 40 U.S.C. § 1315 and its regulations give federal officers broad authority on federal property. They do not, however, give federal officers broad authority off federal property. The authority granted off federal property is limited—to perform authorized duties “outside the property to the extent necessary to protect the property and persons on the property.” § 1315(b)(1). These authorized duties include enforcing federal laws (which as relevant here are laws limited to persons on federal property), making arrests if federal crimes are committed in the presence of an officer, and conducting investigations on and off the property for crimes against the property or persons on the property. § 1315(b)(2). None of these powers include declaring a riot or an unlawful assembly on the streets of Portland, closing the streets of Portland, or otherwise dispersing people off the streets of Portland (versus dispersing people off federal property).

The Federal Defendants appear to acknowledge this limitation in their powers. DHS Operation Diligent Valor commander Gabriel Russell states in his declaration that in response to violent protests, Federal Protective Services (“FPS”) officers warned protesters to “stay off federal property,” used tear gas to “push protesters back from the [federal] courthouse,” contacted the PPB who were about to declare an unlawful assembly, the Portland Police “arrived and closed all roads in the vicinity of the facilities[,] . . . declared an unlawful assembly and began making arrests for failure to disperse,” and the FPS only “made dispersal orders on federal property and cleared persons refusing to comply with these orders.” ECF 67-1 at 2. He also testified at deposition that generally FPS does not have authority to enforce a dispersal order against an unlawful assembly on Fourth Street, one block from the federal courthouse. ECF 136-1 at 22 (63:12-18). The Federal Defendants also cite to statutes and regulations that authorize the USMS to protect federal courthouses and other federal property, including 28 U.S.C. § 566(a), 28 U.S.C. § 566(i), 28 C.F.R. § 0.111(f). As with the statutes and regulations governing DHS’s authority, these authorities focus on federal property, not on city streets or state or local property.

<sup>3</sup> Someday, a court may need to decide whether the First Amendment protects journalists and authorized legal observers, as distinct from the public generally, from having to comply with Plaintiffs and the Federal Defendants have stipulated that an evidentiary hearing with live witness testimony is unnecessary and that the Court may base its decision on the written record and oral argument of counsel. For the reasons that follow, the Court GRANTS Plaintiffs' motion for preliminary injunction against the Federal Defendants.

STANDARDS

A preliminary injunction is an “extraordinary remedy that may only be awarded upon a clear showing that the plaintiff is entitled to such relief.” Winter v. Nat. Res. Defense Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 22 (2008). A plaintiff seeking a preliminary injunction generally must show that: (1) he or she is likely to succeed on the merits; (2) he or she is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief; (3) the balance of equities tips in his or her favor; and (4) that an injunction is in the public interest. Id. at 20 (rejecting the Ninth Circuit’s earlier rule that the mere “possibility” of irreparable harm, as opposed to its likelihood, was sufficient, in some circumstances, to justify a preliminary injunction).

The Supreme Court’s decision in Winter, however, did not disturb the Ninth Circuit’s alternative “serious questions” test. See All. for the Wild Rockies v. Cottrell, 632 F.3d 1127, 1131-32 (9th Cir. 2011). Under this test, “‘serious questions going to the merits’ and a hardship balance that tips sharply toward the plaintiff can support issuance of an injunction, assuming the other two elements of the Winter test are also met.” Id. at 1132. Thus, a preliminary injunction may be granted “if there is a likelihood of irreparable injury to plaintiff; there are serious questions going to the merits; the balance of hardships tips sharply in favor of the plaintiff; and the injunction is in the public interest.” M.R. v. Dreyfus, 697 F.3d 706, 725 (9th Cir. 2012).

an otherwise lawful order to disperse from city streets when journalists and legal observers seek to observe, document, and report the conduct of law enforcement personnel; but today is not that day.

BACKGROUND

A. Procedural History

Plaintiffs filed their original Complaint against the City on June 28, 2020. On June 30th, Plaintiffs moved for a TRO. On July 2nd, the Court entered a TRO against the City. On July 14th, Plaintiffs moved to file a Second Amended Complaint (“SAC”), adding the Federal Defendants to this lawsuit. On July 16th, the Court entered a stipulated preliminary injunction against the City. On July 17th, the Court granted Plaintiffs’ motion to file the SAC. Later that day, Plaintiffs filed their SAC and moved for a TRO against the Federal Defendants, which the City supported shortly thereafter. On July 23rd, the Court granted Plaintiffs’ motion for a TRO against the Federal Defendants, including many of the same terms contained in the TRO and stipulated preliminary injunction entered against the City. The TRO against the Federal Defendants was set to expire by its own terms on August 6th. On July 28th, Plaintiffs moved for a finding of contempt and imposition of sanctions against the Federal Defendants, alleging several violations of the Court’s TRO. On July 30th the Federal Defendants moved for reconsideration of the TRO, requesting that it be dissolved. On July 31st the Court stayed briefing on Plaintiffs’ contempt motion. On August 4th, Plaintiffs moved to extend the TRO against the Federal Defendants for an additional 14 days. On August 6th, after finding good cause, the Court granted Plaintiffs’ motion and extended the TRO against the Federal Defendants through August 20th and denied the Federal Defendants’ motion for reconsideration.

C. Plaintiffs’ Alleged Harm

Plaintiffs and other declarants have provided numerous declarations describing events in which they assert that employees, agents, or officers of the Federal Defendants targeted journalists and legal observers and interfered with their ability to engage in First Amendment-protected activities. As discussed below, Plaintiffs provide many compelling examples in the record, some from before the Court entered the TRO against the Federal Defendants and some after. The following are just several examples selected by the Court from the extensive evidence provided by Plaintiffs. There are more.

1. Before the TRO was Issued

On July 15, 2020, Plaintiff Justin Yau asserts that, while carrying photojournalist gear and wearing reflective, professional-looking clothing clearly identifying him as press, he was targeted by a federal agent and had a tear gas canister shot directly at him. ECF 56, ¶¶ 3-6. Two burning fragments of the canister hit him. Id. ¶ 6. At the time he was fired upon, he was taking pictures with his camera and recording with his cell phone while standing 40 feet away from protesters to make it clear that he was not part of the protests. Id. ¶ 5. Mr. Yau notes that from his experience covering protests in Hong Kong, “Even Hong Kong police, however, were generally conscientious about differentiating between press and protesters—as opposed to police and federal agents in Portland.” Id. ¶ 7.

Declarant Noah Berger has been a photojournalist for more than 25 years. ECF 72, ¶ 1. He has been published nationally and internationally, including for coverage of protests in San Francisco and Oakland. Id. On July 19, 2020, he covered the protests on assignment for the Associated Press. He notes that the response he has seen and documented from the federal agents in Portland is markedly different from even the most explosive protests he has covered. Id. ¶ 3. He carries two large professional cameras and two press passes. Id. He states that without any warning he was shot twice by federal agents using less lethal munitions. Id. ¶ 4. Later, as federal agents “rushed” an area he was photographing, he held up his press pass, identified himself as press, stated he was leaving, and moved away from the area. Id. ¶ 7. While holding his press pass and identifying himself as press, he was hit with a baton by one federal agent. Id. ¶ 8. Two others joined and surrounded him, and he was hit with batons three or four times. Id. One agent then deployed pepper spray against Mr. Berger from about one foot away. Id. ¶ 9. He was given no warning. Id. ¶ 11. He states that he was not demonstrating or protesting, was leaving the area, and was clearly acting as a journalist. Id. ¶¶ 3, 11.

Late July 19th or early July 20th, Declarant Nathan Howard, a photojournalist who has been published in Willamette Week, Mother Jones, Bloomberg Images, Reuters, and the Associated Press, was covering the Portland protests. ECF 58, ¶¶ 1, 4. He was standing by other journalists, and no protesters, as federal agents went by. Id. ¶ 4. The nearest protester was a block away. Id. Mr. Howard held up his press pass and repeatedly identified himself as press. Id. ¶ 5. A federal agent stated words to the effect of “okay, okay, stay where you are, don’t come closer.” Id. ¶ 6. Mr. Howard states that another federal agent, who was standing immediately to the left of the agent who gave Mr. Howard the “okay,” aimed directly at Mr. Howard and fired at least two pepper balls at him at close range. Id. ¶ 7.

Declarant Jungho Kim is a photojournalist whose work has been published in the San Francisco Chronicle and CalMatters, among others. ECF 62, ¶ 1. He wears a neon yellow vest marked “PRESS” and a white helmet marked “PRESS” in the front and rear. Id. ¶ 2. He has covered protests in Hong Kong and California. He has experience with staying out of the way of officers and with distinguishing himself from a protester, such as by not chanting or participating in protest activity. Id. ¶ 3. He had never been shot at by authorities until covering the Portland protests on July 19, 2020. Id. During the protest, federal agents pushed protesters away from the area where Mr. Kim was recording. He was around 30 feet away from federal agents, standing still, taking pictures, with no one around him. Id. ¶¶ 5-7. He asserts that suddenly and without warning, he was shot in the chest just below his heart with a less lethal munition. Id. ¶ 7. Because he was wearing a ballistic vest, he was uninjured. He also witnessed, and photographed, federal agents firing munitions into a group of press and legal observers. Id. ¶ 9.

Declarant Nate Haberman-Ducey is a law student at Lewis and Clark Law School.

ECF 61, ¶ 1. He completed training with the National Lawyers Guild (“NLG”) and attended the protests several times as a legal observer. Id. He states that on July 19, 2020, while wearing his green, NLG-issued authorized legal observer hat, he was shot in the hand with a paint-marking round by a federal agent, while walking his bicycle through the park across from the federal courthouse. Id. ¶¶ 3-4. At the time, there were no other protestors or other people around Mr. Haberman-Ducey at whom the federal agent might have been aiming. Id. ¶ 5. The pain from injury to Mr. Haberman-Ducey’s right hand was so severe that he had to stop observing the protests and go to the emergency room, where doctors put his broken hand in a splint. Id. ¶¶ 7-8. He would like to keep observing the protests but is concerned that residue from tear gas fired by the federal agents will contaminate his splint, which he has to wear for four to six weeks. Id. ¶ 9.

Declarant Amy Katz is a photojournalist whose work has been published in the Wall Street Journal, the New York Daily News, the Guardian, TIME, Mother Jones, the Independent, the New York Times, and has been featured on Good Morning America and ABC News.

ECF 117, ¶ 1. While covering the protests, she wears a hat and tank top marked with “PRESS” in bold letters and carries a camera with a telephoto lens. Id. ¶ 2. Early in the morning of July 21st, she was filming from the side while federal agents dispersed protestors. Id. ¶ 4-6. Several agents tried to disperse her, but she displayed her press pass and they left her alone. Id. ¶ 6. She asserts that a federal agent approached and motioned for her to disperse again a few minutes later. Id. ¶ 7. Ms. Katz again held up her press pass, but before she could process what was happening another agent fired pepper balls or similar munitions at her. Id. The first agent then dropped a tear gas grenade directly at her feet as Ms. Katz ran away, yelling that she was press. Id. She notes that there were no protestors the agents could have been aiming at because the protestors had already dispersed. Id. ¶ 8. The effects of the tear gas forced her to stop reporting and return to her hotel. Id. ¶ 9. The next day her eyes and lips burned, sunlight hurt her eyes, her tongue was swollen, and she had diarrhea. Id.

Declarant Sarah Jeong is an attorney, a columnist for The Verge, and a contributing writer to the New York Times Opinion section. ECF 116, ¶ 1. She attended the protests solely as a journalist, wore her press badge, and wore a helmet with “PRESS” in black letters on a white background on three sides. Id. ¶ 4. On the night of July 21st, Ms. Jeong was covering the protests from the steps of the courthouse when federal agents emerged from the building and charged the crowd. Id. ¶ 5. Ms. Jeong walked slowly backward, holding her press pass up in one hand and her phone in the other. Id. ¶ 6. With no warning and for no apparent reason, a federal agent shoved Ms. Jeong so forcefully that both her feet left the ground. Id. ¶ 7. She kept reporting that night but left much earlier than she had planned. Id. ¶ 8. Although she plans to keep covering the protests, she is fearful for her safety. Id.

Declarant James Comstock is a legal observer with the NLG. ECF 63, ¶ 1. On July 19th, a few minutes before midnight, he was watching the protests from the park across the street from the protests. Id. ¶ 2-3. He was wearing the standard NLG-issued green hat provided to legal observers. Id. ¶ 2. As protestors started to push the fence, he put on his gas mask and started to move away from the courthouse because he did not want to get tear gassed. Id. ¶ 3. He stopped on the opposite side of 4th Avenue, about 375 feet away from the front door of the courthouse. Id. He went to speak to a press member standing on the intersection of SW 4th and Main. Id. ¶ 4. After finishing his conversation with the press member, Mr. Comstock was standing in the same location alone with his back up against the wall. Id. Without warning, a federal agent shot Mr. Comstock in the hand with an impact munition while he was making notes on his phone. Id. ¶ 5.

There were no protestors around and he was at least 6 feet from the reporter with whom he had just been speaking. Id. ¶ 6. Mr. Comstock states that he would like to keep attending the protests as a legal observer but that he is afraid of injury and fearful that he will be wrongfully arrested, endangering his job as a criminal defense investigator. Id. ¶¶ 8-9.

Early morning on July 22nd, Plaintiff Alex Milan Tracy was standing in the street and filming a group of federal officers who were standing on the sidewalk in front of the courthouse. ECF 74, Id. ¶ 4. Two of the officers from that group waved their batons at him and gestured for him to move back. Id. He retreated, and one of the officers briefly charged at him. Mr. Tracy then moved back farther into the middle of the street. Id. A few minutes later, he was filming the same group of federal officers from the same spot in the middle of the street. Id. ¶ 6. Agents from that same group raised their weapons and launched a flashbang at Mr. Tracy and another journalist, hitting them both. Id. ¶ 7. Mr. Tracy continued documenting the scene but finally left because the federal officers kept looking and pointing directly at him. Id. ¶¶ 7, 10. He was “genuinely terrified” of standing in front of the federal officers. Id. ¶ 10.

2. After the TRO was Issued

Plaintiff Brian Conley has worked in war zones such as Iraq, Afghanistan, Libya, and Burundi. ECF 87, ¶ 1. He also has covered protests for many years in places such as Beijing, New York, Washington, D.C., Miami, Quebec City, and Oaxaca, Mexico. Id. He has encountered agents of the Federal Defendants in Portland on multiple days. At all times he was wearing a photographer’s vest with “PRESS” written on it and a helmet that said “PRESS” in large block letters across the front. Id. ¶ 2. He was also carrying a large camera with an attached LED light and telephoto lens. Id.

Early in the morning of July 24th, Mr. Conley filmed federal agents seizing a woman who was dancing with flowers in front of the officers. Id. ¶ 3-4. At that point, the crowd was mostly press and a few individual protestors. Id. ¶ 3. Federal agents launched tear gas into the streets, and Mr. Conley yelled that he was press to avoid being further tear gassed. Id. ¶ 6. Mr. Conley was then shot with impact munitions in the chest and foot. Id. ¶ 7. Video of this event shows that the situation grew tense as a protester attempted to interfere with the agents' seizure of the woman. As the agents finalized the seizure of the woman and the interfering protester and retreated into the federal courthouse with the woman and the interfering protester, they laid sweeping cover fire into the remaining crowd, which included Mr. Conley and other press members, even though no protester was near Mr. Conley at the time. After the officers were safely within the building, Mr. Conley continued recording. The video shows that Mr. Conley was outside next to another photographer. A medic and his protector were behind a shield on one side several yards away and a protester yelling taunts was on the other side several yards away. As Mr. Conley was filming, a federal agent on the other side of the courthouse fence shone a bright light at Mr. Conley. Shortly thereafter, without warning, a federal agent shot a tear gas canister above Mr. Conley's head. Mr. Conley also describes this in his declaration. Id. ¶ 9.

Mr. Conley took the next two nights off and returned to cover the protests the night of July 27th. Id. ¶¶ 17, 18. He was documenting a line of federal agents advancing on a group of six protestors with shields who were standing behind him. Id. ¶ 18. He yelled that he was press, but the federal agents unleashed a barrage of munitions at him. Id. ¶ 19. He moved to the side, away from the protestors, and continued to yell that he was press. Id. ¶ 20. The federal agents briefly stopped firing, one shone a flashlight at him, and resumed fire directly at him, striking him multiple times—although by this point there was nobody else near him. Id. Another federal agent threw a flashbang grenade directly at him. Id. Mr. Conley could “barely walk” after the events of July 27-28. Id. ¶ 25.

Mr. Conley was covering the protests again just before midnight on July 29th. ECF 115, ¶ 4. He had replaced the “PRESS” lettering on his helmet because the concussion and flashbang grenades thrown at him the night before had blown off one of the letters. Id. ¶ 2. He was filming federal agents on SW Salmon Street between SW 2nd and SW 3rd Avenue. Id. ¶ 4. There was one other photographer between him and the small group of agents. Id. One of the agents shone a light on Mr. Conley and fired a munition just beside him. Id. Another federal agent with an assault rifle approached Mr. Conley and told him to stay on the sidewalk. Id. ¶ 5. Later that night, without warning, federal agents pepper sprayed Mr. Conley at point blank range. Id. ¶ 6. Video of this event shows that while Mr. Conley was filming a line of federal officers moving down the street pepper spraying peaceful protesters, including spraying a woman in the face at point blank range who was on her knees with her hands up in the middle of the street, an officer pepper sprayed Mr. Conley at point blank range along with indiscriminately pepper spraying other press and the protesters. Mr. Conley states that he fears for his safety but plans to keep covering the protests because he believes “it is critically important to do so.” Id. ¶ 11.

Declarant Amy Katz again covered the protests on the early morning of July 27th. ECF 117, ¶ 10. She witnessed a federal agent push a man down a flight of stairs while arresting him and photographed the incident. Id. An agent physically blocked her and tried to stop her from photographing the arrest. Id. When she stepped to the side to get another angle, the federal agent physically shoved her away. Id. Later that night, she approached a group of federal officers with a group of press, all of whom had their press badges up and their hands in the air. Id. ¶ 12. The video of this event shows that many of the group were calling out “press.” Ms. Katz describes that she and the group of press were at least 75 feet away from most of the protestors when federal agents bombarded their group with munitions, hitting her in the side and causing a large contusion. Id. The video shows the group of press moving together off to the far side of the sidewalk, holding their passes up along with cameras, shouting press and saying “hold your passes up.” The group is moving toward the federal officers, recording events, when they are fired upon with various munitions. Ms. Katz stopped covering the Portland protests after that incident because of how the federal agents treated her. Id. ¶ 15.

Declarant Rebecca Ellis is a staff reporter for Oregon Public Broadcasting (“OPB”). ECF 88, ¶ 1. She attended the protests the night of July 23rd wearing her OPB press pass, which shows her name, her photograph, and the OPB logo. Id. ¶ 2-3. Around 1:30 a.m. she was in a small group of press members filming federal agents exiting the federal courthouse. Id. ¶ 3. One agent fired a munition directly at her, hitting her in the hand. Id. Video of this incident shows that she is hit when agents advance in a group and fire multiple munitions. Ms. Ellis appears to be in the middle of the street when she is hit. There are also persons crossing in front of Ms. Ellis, who appear also to be press, at the time she is shot. It is unclear who is behind her when she is hit. Ten minutes later, however, federal agents forced her and other press to disperse from near the courthouse. Id. ¶ 5. One agent walked towards them shouting “MOVE, MOVE” and “WALK FASTER” in their faces while another agent kept pace next to him, holding his gun. Id. Video of this dispersal shows that it is directed at press, in an intimidating manner, despite a press person stating, “You can’t do that.” The video does not seem to support that the press were in the way or otherwise impeding law enforcement actions. Ms. Ellis states that the federal agents prevented her from doing her job and reporting on what was going on behind them. She intends to keep covering the protests but is fearful for her safety. Id. ¶ 6.

Declarant Kathryn Elsesser is a freelance photographer whose photographs of the Portland protests have been published by Bloomberg, CBS News, and Yahoo, among others, including many international publications. ECF 89, ¶ 1. She covered the protests the night of July 24th on assignment from a French news agency. Id. ¶ 2. She carried a large camera, wore a press pass from the American Society of Media Photographers, and wore a helmet with “PRESS” written in big letters across the front. Id. Around 2 a.m. on July 25th, Ms. Elsesser decided to end her coverage early because she did not have a bullet-proof vest and was afraid federal agents would hurt her. Id. ¶ 4. She was standing by herself, across the street from the courthouse, at the edge of the park. Id. There was nobody else near her. Id. A federal agent shot her in the arm with an impact munition as she was walking away. Id. ¶ 5. She believes that the federal agents targeted her because she was taking photographs. Id. ¶ 6. Ms. Elsesser states that she would refuse to cover the protests again unless she had a bullet-proof vest because she is afraid that federal agents will injure her or worse. Id. ¶ 13.

Declarant Emily Molli is a freelance photojournalist whose photographs have been published in the New York Times, the Wall Street Journal, the Guardian, ProPublica, and others. ECF 118, ¶ 1. She is experienced in covering civil unrest, riots, and other dangerous situations. She has reported on the protests in Hong Kong over the course of six months, the “Yellow Vests” in France over the course of a year, the Catalan independence movement, and the protests and riots in Greece. Id. ¶ 2. She understands the risk of getting hit by less lethal munitions while standing with protesters, but she objects to federal officers targeting press, which she states she has witnessed happening in Portland. Id. She wears a helmet with “PRESS” in big block letters and carries two press passes and a large professional-grade video camera. Id. ¶ 3. Early in the morning of July 27, 2020, after getting shot and injured when she had been approximately 75 yards from protesters, Ms. Molli decided to stick with a group of only journalists. Id. ¶¶ 7-8. The video of this event shows that they were holding their press passes up, mostly staying together as a group, and staying toward the side of a street that appears otherwise empty. Federal officers fired munitions at the group of journalists. Id. ¶ 8. On July 29, 2020 and into the early morning of July 30th, Ms. Molli recorded another encounter between journalists and federal officers on SW Main Street. Id. ¶ 10. Video of this event shows that there were numerous law enforcement personnel, several journalists, and no protesters on that section of the street. Journalists are taking pictures and video of a tear gas canister that had been fired by federal agents when a federal agent fires another tear gas round at the journalists. Ms. Molli intends to keep covering the protests, but she fears for her safety because she has seen the federal agents disobey a court order. Id. ¶ 11.

Declarant Daniel Hollis is a videographer for VICE News. ECF 91, ¶ 1. He has covered many chaotic and dangerous situations, including conflict zones in Iraq and Syria, former Taliban areas in Pakistan, child sex-trafficking raids in the Philippines, Iranian militias, gangs, mafia, domestic terrorism, and armed militias. Id. He covered the Portland protests for two nights. Id. ¶ 2. During the protests, he carried a VICE press pass and a helmet with “PRESS” on it in bright orange tape. Id. He also carried a large, professional video-recording camera. Id. On July 26th, Mr. Hollis was filming wide-angle footage of a mass of protestors in front of the courthouse. Id. ¶ 4. The people closest to him were press and legal observers—the nearest protestors were several yards behind him. Id. ¶ 7. He then turned to record a group of federal agents massed outside the courthouse. Id. ¶ 5. Almost immediately, the agents shot at him, striking him just to the left of his groin. Id. He turned to run away, and another munition hit him in the lower back. Id. ¶ 6. Video of this event shows that Mr. Hollis was positioned between the federal agents and those few protesters (not the mass of protesters who were around the building), but the video does not reflect any violent or riotous behavior by anyone near Mr.

Hollis. After the federal agents shot him, Mr. Hollis went back to his hotel. Id. ¶ 8. He states that he is more concerned for his personal safety than he was during the month he spent covering ISIS sleeper cells in Northern Syria. Id. ¶ 9. He states: “I have been around heavily armed soldiers, militias, and gangs countless times, but have never had weapons aimed or discharged directly at me. The federal agents I have seen in Portland have been less willing to distinguish between press and putative enemies than any armed combatants I have seen elsewhere.” Id.

Declarant Jonathan Levinson is an Oregon resident who lives in Portland. ECF 93, ¶ 1. He is a staff reporter for OPB. His work also has appeared on NPR and ESPN, and in the Washington Post, the Wall Street Journal, and Al Jazeera. Id. He has experience in conflict zones. He spent five years as an infantry officer in the U.S. Army, with two deployments to Iraq. Id. ¶ 2. As a reporter, he has covered the Libyan civil war and done work in Afghanistan, Yemen, Gaza, and the West Bank. Id. He has covered the Portland protests for a majority of the nights. When covering the protests, he wears his press pass issued by OPB, which contains his name, photograph, the OPB logo, and the word “MEDIA.” Id. ¶ 3. He also wears a helmet that says “PRESS” in large letters on the front and back and carries two professional cameras. Id. At around 1:00 a.m. on July 24th, the federal agents had cleared the area next to the courthouse so he decided to take pictures of the agents through the courthouse fence. Id. ¶ 4. There were very few protesters anywhere nearby. As he was trying to focus his professional camera, he could see a federal agent raise and aim his weapon and fire several rounds directly at Mr. Levinson. Id. ¶ 5. His camera and lens were covered in paint from the agent’s rounds. Mr. Levinson states that he intends to continue covering the protests because he believes they are of historic significance, but that he is fearful for his safety because within hours of the Court issuing its restraining order, he “saw federal agents brazenly violate it.” Id. ¶ 7.

Plaintiffs submitted two declarations from Mr. Gil Kerlikowske, whom the Court finds to be a qualified, credible, and persuasive expert witness. ECF 135, 145. Mr. Kerlikowske is a former Commissioner of U.S. Customs and Border Protection, and he was confirmed by the U.S. Senate. Mr. Kerlikowske also served as the Chief of Police in Seattle, Washington from 2000 through 2009, and the Police Commissioner in Buffalo, New York. He has worked in law enforcement for 47 years. He served in the United States Army and Military Police from 1970 through 1972, where he began training in crowd control, riots, and civil disturbances. He also has served as the Director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy and as Deputy Director of the U.S. Department of Justice, Office of Community Oriented Policing Services. He has been an IOP Fellow at Harvard Kennedy School of Government and teaches as a distinguished visiting fellow and professor of the Practice in Criminology and Criminal Justice at Northeastern University. During his tenure as Chief of Police in Seattle, Mr. Kerlikowske led and orchestrated the policing of hundreds of large and potentially volatile protests, many of which were considerably larger than the recent protests in Portland. He did the same thing when he was Police Commissioner in Buffalo. Mr. Kerlikowske has had substantial training and experience with crowd control and civil unrest in the context of protests, use of force in that context, and use of force generally.

<sup>4</sup> After oral argument, the Federal Defendants filed the Declaration of Chris A. Bishop, the "Acting Director/Deputy Director," for the U.S. Department of Homeland Security, U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP). ECF 152. The Federal Defendants offer this declaration as an expert rebuttal to the two declarations of Mr. Kerlikowske. Plaintiffs have moved to strike Mr. Bishop's declaration as untimely. ECF 154. The Court denies Plaintiffs' motion to strike. The Court finds the declaration of Mr. Kerlikowske to be more persuasive than the declaration of Mr. Bishop.

Plaintiffs asked Mr. Kerlikowske to evaluate whether the relief stated in the TRO against the Federal Defendants is both safe and workable from a law enforcement perspective, whether the force that federal authorities used against journalists and legal observer complainants was reasonable, and whether it is advisable to prominently mark federal agents with unique identifying letters or numbers. First, Mr. Kerlikowske opined that the prohibitions contained in the TRO are safe for law enforcement personnel. Defending the federal courthouse in Portland mainly involves establishing a perimeter around the building, and there is no reason to target or disperse journalists from that position. Additionally, to the extent officers leave federal property, the TRO is also safe for federal law enforcement officers, according to Mr. Kerlikowske.

Second, Mr. Kerlikowske stated his expert opinion that the TRO is workable. He states that trained and experienced law enforcement personnel are able to protect public safety without dispersing journalists and legal observers and can differentiate press from protesters, even in the heat of crowd control. He adds that any difficulties that may be faced by federal authorities arise from their lack of training, experience, and leadership with experience in civil disturbances and unrest.

Third, Mr. Kerlikowske explains that based on his review of the record evidence virtually all the injuries suffered by the complaining journalists were the result of improper use of force, including shooting people who were not engaged in threatening acts and misuse of crowd-control munitions by federal law enforcement personnel. For example, Mr. Kerlikowske opines that tear gas canisters and pepper balls should not be fired directly at people. He also opines that rubber bullets should not be shot above the waist, and certainly not near the head. He further opines that in these circumstances, it is inappropriate to shoot someone in the back because at that point they are not a threat.

Finally, Mr. Kerlikowske asserts that in his expert opinion a key duty and responsibility of law enforcement is to be properly and easily identifiable specific to the organization and the individual. He notes that if a decision is made to remove a name tag, it must be replaced with some other identifying label, badge, or shield number. Mr. Kerlikowske explains that such markings increase accountability and act as a check and deterrent against misconduct. He adds that camouflage uniforms are inappropriate for urban settings.

As noted, the Court finds Mr. Kerlikowske to be a well-qualified expert whose opinions are relevant, helpful, and persuasive.

E. The Situation Faced by Law Enforcement

After the killing of George Floyd on Memorial Day, there have been consistent protests against racial injustice and police brutality in Portland. ECF 67-1, Russell Decl. ¶ 3. The protesters generally are peaceful, particularly during the day and early evening. See ECF 113-3, Jones Decl. ¶ 7. Late at night, however, there are incidents of vandalism, destruction of property, looting, arson, and assault. ECF 67-1, ¶ 3. While protestors originally gathered outside the Justice Center (PPB headquarters), some protestors soon directed their attention to the Mark O. Hatfield Federal Courthouse, across the street from the Justice Center. After additional federal officers were deployed to Portland to support existing Federal Protective Service (“FPS”) and USMS personnel, the protests grew larger and more intense, and the federal courthouse became a focus of attention. Id. at ¶ 5.

In early July, a group of people broke the glass doors at the entryway of the federal courthouse. Id. Members of this group used accelerant and commercial fireworks in an apparent attempt to start a fire inside the courthouse. Id. On other nights in July, various objects were thrown at law enforcement, such as rocks, glass bottles, and frozen water bottles. Id. at ¶ 6; ECF 101-6, CBP NZ-1 Decl. ¶ 8. Assistant Director for the Tactical Operations Division of the USMS Andrew Smith describes the environment of the protests as “extremely chaotic and dynamic” and emphasizes that law enforcement must make split-second decisions. ECF 101-1, Smith Decl., ¶ 6. A DHS Public Affairs Specialist identified as CBP PAO #1 states that he observed a person holding a Molotov cocktail. ECF 101-2, ¶ 7. Officers have had to extinguish fires and flaming debris, some of which has been thrown over the fence in officers’ direction. See ECF 106-1, Smith Am. Decl. ¶ 15; ECF 101-3, FPS No. 824 Decl. ¶ 5.

The situation has been dangerous for federal agents, in addition to protesters, journalists, and legal observers. Gabriel Russell, FPS Regional Director for Region 10 and commander of DHS’s Rapid Deployment force for Operation Diligent Valor in Portland, notes that as of his declaration submitted on July 29th, 120 federal officers had experienced some kind of injury, including broken bones, hearing damage, eye damage, a dislocated shoulder, sprains, strains and contusions. ECF 101-5, ¶ 4. The Patrol Agent in Charge of Customs and Border Protection, U.S. Border Patrol, identified as CBP NZ-1, describes agents being hit with rocks and ball bearings from sling shots, improvised explosives, commercial grade aerial fireworks, high intensity lasers targeting officer’s eyes, thrown rocks, full and empty glass bottles, frozen water bottles, and balloons filled with paint and feces. ECF 101-6, ¶ 8. He notes that one officer was hit by a projectile that caused a wound that required multiple stitches and one officer was struck in the head and shoulder by a protester wielding a sledgehammer when the officer tried to prevent the protester from breaking down the courthouse door. Id. Another federal officer states that he has suffered numerous injuries during the protests, including being struck in the shins by tear gas canisters, suffering temporary hearing loss from commercial fireworks, and suffering temporary blindness from lasers. ECF 101-3, FPS No. 824 Decl. ¶ 6. The Federal Defendants do not assert that journalists or legal observers caused these injuries. See, e.g., ECF 136-3 at 10-11, CBP NZ-1 Dep. Tr. 72:10-73:1.

The Federal Defendants, however, do assert that some persons wearing the indicia of press have engaged in violent or unlawful behavior. Mr. Smith states that USMS personnel witnessed a person with a helmet marked “press” use a grinder to attempt to breach the fence surrounding the courthouse. ECF 106-1, ¶ 10. Another person wearing a press helmet entered courthouse property, either by climbing the perimeter fence or crossing when the fence was breached. Id. ¶ 11. A different person with press clothing helped a protestor climb the perimeter fence. Id. at ¶ 14. Mr. Smith also received a report that a staff member was kicked by someone wearing clothing marked “press.” Id. at ¶ 15.

Mr. Russell submitted links to several videos purporting to show improper conduct by persons with indicia of press. ECF 101-5, ¶ 8. The Court reviewed those videos and did not find persuasive evidence of any wrongdoing related to persons wearing indicia of press with two exceptions. The first are the videos of Mr. Brandon Paape, who admits that he is not press but is wearing clothing marked “press” because he was assaulted by federal agents and hoped wearing clothing that indicates he is press would protect him from further violence. Id. ¶ 8(e), (f). The videos, however, do not provide evidence that Mr. Paape did anything unlawful. He masqueraded as press for personal protection. Additionally, shortly thereafter, he posted on Twitter that he will no longer wear indicia of press. See ECF 123 at 12. The videos of Mr. Paape do show, however, that persons other than actual journalists have worn indicia of press. The second is the video of a person wearing a “press” helmet who entered courthouse property and encouraged others to join. ECF 101-5, ¶ 8(h). He states: “They can’t arrest us all.” This, however, is the same person from Mr. Smith’s photograph, ECF 106-1 ¶ 11 (Exhibits B and C).

The Federal Defendants also provide additional declarations describing further conduct. A man wearing a vest stating “press” threw a hard object toward police. ECF 101-3, FPS No. 824 Decl., ¶ 5. Another such person shielded from police a woman who was shining strobe lights into the eyes of an officer. Id. One person with handwritten markings reading “PRESS” directed a powerful flashlight at a law enforcement helicopter overhead but was not filming or taking photos or notes. ECF 101-2, CBP PAO #1 Decl. ¶ 9. A photo of this man depicts him standing very close to another man holding a camera. Id. It is unclear if the man with the powerful light was lighting for the cameraman or was masquerading as press to use light as a law enforcement irritant. Another federal officer states that on one occasion he witnessed persons wearing press indicia shield other persons who were throwing objects at law enforcement. ECF 101-4, FPS No. 882 Decl. ¶ 5. Finally, CBP PAO #1 notes that people self-identified as press are frequently in the midst of crowds near individuals breaking laws, which makes it difficult to disperse protestors without dispersing journalists as well. ECF 101-2, ¶ 12. The Federal Defendants also consistently note that press intermingle with protesters and stand by (or perhaps record) when protesters engage in purportedly wrongful conduct.

DISCUSSION

A. Standing

The Federal Defendants argue that Plaintiffs do not have standing to request injunctive relief. The Federal Defendants concede that “the standing inquiry is focused on the filing of the lawsuit” but then assert that standing must be proven at “successive stages of the litigation” and make the same standing arguments that they made during the TRO. In issuing the Temporary Restraining Order Enjoining Federal Defendants, the Court rejected the Federal Defendants’ arguments regarding standing and found that Plaintiffs had Article III standing. See Index Newspapers LLC v. City of Portland, --- F.3d ---, 2020 WL 4220820, at *4-5 (D. Or. July 23, 2020). To the extent the Federal Defendants request reconsideration of that decision, arguing that based on facts as they existed at the time of the filing of the Complaint Plaintiffs do not have standing, reconsideration is denied.<sup>5</sup> The Federal Defendants provide no compelling basis for the Court to modify its previous determination.

To the extent the Federal Defendants argue that Plaintiffs must continue to prove standing as this lawsuit continues and the facts evolve, the Federal Defendants misunderstand the doctrines of standing and mootness. Article III standing is evaluated by considering the facts as they existed at the time of the commencement of the action. See Friends of the Earth, Inc. v. Laidlaw Envtl. Servs. (TOC), Inc., 528 U.S. 167, 180 (2000) (noting that “we have an obligation to assure ourselves that FOE had Article III standing at the outset of the litigation”); Skaff v. Meridien N. Am. Beverly Hills, LLC, 506 F.3d 832, 838 (9th Cir. 2007) (“The existence of standing turns on the facts as they existed at the time the plaintiff filed the complaint.”).

Whether standing and the other requirements for a live case or controversy exists throughout the entirety of a case is considered under the doctrine of mootness. See Barry v. Lyon, 834 F.3d 706, 714 (6th Cir. 2016) (“To uphold the constitutional requirement that federal courts hear only active cases or controversies, as required by Article III, section 2 of the federal constitution, a plaintiff must have a personal interest at the commencement of the litigation (standing) that continues throughout the litigation (lack of mootness).”); Vasquez v. Los Angeles

<sup>5</sup> The Federal Defendants offer no authority for the notion that this Court must repeatedly litigate the same issue. The Federal Defendants are bound by the “law of the case” doctrine for determinations made by this Court, absent reconsideration or changed circumstances such as if new Plaintiffs were added who the Federal Defendants contended did not have standing. At any appeal stage of this litigation, however, “the standing requirement therefore must be met by persons seeking appellate review, just as it must be met by persons appearing in courts of first instance.” Virginia House of Delegates v. Bethune-Hill, 139 S. Ct. 1945, 1951 (2019) (simplified).

Cty., 487 F.3d 1246, 1253 (9th Cir. 2007) (noting that mootness is the doctrine under which courts ensure that “a live controversy [exists] at all stages of the litigation, not simply at the time plaintiff filed the complaint”); Becker v. Fed. Election Comm’n, 230 F.3d 381, 386 n.3 (1st Cir. 2000) (noting that Lujan “clearly indicat[es] that standing is to be ‘assessed under the facts existing when the complaint is filed’” and that evaluating standing thereafter “conflates questions of standing with questions of mootness: while it is true that a plaintiff must have a personal interest at stake throughout the litigation of a case, such interest is to be assessed under the rubric of standing at the commencement of the case, and under the rubric of mootness thereafter”); McFalls v. Purdue, 2018 WL 785866, at *8-10 (D. Or. Feb. 8, 2018) (discussing the difference between standing and mootness). Therefore, the Federal Defendants’ arguments that Plaintiffs must demonstrate standing at “all stages of the litigation,” fail to do so now, and thus fail to present a case or controversy are more appropriately raised under the doctrine of mootness, to which the Court now turns. See, e.g., Barry, 834 F.3d at 714; Vasquez, 487 F.3d at 1253; Becker, 230 F.3d at 386 n.3; Tellis v. LeBlanc, 2020 WL 1249378, at *5 (W.D. La. Mar. 13, 2020); Rhone v. Med. Bus. Bureau, LLC, 2019 WL 2568539, at *3 (N.D. Ill. June 21, 2019); Fancaster, Inc. v. Comcast Corp., 2012 WL 815124, at *5 (D.N.J. Mar. 9, 2012).

B. Mootness

The Federal Defendants do not specifically argue that Plaintiffs’ claims are moot based on any new facts or circumstances. Because the Federal Defendants appear to argue that Plaintiffs now lack standing based on changed circumstances, the Court considers whether the Federal Defendants’ voluntary change in enforcement tactics moots Plaintiffs’ claims. The augmented force of federal enforcement officers currently remain in Portland, ready to deploy whenever ordered, but have recently deployed only in limited circumstances and have not recently engaged in the crowd control tactics that supported the Court's original TRO in this case.

For a short time, the Oregon State Police took the lead in enforcing crowd control in Portland. That appears to have ended, and the Portland Police have now resumed performing that role. The out-of-town agents and officers of the Federal Defendants who have been deployed to Portland, however, and whose actions were the basis of the Court's TRO, remain in Portland. Further, they have no scheduled date of departure.

To determine mootness, "the question is not whether the precise relief sought at the time the application for an injunction was filed is still available. The question is whether there can be any effective relief." Nw. Envtl. Def. Ctr. v. Gordon, 849 F.2d 1241, 1244-45 (9th Cir. 1988) (emphasis in original) (quoting Garcia v. Lawn, 805 F.2d 1400, 1403 (9th Cir. 1986)). If a course of action is mostly completed but modifications can be made that could alleviate the harm suffered by the plaintiff's injury, the issue is not moot. Tyler v. Cuomo, 236 F.3d 1124, 1137 (9th Cir. 2000). A case becomes moot "only when it is impossible for a court to grant any effectual relief whatever to the prevailing party." Chafin v. Chafin, 568 U.S. 165, 172 (2013) (quotation marks omitted). The party alleging mootness bears a "heavy burden" to establish that a court can provide no effective relief. Karuk Tribe of Cal. v. U.S. Forest Serv., 681 F.3d 1006, 1017 (9th Cir. 2012) (quoting Forest Guardians v. Johanns, 450 F.3d 455, 461 (9th Cir. 2006)).

Further, voluntary cessation of conduct moots a claim only in limited and narrow circumstances. As explained by the Supreme Court:

The test for mootness in cases such as this is a stringent one. Mere voluntary cessation of allegedly illegal conduct does not moot a case; if it did, the courts would be compelled to leave the defendant free to return to his old ways. A case might become moot if subsequent events made it absolutely clear that the allegedly wrongful behavior could not reasonably be expected to recur. Of course it is still open to appellees to show, on remand, that the likelihood of further violations is sufficiently remote to make injunctive relief unnecessary. This is a matter for the trial judge. But this case is not technically moot, an appeal has been properly taken, and we have no choice but to decide it.

City of Mesquite v. Aladdin's Castle, Inc., 455 U.S. 283, 289 n.10 (1982) (simplified); see also F.T.C. v. Affordable Media, 179 F.3d 1228, 1238 (9th Cir. 1999) (“A case may become moot as a result of voluntary cessation of wrongful conduct only if ‘interim relief or events have completely and irrevocably eradicated the effects of the alleged violation.’” (quoting Lindquist v. Idaho State Bd. of Corr., 776 F.2d 851, 854 (9th Cir. 1985))). The Ninth Circuit has noted that “an executive action that is not governed by any clear or codified procedures cannot moot a claim.” McCormack v. Herzog, 788 F.3d 1017, 1025 (9th Cir. 2015). The Ninth Circuit also advises courts to be “less inclined to find mootness where the new policy could be easily abandoned or altered in the future.” Rosebrock v. Mathis, 745 F.3d 963, 972 (9th Cir. 2014) (simplified).

The Federal Defendants’ voluntary change in enforcement tactics does not moot Plaintiffs’ claims. There remains effective relief that the Court can provide for Plaintiffs. Further, the change in enforcement tactics is not part of any clear or codified procedures. It could easily be abandoned or altered in the future. Indeed, the Federal Defendants have stated that they specifically intend to abandon or alter in the future the current posture and become actively involved again if local police do not perform in a manner acceptable to the Federal Defendants or are otherwise unable to secure the federal courthouse in Portland in a manner acceptable to the Federal Defendants.<sup>6</sup> Whether this current and potentially temporary change in enforcement tactics affects Plaintiffs’ likelihood of irreparable harm is addressed in Section D.2 below.

C. Factors for Preliminary Injunctive Relief

1. Likelihood of Success on the Merits

Plaintiffs allege both First Amendment retaliation and a violation of their First Amendment right of access.<sup>7</sup> Plaintiffs must show a likelihood of success on the merits (or at least substantial questions going to the merits) on at least one of these two claims. Plaintiffs satisfy this requirement.

a. First Amendment Retaliation

To establish a claim of First Amendment retaliation, Plaintiffs must show that: (1) they were engaged in a constitutionally protected activity; (2) the Federal Defendants' actions would chill a person of ordinary firmness from continuing to engage in the protected activity; and enforcement efforts will continue or whether those efforts will sufficiently protect federal property” and providing a nearly identical response in denying a request for admission that USMS would not engage with journalists or legal observers at a Portland protest); ECF 147-2 at 3 (USMS responding to an interrogatory regarding its plans to remove the additional support personnel sent to Portland: “With respect to the withdrawal of additional personnel deployed to Portland, their withdrawal will depend on unknown future circumstances in Portland and presence of any threat to the federal judiciary or property.”); ECF 147-3 at 3 (DHS providing nearly identical responses to the similar Requests for Admission); ECF 147-4 at 4 (DHS responding that the “cessation of Operation Diligent Valor will depend on unknown future circumstances in Portland. . . . The other DHS officers and agents deployed to Portland to assist FPS in the protection of the Hatfield U.S. Courthouse and federal facilities in Portland will remain in Portland until the Department makes an operational security determination that their presence is no longer required to protect federal facilities there.”); ECF 147-4 at 3 (DHS affirming as truthful the statements in the press release filed with the Court in ECF 124-1, including the statement from Acting Secretary Chad Wolf that “the increased federal presence in Portland will remain until [DHS] is certain the federal property is safe and a change in posture will not hinder DHS’s Congressionally mandated duty to protect it. While the violence in Portland is much improved, the situation remains dynamic and volatile, with acts of violence still ongoing, and no determination of timetables for reduction of protective forces has yet been made. Evaluations remain ongoing.”).

<sup>7</sup> Plaintiffs also allege claims under the Fourth Amendment and Oregon’s state Constitution, but did not argue those claims in their motion for preliminary injunction. Thus, the Court only considers Plaintiffs’ likelihood of success on their First Amendment claims.

(3) the protected activity was a substantial or motivating factor in the Federal Defendants' conduct. Pinard v. Clatskanie Sch. Dist. 6J, 467 F.3d 755, 770 (9th Cir. 2006). For the first factor, Plaintiffs have shown that they are engaged in constitutionally protected activity under the First Amendment. Plaintiffs are engaged in newsgathering, documenting, and recording government conduct. See, e.g., Leigh, 677 F.3d at 898 (recognizing First Amendment protection for "the press and public to observe government activities"); United States v. Sherman, 581 F.2d 1358, 1360 (9th Cir. 1978) (noting that the "ability to gather the news" is "clearly within the ambit of the First Amendment"). The Federal Defendants do not dispute this factor.

Regarding the second factor, the Federal Defendants argue that Plaintiffs' assertion that they intend to continue to cover the protests in Portland or that they have a continuing fear of future physical force or threat by the Federal Defendants is subjective and insufficient. The Court rejects that argument. The enforcement tactics of the Federal Defendants would chill a person of ordinary firmness from continuing to engage in the protected activity. "Ordinary firmness" is an objective standard that will not "allow a defendant to escape liability for a First Amendment violation merely because an unusually determined plaintiff persists in his protected activity." Mendocino Env'tl. Ctr. v. Mendocino Cty., 192 F.3d 1283, 1300 (9th Cir. 1999). Before the TRO was in place, Plaintiffs submitted numerous declarations, photographs, and videos describing and depicting instances when journalists and legal observers were targeted. This includes Mr. Howard being shot at close range despite complying with a federal officer's order to stay where he was. It also includes Mr. Kim and Mr. Yau being shot when they were not near protesters. It further includes Mr. Berger being beaten with a baton.

The Court also has reviewed all of the testimony and videos submitted by Plaintiffs after the Court issued its TRO. Although some of that evidence is ambiguous or less persuasive, some of it describes or shows conduct that appears to target journalists and legal observers, as opposed to incidentally or inadvertently reaching them as part of reasonable crowd control or enforcement against violent offenders. This evidence includes a federal officer forcing reporter Ms. Ellis to disperse on July 24, 2020 in a manner that would be intimidating to a reasonable person, despite the Court's TRO providing that press shall not be required to disperse. It also includes a federal officer spraying mace or pepper spray directly into the faces of clearly marked legal observers from only a few feet away. The evidence further includes a federal officer shooting a less lethal munition on July 23rd directly at Mr. Conley and another photographer, both clearly identifiable as press, after shining a bright light on them to identify them, and when the person nearest to them was a clearly identified medic standing behind a shield several feet away. It also includes video from Ms. Molli in the early morning of July 30, 2020, one week after the TRO was issued, showing law enforcement agents firing on a group of journalists when only other law enforcement agents were nearby.

The declarations submitted both before and after the TRO also describe that because of the Federal Defendants' conduct, journalists and legal observers were forced to stop newsgathering, documenting, and observing for minutes, hours, or days due to injury and trauma. This includes Mr. Haberman-Ducey being unable to observe due to his broken hand, Mr. Rudoff being unable to return for two days due to being shot in the leg, Mr. Conley having to take some time away because he could "barely walk" after his injuries, Ms. Elsesser stating that she would refuse further assignments in Portland unless she was provided with a bullet proof vest because of her injuries, Mr. Hollis leaving early after he was shot, and Ms. Jeong leaving earlier than she had planned.

Indeed, some journalists decided never to return because of fear for their personal safety. See, e.g., ECF 81 at 4 (Mr. Steve Hickey stating: “I do not intend to continue covering the protests in Portland after tonight, in part because I am fearful that federal agents will injure me even more severely than they did on the night of July 19 and morning of July 20 when they intentionally shot at my face, twice, when I was not even near any protestors.”); ECF 117 at 5 (Ms. Katz stating: “Because of how federal agents treated me, I have stopped covering the Portland protests.”). Most of the declarants, however, emphasize that they intend to continue covering or observing the protests despite their fear of continued injury or targeting by the Federal Defendants. This fear is not unreasonable or speculative. Plaintiffs and the other declarants were repeatedly subject to violent encounters with federal officers when covering the Portland protests. It is not hypothetical or mere conjecture. Instead, it is likely that they and other journalists and legal observers will face such treatment again if they cover protests in Portland policed by agents of the Federal Defendants. Moreover, the mere threat of harm, without further action, can have a chilling effect. Brodheim v. Cry, 584 F.3d 1262, 1270 (9th Cir. 2009).

The Court recognizes that that there are some violent individuals at these protests, including some who throw dangerous items at law enforcement officers, such as rocks, frozen water bottles, fireworks, and Molotov cocktail-type devices. Law enforcement also face arson events, including in dumpsters and debris being piled and set on fire. The situation can be dangerous and difficult for law enforcement. The fact that there are some violent offenders, however, does not give the Federal Defendants carte blanche to attack journalists and legal observers and infringe their First Amendment rights. See Black Lives Matter Seattle-King Cty. v. City of Seattle, Seattle Police Dep’t, 2020 WL 3128299, at *3 (W.D. Wash. June 12, 2020). Further, many declarants note that they have covered protests in war zones around the world and in areas with riotous protests such as Hong Kong, Oakland, and Seattle, and have never been subjected to the type of egregious and violent attacks by law enforcement personnel as they have suffered in Portland. If military and law enforcement personnel can engage around the world without attacking journalists, the Federal Defendants can respect Plaintiffs' First Amendment rights in Portland, Oregon.

In addition, the change in enforcement tactics does not serve to remove the chilling effect of the Federal Defendants' conduct for the same reason it does not moot Plaintiffs' claims. It is subject to change without notice and whenever the Federal Defendants assert that it is needed. It also has been the subject of conflicting public statements, which would not give a person of ordinary firmness confidence that the Federal Defendants are not poised and ready to return to the streets of Portland at any moment and to continue with the previous modus operandi.

Regarding the third factor, the Federal Defendants argue that Plaintiffs fail to show that any protected activity was a substantial or motivating factor in any purported conduct. The Federal Defendants assert that in every video submitted by Plaintiffs after the TRO went into effect, every journalist or authorized legal observer who was purportedly targeted was standing between law enforcement officers and protesters and sometimes also standing next to or behind protesters. Thus, argue the Federal Defendants, legal observers and journalists were not being intentionally targeted but merely were "inadvertently" hit. The Federal Defendants conclude that the circumstantial evidence does not support any retaliatory intent, and Plaintiffs have not shown a likelihood of success on the merits.

The Court reaches a different conclusion from the evidence. The issue is not as simple as whether a legal observer is standing "between" law enforcement personnel and protesters. For example, the Court's view of the two videos showing the pepper spray or mace attack on the legal observers reveals that this evidence supports the finding that journalists or legal observers were targeted and not inadvertently hit. They were standing together along the fence protecting the courthouse. There may have been protesters at some point standing behind them, although not close behind them, based on the video. Thus, the journalists or legal observers may have been “between” the law enforcement at the fence and some set of protesters further back from the fence. But based on the video, it is clear that the pepper spray was not aimed at protesters standing further back from the fence. The spray appears to have been intentionally directed at close range into the faces and eyes of the journalists or legal observers.

Additionally, from the Court’s review, there are videos showing journalists not standing in between law enforcement and protesters, yet they also appear to have been targeted by agents of the Federal Defendants. For example, the video from Mr. Conley from July 24, 2020, from the time count of approximately 6:30 to 7:40, supports the finding that he was targeted. Federal agents fired on him when he was not near protesters, after he had repeatedly identified himself as press, after many federal officers had returned to the courthouse and were safe from the volatile situation of apprehending the woman and the man who had attempted to interfere with the woman’s apprehension, and after the pan of Mr. Conley’s camera showed that the nearest person was another photographer. The next two nearest people were yards away and were on one side a medic behind a shield and on the other side a single protester yelling taunts. A federal officer shone a bright light at Mr. Conley, making his and his neighboring photographer’s press status even more identifiable, and then fired at Mr. Conley.

The Court also finds it to be a reasonable interpretation<sup>8</sup> that Ms. Ellis and another journalist were targeted when on July 24, 2020, they were forced to disperse, despite the TRO and their clearly identifiable status as press. Further, the Court finds that the video posted by Ms. Molli from early morning on July 30th supports a finding of targeting. This video shows journalists taking video and pictures of a munition that had been fired by federal officers. There were only a handful of journalists and many law enforcement officers, no protesters. Suddenly, one officer fired a less-lethal munition directly at the journalists recording the events.

Moreover, there are declarations that do not have video. The Federal Defendants do not address these. For example, Ms. Elsesser states that on July 25th she was standing by herself, across the street from the courthouse, with no protesters around when she was shot with a munition in the back of her arm. Ms. Katz states that on July 27th she was attempting to photograph the arrest of a protester when a federal agent physically blocked her. When she took a step to the side to get another angle, he physically shoved her away. These videos and declarations are all circumstantial evidence supporting retaliatory animus.

The Federal Defendants cite two unpublished Ninth Circuit decisions in support of their argument that in responding to some violent offenders in protesting crowds, any incidental burden on the First Amendment rights of journalists and legal observers is acceptable. These unpublished—and thus non-precedential—cases are unpersuasive. The Court follows published Ninth Circuit precedent, including Collins, which instructs that the proper response to violence is to arrest the violent offenders, not prophylactically suppress First Amendment rights. See Collins, 110 F.3d at 1372.

The Federal Defendants also argue that they have a formal policy of supporting First Amendment rights and contend that Plaintiffs fail to show otherwise. The Federal Defendants may not, however, hide behind a formal policy if in practice they do not conform to that policy. See Castro v. Cty. of Los Angeles, 833 F.3d 1060, 1075 n.10 (9th Cir. 2016) (en banc) (noting that a defendant cannot escape its “actual routine practices” by “pointing to a pristine set of policies”). At this stage of the litigation, the Court is persuaded by the number of alleged acts and the expert testimony of Mr. Kerlikowske that the conduct of the federal officers has not been reflective of a policy or practice of respecting First Amendment rights. Mr. Kerlikowske opines that the federal officers repeatedly have engaged in excessive force against journalists and legal observers, have not used appropriate crowd control tactics, and improperly have fired at the head, heart, and backs of journalists and legal observers when such conduct is generally not permitted. Even the Federal Defendants’ own witnesses have conceded that shooting persons in such a manner is inappropriate. See, e.g., ECF 136-2 at 13, FPS 824 Dep. Tr. 34:14-21 (testifying that shooting a person in the back who is not doing anything violent is not appropriate); ECF 136-3 at 8, CBP NZ-1 Dep. Tr. 37:18-25 (testifying that shooting a person in the back is not something that an agent or officer should do). Mr. Kerlikowske also opines that the augmented federal force deployed in Portland does not have the appropriate training for policing urban protests and crowd control and does not have the appropriate supervision and leadership. The Court finds these opinions persuasive, and they provide further circumstantial evidence of retaliatory intent.

In sum, Plaintiffs provide substantial circumstantial evidence of retaliatory intent to show, at the minimum, serious questions going to the merits. Plaintiffs submit numerous declarations and other video evidence describing and showing situations in which the declarants were identifiable as press, were not engaging in unlawful activity or even protesting, were not standing near protesters, and yet were subjected to violence by federal agents under circumstances that appear to indicate intentional targeting. Contrary to the Federal Defendants' arguments, this evidence does not show that the force used on Plaintiffs was merely an "inadvertent" consequence of otherwise lawful crowd control. Also, Plaintiffs submit expert testimony opining about repeated instances of excessive force being used against journalists and legal observers and failures of training and leadership with the augmented federal force sent to Portland, which is further circumstantial evidence supporting Plaintiffs' claim. Thus, Plaintiffs' have shown the elements of First Amendment retaliation.

b. Right of Access to Public Streets and Sidewalks

The First Amendment prohibits any law "abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press[.]" U.S. Const., amend. I. Although the First Amendment does not enumerate special rights for observing government activities, "[t]he Supreme Court has recognized that newsgathering is an activity protected by the First Amendment." United States v. Sherman, 581 F.2d 1358, 1361 (9th Cir. 1978); see Branzburg, 408 U.S. at 681 ("[W]ithout some protection for seeking out the news, freedom of the press could be eviscerated.").

As the Ninth Circuit has explained: "the Supreme Court has long recognized a qualified right of access for the press and public to observe government activities." Leigh, 677 F.3d at 898. By reporting about the government, the media are "surrogates for the public." Richmond Newspapers, Inc. v. Virginia, 448 U.S. 555, 573 (1980) (Burger, C.J., announcing judgment); see also Cox Broad. Corp. v. Cohn, 420 U.S. 469, 91 (1975) ("[I]n a society in which each individual has but limited time and resources with which to observe at first hand the operations of his government, he relies necessarily upon the press to bring to him in convenient form the facts of those operations."). As further described by the Ninth Circuit, "[w]hen wrongdoing is underway, officials have great incentive to blindfold the watchful eyes of the Fourth Estate.” Leigh, 677 F.3d at 900 (quoting Timothy B. Dyk, Newsgathering, Press Access, and the First Amendment, 44 STAN. L. REV. 927, 949 (1992) (alteration in original) (“[W]hen the government announces it is excluding the press for reasons such as administrative convenience, preservation of evidence, or protection of reporters’ safety, its real motive may be to prevent the gathering of information about government abuses or incompetence.”)).

The Federal Defendants argue that journalists have no right to stay, observe, and document when the government “closes” public streets. This argument is not persuasive. First, the Federal Defendants are not the entities that “close” state and local public streets and parks; that is a local police function.<sup>9</sup> Second, the point of a journalist observing and documenting government action is to record whether the “closing” of public streets (e.g., declaring a riot) is lawfully originated and lawfully carried out. Without journalists and legal observers, there is only the government’s side of the story to explain why a “riot” was declared and the public streets were “closed” and whether law enforcement acted properly in effectuating that order. Third, the Federal Defendants have not shown that any journalist or legal observer has harmed any federal officer or damaged any federal property, and if any journalist, legal observer, or person masquerading as a journalist or legal observer were to attempt to do so, the preliminary injunction would not protect them. Thus, the stated need to protect federal property and the safety of federal officers is not directly affected by allowing journalists and legal observers to stay, observe, and record events.

The Federal Defendants argue that Plaintiffs improperly rely on Press-Enterprise Co. v. Superior Court (“Press-Enterprise II”), 478 U.S. 1 (1986), to articulate the standard to apply in evaluating likelihood of success in Plaintiffs' claim of right of access. The Court rejects this argument.

In Press-Enterprise II, the Supreme Court established a two-part test for a claim of violation of the right of access. First, the court must determine whether a right of access attaches to the government proceeding or activity by considering whether the place and process have historically been open to the press and general public and whether public access plays a significant positive role in the functioning of the particular process in question. Press-Enterprise II, 478 U.S. at 8-9. Second, if the court determines that a qualified right applies, the government may overcome that right only by demonstrating "an overriding interest based on findings that closure is essential to preserve higher values and is narrowly tailored to serve that interest." Id. at 9 (citation omitted); see also Leigh, 677 F.3d at 898 (discussing Press-Enterprise II). The public streets, sidewalks, and parks historically have been open to the press and general public,<sup>10</sup> and public observation of law enforcement activities in these public fora plays a significant positive role in ensuring conduct remains consistent with the Constitution.

The Federal Defendants argue that they have a strong and overriding government interest in protecting federal property. The Court agrees that protecting federal property is a strong

<sup>10</sup> The Federal Defendants argue that the proper question is whether there historically was access after the closure order that is at issue—the unlawful assembly declaration and dispersal order. The Court disagrees that access is evaluated after the closure that is challenged. Access is considered before the closure that is challenged to determine whether the closure is unduly burdening First Amendment rights. For example, the Supreme Court in Press-Enterprises II did not evaluate whether the press and public had access to preliminary criminal proceedings that were subject to a legitimate closure order, but whether they had access to preliminary criminal proceedings generally. 478 U.S. at 10. Even if the Federal Defendants' assertion of how to frame the first question in Press-Enterprises II is correct, however, as noted above, it is not at issue in this motion because the City previously has stipulated that even after it has declared an unlawful assembly and issued a lawful dispersal order on state and local property, journalists and authorized legal observers may remain.

government interest, but the Federal Defendants must craft a narrowly tailored response to achieve that government interest without unreasonably burdening First Amendment rights. The Federal Defendants simply assert that dispersing everyone is as narrowly tailored as possible and to allow anyone to stay after a dispersal order is not practicable or workable. The record, however, belies this assertion.

The City, by stipulated preliminary injunction, does not require journalists and authorized legal observers to disperse, even when there has been an otherwise lawful general order of dispersal. After issuing the first TRO directed against the City, the Court specifically invited the City to move for amendment or modification if the original TRO was not working or to address any problems at the preliminary injunction phase. Instead, the City stipulated to a preliminary injunction that was nearly identical to the original TRO, with the addition of a clause relating to seized property. The fact that the City did not ask for any modification and then stipulated to a preliminary injunction is compelling evidence that exempting journalists and legal observers is workable.<sup>11</sup> Moreover, the City supports Plaintiffs' request for an injunction against the Federal Defendants, both the TRO and this preliminary injunction. Additionally, as discussed previously, Plaintiffs' expert witness Mr. Kerlikowske provides qualified, relevant, and persuasive testimony

<sup>11</sup> At oral argument, counsel for the City noted that the City might request from Plaintiffs a possible modification to the stipulated preliminary injunction. The City noted it had encountered some issues with persons with "press" markings intermingling with protesters and interfering with law enforcement. The Federal Defendants argue that this is "proof" that the preliminary injunction is "unworkable." Whether the City might request a modification at some point in the future, however, is not evidence of unworkability. Additionally, the City's stipulated preliminary injunction does not contain the indicia of journalists and legal observers that they "stay to the side" and not intermix with protesters, which is included in the preliminary injunction below, and does not contain the express prohibition on press and legal observers impeding, blocking, or interfering with law enforcement activities, which also is included below. Further, the fact that there might be room for improvement of a preliminary injunction does not make it unworkable. The Court is mindful not to let the perfect be the enemy of the good.

showing that the relief provided in the TRO against the Federal Defendants is workable. He also explains that during his tenure in Seattle, law enforcement did not target or disperse journalists and there were no adverse consequences. Numerous declarants also testified that they were not dispersed during protests in other locations. Thus, it is workable and feasible to disperse protesters generally but not require the dispersal of journalists and authorized legal observers. The Federal Defendants' blanket assertion that federal officers must disperse everyone is rejected.

Further, the Federal Defendants' objections to the workability of the TRO primarily focus on concerns regarding when journalists and legal observers "intermingle" with protesters. The first concern is that federal officers will violate the injunction if a journalist or legal observer is subject to crowd control tactics when mixed with the crowd. The preliminary injunction contains protections for this scenario. It adds, different from the TRO, the indicia of a journalist and legal observer that they stay to the side of the protest and not intermix with protesters. It also retains the protection for law enforcement that the incidental exposure of journalists and legal observers to crowd control devices is not a violation of the injunction.

The Federal Defendants' second concern with the intermingling of journalists and legal observers and protesters is that journalists and legal observers may interfere with law enforcement, particularly if allowed to stay after dispersal order. The preliminary injunction, however, retains the TRO's instruction that journalists and legal observers must comply with all laws other than general dispersal orders. For further clarity, the preliminary injunction expressly adds the provision that journalists and legal observers may not impede, block, or otherwise interfere with the lawful conduct of the federal officers.

The Federal Defendants also express concern that persons may disguise themselves as press and commit violent or illegal acts. The preliminary injunction, however, does not protect anyone who commits an unlawful act. The Federal Defendants have the same authority to arrest or otherwise engage with persons who commit unlawful acts, regardless of their clothing. Moreover, most of this concern expressed by the Federal Defendants focuses on persons self-identifying as press who are mixed with protesters or interfering with law enforcement. The preliminary injunction's addition of the indicia of press as staying to the side and not intermixing with protesters and express prohibition on interfering with law enforcement further addresses this concern. Further, Mr. Kerlikowske's declarations containing his expert opinions are persuasive in discounting this possibility.

The Federal Defendants also argue that requiring federal officers to wear larger unique identifying markings is not workable and is not connected to Plaintiffs' claims in this case. The Federal Defendants assert that such markings will interfere with an officer's ability to reach necessary equipment and are unnecessary because most officers already wear some unique identifying number somewhere on their uniform. The Federal Defendants were unable, however, to identify specific officers from videos when asked to do so by the Court. The current identifying markings are not of sufficient visibility. The Court does not find it credible that there is no possible location on the helmet or uniforms on which more visible markings can be placed. The Court is persuaded by Mr. Kelikowske's expert opinion that unique identifying markings are feasible, important, and will not interfere with the federal officers' ability to perform their duties. The Court also finds that such a requirement is related to Plaintiffs' claims because, as noted by Mr. Kerlikowske, these markings would deter the very conduct against which Plaintiffs have filed suit.

At this stage of the lawsuit, there are at least serious questions regarding Plaintiffs' right of access, whether the government will be able to meet its burden to overcome that right of access, the federal officers' tactics directed toward journalists and other legal observers, and whether restrictions placed upon them by the Federal Defendants are narrowly tailored. Thus, Plaintiffs' meet this factor for their claim alleging a violation of their right of access.

2. Irreparable Harm

Plaintiffs also must show that they are "likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief." See Winter, 555 U.S. at 20. The Ninth Circuit has explained that "speculative injury does not constitute irreparable injury sufficient to warrant granting a preliminary injunction. A plaintiff must do more than merely allege imminent harm sufficient to establish standing; a plaintiff must demonstrate immediate threatened injury as a prerequisite to preliminary injunctive relief." Boardman v. Pac. Seafood Grp., 822 F.3d 1011, 1022 (9th Cir. 2016) (emphasis in original) (simplified).

The Federal Defendants argue that Plaintiffs face no threat of immediate injury, particularly because of the changed enforcement tactics. The Federal Defendants assert that Plaintiffs have provided no evidence that the chances of encountering a federal officer at a protest is higher in August 2020 than it was in August 2019 or August 2018.

The Federal Defendants' latter assertion is without merit. The Federal Defendants have sent numerous additional federal officers to Portland with the stated mission to protect federal property and persons. Plaintiffs provide evidence that these officers routinely have left federal property and engaged in crowd control and other enforcement on the streets, sidewalks, and parks of the City of Portland. Plaintiffs' expert Mr. Kerlikowske opines that the federal officers and supervisors have insufficient and improper experience and leadership to handle the conditions during the Portland protests. Additionally, Plaintiffs provide evidence that the augmented federal police force has remained in Portland, that it will stay in Portland ready to deploy at any moment, and that there are no plans for any officers to withdraw from Portland, at least not until it is “certain” that federal property is “safe.” This provides significant evidence that journalists and legal observers are more likely to encounter a federal officer during a protest in August 2020 than in 2019 or 2018, when there was no augmented federal police force or Operation Diligent Valor.

Regarding the Federal Defendants’ argument that the voluntary change in tactics has decreased the immediacy of any claim of injury, thereby mitigating irreparable harm, the Ninth Circuit has rejected a similar argument. In Boardman, the defendants argued that there was no immediate danger of harm because the defendants had voluntarily ceased certain conduct. 822 F.3d at 1023. The defendants had voluntarily terminated a disputed merger and entered into a stipulation not to enter into a purchase transaction while the Oregon Attorney General’s investigation was ongoing. Id. The stipulation was terminable upon 60-days’ notice to the District Court and the Oregon Attorney General. The Ninth Circuit concluded that the District Court did not abuse its discretion in finding irreparable harm. Id.

The Ninth Circuit focused on the fact that the voluntarily stipulation was terminable with 60-days’ notice, the defendants had a history of negotiating in secret, the stipulation was limited to a “purchase transaction” and the transaction could take other contractual forms, and the exclusive marketing agreement between the two defendants had expired (thereby incentivizing a merger). Id. The Ninth Circuit noted: “A threat of irreparable harm is sufficiently immediate to warrant preliminary injunctive relief if the plaintiff ‘is likely to suffer irreparable harm before a decision on the merits can be rendered.’” Id. (quoting Winter, 555 U.S. at 22). For the plaintiff to be injured in Boardman, the defendants would have had to give 60-days’ notice and then not have the district court otherwise intervene, or negotiate in secret and reach a form of deal not considered a “purchase agreement,” or other steps that arguably were attenuated or provided the plaintiffs some opportunity to request emergency relief. Nonetheless, the Ninth Circuit agreed that the potential injury was immediate and irreparable for purposes of preliminary injunctive relief.

Plaintiffs’ irreparable injury here is not nearly as attenuated as Boardman and indeed is much more immediate because it could happen without any prior notice to the Court. The Court has already found that Plaintiffs face irreparable harm from the Federal Defendants’ conduct.<sup>12</sup>

<sup>12</sup> The Federal Defendants cite Rendish v. City of Tacoma, 123 F.3d 1216, 1226 (9th Cir. 1997), for the proposition that claims alleging First Amendment retaliation are not entitled to a presumption of irreparable harm. Rendish involved a public employee who was terminated and alleged First Amendment retaliation. Id. at 1218. The district court found that the plaintiff was not likely to succeed on the merits of her claim. Id. at 1226. The Ninth Circuit concluded: “Because the district court’s assessment that Rendish did not show a likelihood of success was accurate, it did not abuse its discretion in finding no irreparable harm based on a loss of her constitutional rights.” Id. The court rejected the plaintiff’s argument that despite the district court’s conclusion that the plaintiff would not have succeeded on the merits, the district court was required to presume irreparable harm, noting that there is no such presumption. Id.

Rendish provides no support for the contention that when a court concludes that plaintiffs are likely to succeed on the merits of a claim that their constitutional rights have been violated, the plaintiffs are not entitled to a presumption of irreparable harm. Indeed, the opposite is true. See, e.g., Doe v. Harris, 772 F.3d 563, 583 (9th Cir. 2014) (“A ‘colorable First Amendment claim’ is ‘irreparable injury sufficient to merit the grant of relief.’” (quoting Warsoldier v. Woodford, 418 F.3d 989, 1001 (9th Cir. 2005)) (affirming grant of preliminary injunction)); Melendres v. Arpaio, 695 F.3d 990, 1002 (9th Cir. 2012) (“It is well established that the deprivation of constitutional rights ‘unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury.’” (quoting Elrod v. Burns, 427 U.S. 347, 373 (1976))); Assoc. Press v. Otter, 682 F.3d 821, 826 (9th Cir. 2012) (noting that “[t]he loss of First Amendment freedoms, for even minimal periods of time, unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury” and reversing and remanding for entry of preliminary injunction (alteration in original) (quoting Elrod)); Klein v. City of San Clemente, 584 F.3d 1196, 1207-08 (9th Cir. 2009) (“Both this court and the Supreme Court have repeatedly held that the loss of First Amendment freedoms, for even minimal periods of time, unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury.” (simplified) (reversing and remanding for entry of preliminary injunction)); Black Lives Matter Seattle-King Cty. v. City of Seattle, Seattle Police Dep’t, 2020 WL 3128299, at *4 (W.D. Wash. June 12, 2020) (citing Melendres and Otter and finding irreparable harm for First Amendment retaliation claims because “[t]he use of less-lethal, crowd control weapons has already stifled some speech even if momentarily”); Freedom for Immigrants v. U.S. Dep’t of Homeland Sec., 2020 WL 2095787, at *5 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 11, 2020) (“Because FFI has demonstrated that DHS’s conduct likely contravenes its First Amendment rights, FFI satisfies the irreparable harm requirement for preliminary injunctive relief.”); Nat’l Rifle Ass’n of Am. v. City of Los Angeles, 441 F. Supp. 3d 915, 938-39 (C.D. Cal. 2019) (“In this case, Plaintiffs have sufficiently demonstrated that they are likely to be deprived of their First Amendment rights—the deprivation of which is ‘well established’ to constitute irreparable harm. Defendants’ primary argument to the contrary is that Plaintiffs have not provided admissible evidence of irreparable harm. But Plaintiffs have provided ample evidence of a likely First Amendment violation, which is enough to satisfy the Winter standard.” (citations omitted) (granting preliminary injunction)); see also 11A Charles Alan Wright, FEDERAL PRACTICE & PROCEDURE, § 2948.1 (2d ed. 2004) (“When an alleged deprivation of a constitutional right is involved, most courts hold that no further showing of irreparable injury is necessary.”). Plaintiffs have demonstrated that they are likely to be deprived of their First Amendment rights and that is sufficient to show irreparable harm.

After the Court’s initial finding of irreparable harm to support the TRO, Plaintiffs provided even more evidence that journalists’ First Amendment rights have been chilled, including declarations in which journalists describe being subject to less lethal munitions that required the journalist to stop covering the protests for the night or for some period of time, or chilled the journalist from returning to cover the protests in the future. See, e.g., ECF 88 at 2 (Ellis Decl. ¶ 6, “Federal agents prevented me from doing my job twice on the night of July 23-24.”); ECF 89 at 4 (Elsesser Decl. ¶ 13, “If I am asked to cover the protests again, I would refuse unless I had a bulletproof vest (which are in short supply in Portland at the moment) to wear because I am fearful that federal agents would injure me or worse.”); ECF 91 at 3 (Hollis Decl. ¶ 8, “After the federal agents shot me, I turned and ran and returned to my hotel.”); ECF 116 at 3 (Jeong Decl. ¶¶ 7-8, noting that because she was shoved down to the ground by a federal officer she “ultimately left much earlier than I had planned” with respect to covering that night’s protest); ECF 117 at 5 (Katz Decl. ¶ 15, “Because of how federal agents treated me, I have stopped covering the Portland protests.”).

The only change is the Federal Defendants' "agreement" with Oregon Governor Kate Brown and voluntarily cessation of certain enforcement tactics. This change in enforcement is replete with caveats. It is terminable at any time and without any notice to this Court or Plaintiffs if the Federal Defendants believe that federal property or persons are not secure. See n. 6, supra. It is also subject to the federal officers being able to leave the building at any time for a specific incident of enforcement, even if the agreement itself has not changed. For example, although the federal officers' modified enforcement role was announced on July 29, 2020, to begin the next day, Plaintiffs have submitted testimony and video evidence from that night (to be precise, from the early morning on July 30, 2020), of federal officers firing tear gas and flash bang munitions at journalists. See ECF 118 at 4. There was no one nearby on the street but numerous federal enforcement officers and six journalists when the munitions were deployed.

Moreover, the Federal Defendants have emphatically and repeatedly denied that they have engaged in any wrongful or unlawful conduct. Thus, there is no indication that their crowd control tactics, which the Court has already found to support both a finding of success on the merits and likelihood of irreparable harm, and which Plaintiffs' expert has characterized as including excessive force, would change if they re-engage in crowd control enforcement and the Court's injunctive relief is no longer in place.

Indeed, the Court has serious concerns that the Federal Defendants have not fully complied with the Court's original TRO. The Court has reviewed all of the testimony and videos submitted by Plaintiffs after the Court issued its TRO, and although some of the evidence is ambiguous or less persuasive, some of the evidence describes and shows at least some conduct that appears to target journalists and legal observers, as opposed to incidentally or inadvertently reaching them as part of crowd control or enforcement against violent offenders.

Further, the Court does not agree with the Federal Defendants that given the magnitude of irreparable injury at stake in this case, the Court is required to wait until new and additional irreparable injury is inflicted on Plaintiffs to issue prospective injunctive relief. As the Ninth Circuit emphasized in Boardman, a threat of irreparable injury is sufficiently immediate if it is likely to occur before a decision on the merits can be issued. Boardman, 822 F.3d at 1023. Given the Federal Defendants' public statements and discovery responses relating to Operation Diligent Valor, the current situation relating to the protests in Portland, and the current situation regarding the local police presence in Portland, the Court finds that it is sufficiently likely that federal officers will re-engage in "protecting federal property and persons" and will return to enforcement tactics before a decision on the merits in this case can be issued. Thus, Plaintiffs have sufficiently shown irreparable injury.

Moreover, the Court takes guidance from the Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit's discussions regarding the Court's authority relating to issuing injunctions generally and predicting future violations in this context. The Supreme Court has noted that in addition to a court retaining the ability to hear a case after voluntarily cessation (considerations of mootness), "the court's power to grant injunctive relief survives discontinuance of the illegal conduct." United States v. W. T. Grant Co., 345 U.S. 629, 633 (1953). "The necessary determination is that there exists some cognizable danger of recurrent violation, something more than the mere possibility which serves to keep the case alive." Id. In making this determination, the district court's "discretion is necessarily broad and a strong showing of abuse must be made to reverse it. To be considered are the bona fides of the expressed intent to comply, the effectiveness of the discontinuance and, in some cases, the character of the past violations." Id. The Ninth Circuit has discussed “the factors that are important in predicting the likelihood of future violations” as follows:

the degree of scienter involved; the isolated or recurrent nature of the infraction; the defendant’s recognition of the wrongful nature of his conduct; the extent to which the defendant’s professional and personal characteristics might enable or tempt him to commit future violations; and the sincerity of any assurances against future violations.

Fed. Election Comm’n v. Furgatch, 869 F.2d 1256, 1263 n.5 (9th Cir. 1989). These factors are in addition to “the commission of past illegal conduct, [which] is highly suggestive of the likelihood of future violations.” Id.

Considering these factors, whether as articulated by the Supreme Court in W.T. Grant or the Ninth Circuit in Furgatch, the Federal Defendants’ voluntary cessation of conduct<sup>13</sup> does not demonstrate effective discontinuance and serious questions remain with respect to the likelihood of Plaintiffs’ future injury. In addition, under the W.T. Grace factors, there has been no expressed intent by the Federal Defendants to comply with the Court’s TRO. To the contrary, the Federal Defendants have stated that the order is “offensive” and that it “shouldn’t affect anything [the Federal Defendants are ] doing” in Portland. ECF 147-6 at 3 (statement by Acting Deputy <sup>13</sup> The Federal Defendants argue that they have not voluntarily ceased conduct because they dispute that they have engaged in any unlawful conduct. Regardless of how they characterize the lawfulness of their conduct, however, their argument is that because of the changed circumstances, Plaintiffs can no longer show irreparable injury. The changed circumstances on which the Federal Defendants rely, however, is the agreement between state and federal authorities that the federal officers would “stay in the building” and state and local police would take over more direct policing. The specifics of this agreement have been redacted by the Federal Defendants. See ECF 147-8 at 2. According to White House Senior Advisor Stephen Miller, however, the agreement does not include a “phased withdrawal.” ECF 147-5 at 2. Nonetheless, this agreement and the Federal Defendants’ voluntary change in enforcement as a result of the agreement is the voluntary cessation triggering the changed circumstances on which the Federal Defendants rely. Thus, the Court must analyze whether it supports the Federal Defendants’ assertion that there no longer exists a cognizable risk of recurrent violations.

Secretary Ken Cuccinelli). Also, as reflected in Plaintiffs' motion for contempt, despite the issuance of the TRO, the Federal Defendants appear to have engaged in at least some conduct that continues to target journalists and legal observers in violation of the Court's TRO. This raises concerns regarding future conduct if there is no injunction in place, because even with a Court order in place, improper conduct appears to have continued. Regarding the effectiveness of the Federal Defendants' stated discontinuance, as discussed above, it is not very effective while the out-of-town federal agents remain in Portland because the discontinuance is terminable at will by the Federal Defendants and, thus, only temporary. Finally, the character of the recent past violations by the Federal Defendants in Portland is particularly egregious.

Considering the Ninth Circuit's Furgatch factors, first, the Federal Defendants' past violations are highly suggestive of future harm. Second, the degree of scienter involved is high for violations triggering the requested injunctive relief, because it relates to targeting of journalists and legal observers and not merely incidental harm to them during crowd control. Further, because Plaintiffs agreed to the modification to the injunction that journalists and legal observers stay to the side, the risk of incidental targeting is diminished. Third, the occurrences were not isolated—Plaintiffs provided significant evidence of numerous journalists and legal observers who were targeted by the Federal Defendants. Indeed, several of the witnesses have experience reporting in war zones around the world and at violent protests in Hong Kong, Oakland, and Seattle. They emphasize how they have never been shot at or tear gassed until coming to Portland. Fourth, the Federal Defendants have not recognized the wrongful nature of their conduct but instead assert that they have only engaged in lawful conduct. They have not disciplined any federal agent or officer for any conduct. They moved to dissolve the TRO after Plaintiffs moved for contempt. The Federal Defendants, unlike the City of Portland, also did not stipulate to preliminary injunctive relief. Fifth, given the disdainful comments publicly made by the highest officials at the Federal Defendants with respect to journalists, legal observers, Plaintiffs, protesters, and the City of Portland, the professional and personal characteristics of the Federal Defendants show that they are likely to be enabled or tempted to engage in future violations. Finally, there have not been sincere assurances given against future violations. Accordingly, considering these factors, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have made a sufficient showing of threatened future violations by the Federal Defendants causing sufficiently likely irreparable injury to Plaintiffs before a decision on the merits can be issued.

3. Public Interest and Balance of the Equities

When the government is a party, the last two factors of the injunction analysis merge. Drakes Bay Oyster Co. v. Jewell, 747 F.3d 1073, 1092 (9th Cir. 2014). Regarding the public interest, “[c]ourts considering requests for preliminary injunctions have consistently recognized the significant public interest in upholding First Amendment principles.” Associated Press v. Otter, 682 F.3d 821, 826 (9th Cir. 2012) (quotation marks omitted). Further, “it is always in the public interest to prevent the violation of a party’s constitutional rights.” Melendres v. Arpaio, 695 F.3d 990, 1002 (9th Cir. 2012) (quotation marks omitted) (granting an injunction under the Fourth Amendment). Regarding balancing the equities, when a plaintiff has “raised serious First Amendment questions,” the balance of hardships “tips sharply in [the plaintiffs’] favor.” Cnty. House, Inc. v. City of Boise, 490 F.3d 1041, 1059 (9th Cir. 2007) (alterations in original) (quotation marks omitted).

The Federal Defendants argue that the normal evaluation of these factors in favor of a plaintiff who is likely to succeed on a First Amendment claim does not apply in this case because the government’s countervailing interests outweigh Plaintiffs’ First Amendment concerns. The Federal Defendants assert the government’s interest in protecting federal property, ensuring the safety of federal officers and other personnel, maintaining public order on federal property, and securing the federal courthouse so that it remains open and accessible to the public. The first three relate to protecting the courthouse and federal officers, and the final interest relates to providing access to the public.

Regarding protection of the courthouse and officers, the Federal Defendants rely on evidence that persons self-identifying as press have engaged in purported misconduct. The Court has reviewed all the video and other evidence submitted by the Federal Defendants in support of their contentions relating to alleged misconduct of persons self-identifying as press after the issuance of the TRO on July 23, 2020. Much of this evidence is ambiguous or shows that persons self-identifying as press have intermixed with protesters, have run toward the fence around the federal courthouse and stopped, have not actually been press but merely donned clothing (for one night) marked “press” hoping to avoid violence by federal officers, or simply have stood by while unlawful conduct was engaged in by others. This is not unlawful conduct.

There is evidence, however, that a few individual persons wearing press indicia on their clothing or hats or helmets (often handwritten), who generally are described by the Federal Defendant declarants as not otherwise engaging in any conduct such as reporting, notetaking, photographing, or recording, have engaged in the following activities: entering courthouse property after the fence was breached and encouraging others to do the same; helping another person to breach the fence; shining a flashlight at a police helicopter; kicking a police officer; shielding protesters from law enforcement; and throwing an object at law enforcement. This is inappropriate conduct, and much of it may be unlawful. The Court shares the Federal Defendants’ concerns for the safety of federal officers, particularly considering the more than 100 injuries that have been sustained by federal offices to date. But as discussed above in the context of workability, the preliminary injunction does not protect unlawful conduct, and federal officers may arrest anyone, even persons with indicia of press, who are engaging in such conduct.

Further, the preliminary injunction has provisions that expressly address these concerns, including providing that one indicia of press or authorized legal observer status is that they stay to the side and do not intermix with protesters and that press and legal observers may not impede, block, or interfere with law enforcement. Concern over potential unlawful conduct thus does not alter the analysis of traditional public interest factors or the balance of equities.

Moreover, the Court must balance and weigh the equities and public interest. The fact that a few people may have engaged in some unlawful conduct does not outweigh the important First Amendment rights of journalists and legal observers and the public for whom they act as surrogates. Further, there is no evidence that any of the named Plaintiffs engaged in any of the purported unlawful conduct described by the Federal Defendants.

The Federal Defendants' final argument is that the government's interest in preserving physical access to courts outweighs Plaintiffs' interests. That argument also is without merit. The relevant protests are happening after business hours, and there is no indication that allowing journalists and legal observers to stay despite a general dispersal order interferes with public access. Thus, none of the government's proffered interests outweigh the public's interest in receiving accurate and timely reporting, video, and photographic information about the protests and how law enforcement is treating protestors. There also is no need to alter the traditional analysis recognizing the significant public interest in First Amendment rights and that in such cases the balance of the equities tips sharply in favor of the plaintiff. See Otter, 682 F.3d at 826; Cnty. House, 490 F.3d at 1059.

4. Conclusion

The Court GRANTS Plaintiffs' motion for preliminary injunction against the Federal Defendants (ECF 134) and Orders as follows:

PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

1. The Federal Defendants, their agents and employees, and all persons acting under their direction are enjoined from arresting, threatening to arrest, or using physical force directed against any person whom they know or reasonably should know is a Journalist or Legal Observer (as explained below), unless the Federal Defendants have probable cause to believe that such individual has committed a crime. For purposes of this Order, such persons shall not be required to disperse following the issuance of an order to disperse, and such persons shall not be subject to arrest for not dispersing following the issuance of an order to disperse. Such persons shall, however, remain bound by all other laws. No Journalist or Legal Observer protected order this Order, however, may impede, block, or otherwise physically interfere with the lawful activities of the Federal Defendants.

2. The Federal Defendants, their agents and employees, and all persons acting under their direction are further enjoined from seizing any photographic equipment, audio- or video-recording equipment, or press passes from any person whom they know or reasonably should know is a Journalist or Legal Observer (as explained below), or ordering such person to stop photographing, recording, or observing a protest, unless the Federal Defendants are also lawfully seizing that person consistent with this Order. Except as expressly provided in Paragraph 3 below, the Federal Defendants must return any seized equipment or press passes immediately upon release of a person from custody.

3. If any Federal Defendant, their agent or employee, or any person acting under their direction seize property from a Journalist or Legal Observer who is lawfully arrested consistent with this Order, such Federal Defendant shall, as soon thereafter as is reasonably possible, make a written list of things seized and shall provide a copy of that list to the Journalist or Legal Observer. If equipment seized in connection with an arrest of a Journalist or Legal Observer lawfully seized under this Order is needed for evidentiary purposes, the Federal Defendants shall promptly seek a search warrant, subpoena, or other court order for that purpose. If such a search warrant, subpoena, or other court order is denied, or equipment seized in connection with an arrest is not needed for evidentiary purposes, the Federal Defendants shall immediately return it to its rightful possessor.

4. To facilitate the Federal Defendants' identification of Journalists protected under this Order, the following shall be considered indicia of being a Journalist: visual identification as a member of the press, such as by carrying a professional or authorized press pass, carrying professional gear such as professional photographic equipment, or wearing a professional or authorized press badge or other official press credentials, or distinctive clothing, that identifies the wearer as a member of the press. It also shall be an indicium of being a Journalist under this Order that the person is standing off to the side of a protest, not engaging in protest activities, and not intermixed with persons engaged in protest activities, although these are not requirements. These indicia are not exclusive, and a person need not exhibit every indicium to be considered a Journalist under this Order. The Federal Defendants shall not be liable for unintentional violations of this Order in the case of an individual who does not carry or wear a press pass, badge, or other official press credential, professional gear, or distinctive clothing that identifies the person as a member of the press.

5. To facilitate the Federal Defendants' identification of Legal Observers protected under this Order, the following shall be considered indicia of being a Legal Observer: wearing a green National Lawyers Guild-issued or authorized Legal Observer hat (typically a green NLG hat) or wearing a blue ACLU-issued or authorized Legal Observer vest. It also shall be an indicium of being a Legal Observer protected under this Order that the person is standing off to the side of a protest, not engaging in protest activities, and not intermixed with persons engaged in protest activities, although these are not requirements.

6. The Federal Defendants are not precluded by the Order from issuing otherwise lawful crowd-dispersal orders for a variety of lawful reasons. The Federal Defendants shall not be liable for violating this injunction if a Journalist or Legal Observer is incidentally exposed to crowd-control devices after remaining in the area where such devices were deployed after the issuance of an otherwise lawful dispersal order.

7. Plaintiffs and the Federal Defendants shall promptly confer regarding how the Federal Defendants can place unique identifying markings (using numbers and/or letters) on the uniforms and/or helmets of the officers and agents of the Federal Defendants who are specially deployed to Portland so that they can be identified at a reasonable distance and without unreasonably interfering with the needs of these personnel. Based on the Court's understanding that Deputy U.S. Marshals and Courtroom Security Officers stationed in Portland who are under the direction of the U.S. Marshal for the District of Oregon are not part of the force that has given rise to events at issue in the lawsuit, they are exempt from this requirement. Agents wearing plain clothes and assigned to undercover duties also are exempt from this requirement. If the parties agree on a method of marking, they shall submit the terms of their agreement in writing to the Court, and the Court will then issue a modified preliminary injunction that incorporates the parties' agreement. If the parties cannot reach agreement within 14 days, each party may submit its own proposal, and each side may respond to any other party's proposal within seven days thereafter. The Court will resolve any disputes on this issue and modify this preliminary injunction appropriately.

8. To promote compliance with this Preliminary Injunction, the Federal Defendants are ordered to provide copies of the verbatim text of the first seven provisions of this Preliminary Injunction, in either electronic or paper form, within 14 calendar days to: (a) all employees, officers, and agents of the Federal Defendants currently deployed in Portland, Oregon (or who later become deployed in Portland, Oregon while this Preliminary Injunction is in force), including but not limited to all personnel in Portland, Oregon who are part of Operation Diligent Valor, Operation Legend, or any equivalent; and (b) all employees, officers, and agents of the Federal Defendants with any supervisory or command authority over any person in group (a) above.

9. Plaintiffs need not provide any security, and all requirements under Rule 65(c) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure are waived.

10. The Court denies the oral motion by the Federal Defendants to stay this preliminary injunction.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

DATED this 20th day of August, 2020.

Subject: RE: Index Newspapers -- Portland Civil Unrest Litigation -- Preliminary Injunction Ordered Today

Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner – As we relayed last week, on August 20, the U.S. District Court in Oregon issued a Preliminary Injunction pertaining to DHS enforcement activities in Portland relating to journalists and legal observers. One of the terms of the Preliminary Injunction is a requirement to provide verbatim copies of the first seven provisions of the Preliminary Injunction (pages 58-61 of the attached) to (1) all employees, officers and agents currently assigned or deployed in Portland, Oregon as part of Operation Diligent Valor; (2) any employees, officers or agents who are subsequently deployed to Portland, Oregon as part of Operation Diligent Valor; and (3) all employees with any supervisory or command authority over any persons deployed to Portland, Oregon as part of Operation Diligent Valor.

CBP personnel either in or deployed to Portland or with supervisory or command authority over any personnel deployed to Portland as part of Operation Diligent Valor are required to read the seven operative sections of the Preliminary Injunction. Additionally, the attached PI Guidance offers explanation and context of each section of the PI. (b)(5)

Subject: Index Newspapers -- Portland Civil Unrest Litigation -- Preliminary Injunction Ordered Today

Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner – This afternoon, Judge Simon issued the attached Preliminary Injunction against the U.S. Government, including the Department of Homeland Security. The terms of the Preliminary Injunction are very similar to those outlined in the Temporary Restraining Order issued on July 23 and extended on August 6. In short, the Federal Defendants are enjoined from the following:

1. Arresting, threatening to arrest, or using physical force directed against any person whom they know or reasonably should know is a Journalist or Legal Observer, unless the Federal Defendants have probable cause to believe that such individual has committed a crime. Further, Journalists and Legal Observers are not required to disperse following the issuance of an order to disperse.

2. Seizing any photographic equipment or ordering such person to stop photographing, recording, or observing a protest, unless the Federal Defendants are also lawfully seizing that person.
3. If Federal Defendants seize property from a Journalist or Legal Observer, such Federal Defendant shall, as soon thereafter as is reasonably possible, make a written list of things seized and shall provide a copy of that list to the Journalist or Legal Observer.
4. The Judge outlined what might be considered indicia of being a Journalist to include: visual identification as a member of the press, such as by carrying a professional or authorized press pass, carrying professional gear such as professional photographic equipment, or wearing a professional or authorized press badge or other official press credentials, or distinctive clothing, that identifies the wearer as a member of the press. Of note, the Judge also indicated that standing off to the side of a protest, not engaging in protest activities, and not being intermixed with persons engaged in protest activities, would also equate to indicia of being a Journalist. This was a modification to the TRO terms.
5. The Judge also outlined what might be considered indicia of being a Legal Observer to include: wearing a green National Lawyers Guild-issued or authorized Legal Observer hat (typically a green NLG hat) or wearing a blue ACLU-issued or authorized Legal Observer vest. Again, the Judge indicated that standing off to the side of a protest, not engaging in protest activities, and not being intermixed with persons engaged in protest activities would also equate to indicia of being a Legal Observer. This was a modification to the TRO terms.
6. The Federal Defendants are not precluded from issuing otherwise lawful crowd-dispersal orders for a variety of lawful reasons and shall not be liable for violating this injunction if a Journalist or Legal Observer is incidentally exposed to crowd-control devices after remaining in the area where such devices were deployed after the issuance of an otherwise lawful dispersal order.

A matter of contention and extensive testimony through declarations included whether Federal Defendants would be ordered to wear additional unique identifying markings. Judge Simon ordered the parties to confer regarding the placement of unique identifying markings on uniforms and/or helmets so that they can be identified at a reasonable distance and without unreasonably interfering with the operational needs of the officers/agents. (b)(5)

(b)(5)

Finally, we were ordered to provide the terms of the Preliminary Injunction to the officers/agents (and their supervisors) currently operating within Portland in support of FPS within 14 days. (b)(5)

Subject: RE: Index Newspapers -- Portland Civil Unrest Litigation -- TRO Extended

Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner – The attached Temporary Restraining Order that was issued on July 23, 2020, against the U.S. Government, including the Department of Homeland Security, was extended by Judge Simon today for an additional 14 days. This extended TRO will expire on August 20 at 5:00pm PT. Judge Simon denied our motion for reconsideration wherein we argued that the TRO was unworkable for various reasons, including that demonstrators were masquerading as press and perpetrating acts of violence.

The Preliminary Injunction Hearing is calendared for August 18. (b)(5)

Subject: Index Newspapers -- Portland Civil Unrest Litigation -- TRO Likely/Imminent

Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner – The hearing for the Index Newspapers TRO was held earlier today in Portland and we wanted to provide you a brief summary and also notify you of the likelihood that a 14-day TRO will be granted with regard to the use of force and arrests against and of journalists and legal observers. Present at the hearing was attorney Matthew Borden for the plaintiffs and Main DOJ Civil (attorney Andrew Warden) representing the Government. The plaintiffs argued they have presented voluminous evidence (approximately 20 declarations) showing the federal defendants are harming identifiable journalists and legal observers in Portland, chilling free speech. The plaintiffs further argued they will suffer harm in the future because they are continuing to attend these protests and have suffered similar harm even after the TRO was filed.

DOJ argued, as it did at the Oregon AG TRO hearing yesterday, that a TRO would chill officers from making split-second decisions necessary to protect themselves and federal property. DOJ also argued that there is no evidence the federal defendants targeted or retaliated against any individual because the individual is a journalist or legal observer. DOJ further argued that extending the judge’s TRO against the City of Portland to the federal defendants would be unworkable. Under that TRO, journalists and legal observers with certain identifiable characteristics are not required to disperse when the City issues a crowd control order. DOJ argued that officer safety would be at risk if the federal defendants’ agents need to take extra time to determine whether an individual is a protestor, who must disperse, or a journalist, who may remain. Finally, DOJ argued the plaintiffs have other forms of relief available to them, such as Bivens claims, which are more appropriate than a TRO.

Judge Simon went through a series of questions and made comments that appeared damaging to the Government’s arguments. Judge Simon asked whether DOJ had any evidence that journalists or legal observers caused any damage to federal property. DOJ indicated it had no such evidence. The Judge then pointed out that when someone is identified as a journalist and there is no probable cause to believe the individual committed any crime and the individual is then shot at with rubber bullets, the harm can reasonably be inferred to be because the individual is a journalist. Next, the Judge asked the Government why a TRO with language mirroring the TRO issued against the City would be unworkable when that TRO has worked well and led to a stipulated preliminary injunction between the plaintiffs and the City that includes much of the same language. To make his point further, he allowed the City to speak about how well the order was working. In a remarkable development, the City relayed its support of the plaintiffs' request for a TRO against the federal defendants. DOJ did not have a direct response to this point.

Seeing the writing on the wall, DOJ attempted to limit the scope of such an order, arguing there was no need for prohibiting the arrest of journalists or the taking of their equipment because there is no evidence the federal defendants have engaged in those activities. DOJ also asked for there to be a specific intent component to the TRO. Judge Simon noted these arguments but appeared to signal he would issue a TRO with similar language to the TRO issued against the City.

Judge Simon clearly indicated that he is inclined to issue a TRO and noted the importance of journalists providing the public with information about events involving the Government. DOJ argued that it would prefer a preliminary injunction, which it could immediately appeal. Judge Simon indicated that he would likely issue a TRO. The Judge also indicated that he is willing to work with the parties if the TRO proves unworkable. (b)(5)

Subject: Index Newspapers -- TRO Motion Filed in District of Oregon

Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner -- We write to update you on the temporary restraining order request filed in Portland against DHS and the U.S. Marshals Service on Friday, July 17. As you may be aware, on June 28, several journalists and legal observers filed a class action complaint against the City of Portland alleging that police officers used force to dissuade and prevent them from covering protests after the death of George Floyd. The news organization, Index Newspapers LLC, was later added as a plaintiff. The plaintiffs obtained a TRO against Portland on July 2. The TRO indicated that Portland police officers may not arrest, threaten to arrest, or use force against journalists or legal observers unless they have probable cause to believe that the journalist or legal observer has committed a crime, and that journalists and legal observers may remain at the scene of a protest after officers give an order for protestors to disperse. Additionally, the TRO indicates that officers shall not seize photographic or audio recording equipment from journalists or legal observers.

Late Friday, July 17, the plaintiffs amended their complaint to add DHS and USMS as defendants and subsequently requested a TRO against the federal defendants. The TRO requests essentially the same injunctive relief that the Court granted in its TRO against the Portland Police. In their request for a TRO, the plaintiffs allege that journalist Mathieu Lewis-Roland was covering protests near the Portland federal courthouse in the early hours of July 12, wearing a t-shirt that clearly identified him as press. The plaintiffs further allege that when federal agents emerged from the courthouse to disperse protesters they ventured off federal property, "chased" Mr. Lewis-Roland, and shot him ten times in the side and back with plastic bullets, causing "wounds, lacerations, and contusions." The plaintiffs separately allege that journalist Garrison Davis was covering the same protest wearing a press helmet and carrying a visible press pass. The plaintiffs allege federal agents fired a canister of tear gas into Mr. Davis' back and "shot directly at him with pepper bullets and other munitions."

To obtain a TRO, the plaintiffs must establish (1) a likelihood of success on the merits of their claim for injunctive relief; (2) a likelihood of irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief; (3) that the balance of equities tips in their favor; and (4) a preliminary injunction is in the public interest. The plaintiffs argue they will succeed on the merits because they were engaged in First Amendment-protected activities at a public location and that the federal defendants retaliated against them for participation in those activities. The plaintiffs appear to argue that the fact the federal defendants knew they were engaged in these activities and then proceeded to shoot at them anyway constitutes retaliation. The plaintiffs argue that there is a high likelihood of irreparable harm, as well as a public interest in granting the TRO, because the federal defendants' actions prevent the plaintiffs from documenting the protests and the conduct of the federal defendants at those protests.

The DHS opposition to the TRO motion is due at 5:00pm PT tomorrow, and the plaintiff's reply is due on Wednesday. The Court will hold a hearing on the TRO motion on Thursday, July 23.

ORDER

Before: O'SCANNLAIN, RAWLINSON, and CHRISTEN, Circuit Judges.

Order by Judges RAWLINSON and CHRISTEN, Dissent by Judge O'SCANNLAIN

On May 25, 2020, George Floyd was killed by a Minneapolis police officer while being arrested. Bystanders on the sidewalk recorded videos of a police officer kneeling on Floyd's neck for several minutes while Floyd begged for his life. A video showing the last minutes of Floyd's life was circulated nationwide, and it ignited protests across the country in support of the Black Lives Matter movement.

This case arises out of the protests in Portland, Oregon. Most of the protests have been peaceful, but some have become violent. There have been incidents of vandalism, destruction of property, looting, arson, and assault, particularly late at night. Since the protests began, state and local authorities in Oregon have actively monitored the protests and engaged in crowd control measures. Plaintiffs—a newspaper organization and individual journalists, photojournalists, and legal observers who have attended the protests to serve as reporters and recorders—filed a class-action complaint against the City of Portland on June 28, 2020.

The complaint alleged that the City's response to the protests violated their rights under the First and Fourth Amendments to the United States Constitution, and Article I, Sections 8 and 26 of the Oregon Constitution. Specifically, plaintiffs asserted that although they had not participated in the protests, the local authorities shot them with less-lethal munitions (pepper balls, impact munitions, paint markers, and tear gas canisters), and pepper sprayed, shoved, and otherwise prevented them from recording and reporting on the protests and on law enforcement's response to the same. Four days after the complaint was filed, on July 2, the district court entered a temporary restraining order (TRO) against the City regulating the local authorities' use of crowd-control tactics against journalists and legal observers. On July 16, the City and plaintiffs stipulated to a preliminary injunction that was largely identical to the TRO.

Many of the protests in Portland have centered around the Mark O. Hatfield Federal Courthouse. In response to the threat to federal property, the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) and the United States Marshals Service (USMS) (collectively, the Federal Defendants) deployed federal law enforcement agents to Portland. It appears undisputed that the intensity of the protests escalated after the Federal Defendants arrived.

Plaintiffs filed a second amended complaint on July 17 joining as defendants DHS and USMS. This complaint alleged that the Federal Defendants "intentionally targeted and used physical force and other forms of intimidation against journalists and authorized legal observers for the purpose of preventing or deterring them from observing and reporting on unreasonably aggressive treatment of lawful protestors.” The district court entered a TRO against the Federal Defendants on July 23.

On July 29, 2020, DHS and the State of Oregon reached an agreement regarding their respective crowd control efforts. The agreement is not part of the record, but the district court described it as generally providing that the City would take the lead in responding to the protests. The court’s findings also made clear that the agreement contains numerous caveats and is terminable at any time, without notice. Though the agreement was to take effect on July 29, the district court observed that the record includes video clips that purport to show federal agents firing tear gas and less-lethal munitions at journalists standing on SW Main Street on July 29 and into the morning of July 30. The district court found that “there was no one nearby on the street but numerous federal enforcement officers and six journalists when the munitions were deployed.”

The Federal Defendants assert that the Oregon State Police are no longer enforcing crowd control in Portland, and that the Portland Police are currently filling that role instead. But it is clear that the federal agents have remained in Portland, and Acting Secretary of DHS, Chad Wolf, stated that “no determination of timetables for reduction in protective forces has yet been made.”<sup>1</sup>

On August 10, plaintiffs filed a motion for a preliminary injunction against the Federal Defendants. After briefing was complete, the parties stipulated that the court could base its decision on the record and the parties’ arguments without holding an evidentiary hearing. The record comprises dozens of declarations, many of which include photographs and links to video files. The district court issued a detailed, sixty-one page order granting plaintiffs’ motion on August 20 and entered a preliminary injunction with terms largely identical to the terms of the July 23 TRO.

The district court’s order began by observing that the Constitution reserves the general police power to the states, and pursuant to the general police power, local officials have the authority to issue general dispersal orders on the public streets and sidewalks. The court noted that the City had separately stipulated that it would not require members of the press or legal observers to disperse, and explained that the Federal Defendants did not assert the authority to issue general dispersal orders to clear city streets and that the statutory authority the Federal Defendants relied upon did not so provide. The court's order recounts the Federal Defendants' position, which was that federal officers had been dispatched to Portland with the stated mission to protect federal property and personnel. Nevertheless, the district court was confronted with compelling photographic evidence showing that federal officers "routinely have left federal property and engaged in crowd control and other enforcement on the streets, sidewalks and parks of the City of Portland." The court's order detailed several of the dozens of declarations, photos, and video clips introduced into evidence to support plaintiffs' contention that at least some of the federal officers had intentionally targeted journalists and legal observers in retaliation for their news-reporting efforts.

<sup>1</sup> On July 28, plaintiffs filed a motion for a finding of contempt and imposition of sanctions against the Federal Defendants, alleging several violations of the July 23 TRO. The district court has not yet ruled on the motion, but noted “serious concerns” that the Federal Defendants had not complied with the July 23 TRO, and that some of the alleged misconduct occurred after the Federal Defendants reached the agreement with Governor Brown.

Having explained that local officials had separately stipulated they were not requiring journalists and legal observers to disperse, the preliminary injunction entered to address the Federal Defendants' conduct states that journalists and legal observers "shall not be subject to arrest for not dispersing following the issuance of an order to disperse." The order states that journalists and legal observers may not impede, block, or otherwise physically interfere with the lawful activities of the Federal Defendants, and recognizes that the Federal Defendants are free to issue

“otherwise lawful crowd-dispersal orders for a variety of lawful reasons;” i.e. crowd-dispersal orders not issued to clear city streets and sidewalks. The preliminary injunction also requires that journalists and observers “must comply with all laws other than general dispersal orders.”

Because the Federal Defendants argued that some protestors had masqueraded as members of the press by wearing press badges or clothing identifying them as members of the press corps, the order provides that it does not protect unlawful conduct and that anyone, even a person who appears to be a journalist, is subject to arrest for engaging in such conduct. Finally, the injunction sets out a number of indicia to assist the Federal Defendants in distinguishing between journalists, legal observers, and protesters. These indicia include visual identifiers such as press passes, people standing off to the side of protests not engaging in protest activities, people not intermixed with protest activities, and people carrying professional-grade photographic equipment. The order requires that the Federal Defendants’ uniforms bear marks allowing federal officers to be identified. The injunction also provides that if a journalist or legal observer is incidentally exposed to crowd-control devices after remaining in the area where such devices are deployed to enforce a lawful dispersal order, the Federal Defendants will not be liable for violating the injunction.

On August 25, the district court denied the Federal Defendants’ motion for a stay of the preliminary injunction pending appeal, principally concluding that the Federal Defendants had not shown a sufficient likelihood that they would suffer irreparable injury absent a stay. On appeal, a divided three-judge motions panel issued a brief, two-page order on August 27 granting the Federal Defendants’ motion for an administrative stay of the injunction pending resolution of their emergency motion for a stay pending appeal.

Having considered the parties’ complete briefing, and after hearing oral argument, we conclude that the Federal Defendants have not shown a strong likelihood of success on the merits. The Federal Defendants also failed to demonstrate they are likely to suffer irreparable injury if the preliminary injunction is not stayed pending appeal. Accordingly, we deny the Federal Defendants’ emergency motion.

I

“A stay is not a matter of right, even if irreparable injury might otherwise result to the appellant.” Virginian Ry. Co. v. United States, 272 U.S. 658, 672 (1926). “The party requesting a stay bears the burden of showing that the circumstances justify an exercise of that discretion.” Nken v. Holder, 556 U.S. 418, 433–434 (2009).

To decide whether to grant the Federal Defendants’ motion for a stay pending appeal, our case law requires that we consider: (1) whether the Federal Defendants have made a strong showing that they are likely to succeed on the merits; (2) whether the Federal Defendants will be irreparably injured absent a stay; (3) whether issuance of the stay will substantially injure the other parties interested in the proceeding; and (4) where the public interest lies. Id. at 426.

To decide whether the Federal Defendants have demonstrated a likelihood that they will succeed on the merits of their claims, we review the district court’s findings of fact for clear error, its legal conclusions de novo, and the injunction’s scope for abuse of discretion. Armstrong v. Brown, 768 F.3d 975, 979 (9th Cir. 2014); Walters v. Reno, 145 F.3d 1032, 1047 (9th Cir. 1998) (“A district court’s factual findings are entitled to deference unless they are clearly erroneous.”).

II

The bar for obtaining a stay of a preliminary injunction is higher than the Winter standard for obtaining injunctive relief. Winter v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008). We have explained that the first two Nken factors are the most critical, and that the second two factors are only considered if the first two factors are satisfied. Nken, 556 U.S. at 434–35; Al Otro Lado v. Wolf, 952 F.3d 999, 1007 (9th Cir. 2020). The Federal Defendants must show a strong likelihood of success on the merits. Doe #1 v. Trump, 957 F.3d 1050, 1062 (9th Cir. 2020).

And “simply showing some possibility of irreparable injury fails to satisfy the second factor.” Nken, 556 U.S. at 434–35 (internal citations and quotations omitted). The demanding standard applicable here requires that the Federal Defendants show “that irreparable injury is likely to occur during the period before the appeal is decided.” Doe #1, 957 F.3d at 1059.

A

The Federal Defendants argue they are likely to succeed on the merits for three reasons. First, they argue plaintiffs lack standing to pursue injunctive relief on their First Amendment retaliation claim because plaintiffs have not shown a sufficient likelihood that they will be deprived of their constitutional rights if the Federal Defendants’ crowd control measures are not subject to the district court’s preliminary injunction pending appeal. Second, they argue they will succeed on the merits of plaintiffs’ retaliation claim because there is no evidence to support the district court’s conclusion that plaintiffs’ protected activity was a substantial or motivating factor that prompted the Federal Defendants’ actions to disperse them. Third, the Federal Defendants argue they are likely to succeed on plaintiffs’ First Amendment right-of-access claim because the press and legal observers have no First Amendment right to access the streets and sidewalks where the protests are staged if the Federal Defendants order them to disperse. For these three reasons, the Federal Defendants argue they are entitled to a stay of the preliminary injunction pending appeal.<sup>2</sup>

Three elements make up the “irreducible constitutional minimum of standing”: (1) injury in fact; (2) a causal connection between the injury and the conduct complained of; and (3) a likelihood that the injury will be redressed by a favorable decision. Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 560–561 (1992). Here, only the “injury in fact” element is disputed.

“A plaintiff threatened with future injury has standing to sue ‘if the threatened injury is certainly impending, or there is a substantial risk the harm will occur.’” In re Zappos.com, Inc., 888 F.3d 1020, 1024 (9th Cir. 2018) (quoting Susan B. Anthony List v. Driehaus, 573 U.S. 149, 158 (2014)). A plaintiff may not rely “on mere conjecture about possible governmental actions” to demonstrate injury, and must instead present “concrete evidence to substantiate their fears.”

<sup>2</sup> Our case law has frequently observed the importance of the press as surrogates for the public, but we have not considered whether legal observers serve the same function. Neither the parties nor the district court focused on whether the legal observers’ right of access differs from the one enjoyed by the press. Because we do not need to decide this question in order to rule on the emergency motion for a stay, we leave it for another day.

Clapper v. Amnesty Int'l USA, 568 U.S. 398, 420 (2013). “Past exposure to illegal conduct does not in itself show a present case or controversy regarding injunctive relief . . . if unaccompanied by any continuing, present adverse effects.” City of Los Angeles v. Lyons, 461 U.S. 95, 102 (1983) (quoting O’Shea v. Littleton, 414 U.S. 488, 495–96 (1974)).

The Federal Defendants’ standing argument relies primarily on Lyons, a case involving a claim for injunctive relief asserted by a man who had been subjected to a chokehold by police officers. Id. at 102. In Lyons, the Court explained that to establish standing, the plaintiff was required to “credibly allege that he faced a realistic threat from the future application of the City’s [chokehold] policy.” Id. at 106 n.7. Because Lyons had not been subjected to a second chokehold in the time before he filed his federal complaint, the Supreme Court concluded that his assertion that he might face such abuse in the future was premised on a speculative sequence of events. Id. at 105–06. The Supreme Court explained that Lyons did not have standing to pursue equitable relief barring the use of chokeholds because “[p]ast exposure to illegal conduct does not in itself show a present case or controversy regarding injunctive relief . . . if unaccompanied by any continuing, present adverse effects.” Id. at 102 (emphasis added) (citation omitted).

Here, plaintiffs' injuries are different for several reasons. First, their risk of future injury is not speculative. Plaintiffs introduced powerful evidence of the Federal Defendants' ongoing, sustained pattern of conduct that resulted in numerous injuries to members of the press between the date the complaint was filed and the date the district court entered its preliminary injunction. The district court's preliminary injunction included twelve pages solely dedicated to factual findings that describe in detail dozens of instances in which the Federal Defendants beat plaintiffs with batons, shot them with impact munitions, and pepper sprayed them. The court's findings were supported by nineteen declarations and video and photographic evidence. The Federal Defendants do not argue that any of the district court's findings are clearly erroneous, and we conclude the findings are amply supported.

As of the time the preliminary injunction was entered, the district court found that the Federal Defendants had engaged in a pattern of conduct that had persisted for weeks and was ongoing. After reviewing plaintiffs' declarations, photos, and video clips, the district court found that many victims had been standing on public streets, sidewalks, and parks, well away from protestors, and were not engaged in unlawful activity when they were shot, tear gassed, shoved, or pepper sprayed by the Federal Defendants. Unlike Lyons, the district court found that some journalists and legal observers monitoring the protests had been injured by the Federal Defendants more than once. The district court’s findings are compelling because “the possibility of recurring injury ceases to be speculative when actual repeated incidents are documented.” Thomas v. Cnty. of Los Angeles, 978 F.3d 504, 507 (9th Cir. 1992) (internal quotation marks omitted).

The nature of plaintiffs’ injuries also sharply differs from the substantive due process injury asserted in Lyons. Plaintiffs allege that the Federal Defendants’ crowd-control measures have “chilled” the exercise of their First Amendment rights, and that this First Amendment injury is ongoing. A chilling of First Amendment rights can constitute a cognizable injury, so long as the chilling effect is not “based on a fear of future injury that itself [is] too speculative to confer standing.” Munns v. Kerry, 782 F.3d 402, 410 (9th Cir. 2015) (citing Clapper, 568 U.S. at 417–18); Libertarian Party of L.A. Cty. v. Bowen, 709 F.3d 867, 870 (9th Cir. 2013) (“[A]s the Supreme Court has recognized, a chilling of the exercise of First Amendment rights is, itself, a constitutionally sufficient injury.”).

The district court agreed that the Federal Defendants’ targeting of the plaintiffs chilled their First Amendment rights, and after analyzing the factors prescribed by Furgatch, the court concluded that the Federal Defendants’ conduct was likely to continue.<sup>3</sup> Fed. Election Comm'n v. Furgatch, 869 F.2d 1256, 1263 n.5 (9th Cir. 1989). The district court issued a lengthy and detailed order and the Federal Defendants do not challenge its factual findings. On this record, we conclude the Federal Defendants have not made a strong showing that their standing argument is likely to succeed, and have not shown that the district court abused its discretion by entering a preliminary injunction. This cuts against the emergency motion for a stay pending appeal.

We also conclude the Federal Defendants have not made the strong showing required by Nken that they are likely to succeed on the merits of plaintiffs' First Amendment retaliation claim. For this claim, plaintiffs were required to show that they were engaged in a constitutionally protected activity, the Federal Defendants' actions would chill a person of ordinary firmness from continuing to engage in the protected activity, and the protected activity was a substantial or motivating factor in the Federal Defendants’ conduct. Pinard v. Clatskanie Sch. Dist. 6J, 467 F.3d 755, 770 (9th Cir. 2006). The Federal Defendants do not contest the first or second elements of the retaliation claim, nor does there appear to be a good faith basis for doing so.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>3</sup> Furgatch instructs courts to consider five factors when determining whether conduct is likely to occur in the future: (1) the degree of scienter involved; (2) the isolated or recurrent nature of the infraction; (3) the defendant's recognition of the wrongful nature of his conduct; (4) the extent to which the defendant's professional and personal characteristics might enable or tempt him to commit future violations; and (5) the sincerity of any assurances against future violations. Fed. Election Comm'n v. Furgatch, 869 F.2d 1256, 1263 n.5 (9th Cir. 1989). The Federal Defendants do not argue that the district court misapplied any of these factors, and we see no error.

The Federal Defendants only argue that they are likely to succeed on the merits of plaintiffs’ retaliation claim because “plaintiffs have not shown their First Amendment activity was a ‘substantial or motivating factor’ in the government’s conduct.” This element of a First Amendment retaliation claim may be met with either direct or circumstantial evidence, and we have said that it involves questions of fact that normally should be left for trial. Ulrich v. City & Cty. of San

<sup>4</sup> As to the first element, plaintiffs were clearly observing and recording law enforcement activity in public, as the district court found. Fordyce v. City of Seattle, 55 F.3d 436, 439 (9th Cir. 1995) (recognizing plaintiff was exercising his “First Amendment right to film matters of public interest” when filming activities of police officers during a public protest march). The First, Third, Fifth, Seventh and Eleventh Circuits have all recognized the public’s First Amendment right to observe and film police activities in public. See Fields v. City of Philadelphia, 862 F.3d 353, 359–60 (3d Cir. 2017); Turner v. Lieutenant Driver, 848 F.3d 678, 688 (5th Cir. 2017); Gericke v. Begin, 753 F.3d 1, 7 (1st Cir. 2014); ACLU of Illinois v. Alvarez, 679 F.3d 583, 600 (7th Cir. 2012); Smith v. City of Cumming, 212 F.3d 1332, 1333 (11th Cir. 2000). As to the second element of the retaliation claim, the Federal Defendants do not challenge the district court’s finding that being shot with less-lethal munitions like pepper balls, tear gas, and paint-marking munitions, being pepper sprayed at close range, or being shoved by a law enforcement officer would chill a person of ordinary firmness from continuing to exercise their First Amendment rights.

Francisco, 308 F.3d 968, 979 (9th Cir. 2002). The district court’s extensive and thorough factual findings provide robust support for its conclusion that plaintiffs’ exercise of their First Amendment rights was a substantial or motivating factor in the Federal Defendants’ conduct. To highlight just four of the district court’s findings:

- On July 29, plaintiff Brian Conley was wearing a photographer’s vest marked “PRESS,” a helmet marked “PRESS,” and was carrying a large camera with an attached LED light and telephoto lens. After reviewing video footage submitted by plaintiffs, the district court found that Conley was filming a line of federal officers moving down the street pepper spraying peaceful protesters—including spraying a woman in the face at point blank range who was on her knees in the middle of the street with her hands up—when, without warning, a federal officer pepper sprayed Conley at point blank range.
- On the night of July 19, Jungho Kim, a photojournalist, was wearing a neon yellow vest marked “PRESS” and a white helmet marked “PRESS” on the front and rear. The district court found that Kim was standing alone, about 30 feet from federal agents, taking photographs, when suddenly and without warning, Kim was shot in the chest, just below his heart with a less-lethal munition. A photograph submitted with Kim’s declaration shows that he was shot where the word “PRESS” was printed on his vest.
- On the night of July 26, Daniel Hollis, a videographer, was wearing a press pass and a helmet marked “PRESS” in bright orange tape, and carrying a large, professional video-recording camera. Hollis was filming a group of federal agents massed outside the federal courthouse. “Almost immediately,” the federal agents shot at him, striking him just left of his groin. He turned and began to run away, but was shot again in the lower back.

- On July 27, Amy Katz, a photojournalist, was wearing a hat and tank top marked “PRESS” and carrying a camera with a telephoto lens while covering the protests. Katz was photographing a federal agent who pushed a man down a flight of stairs while arresting him. Another federal agent physically blocked Katz and tried to stop her from photographing the arrest. Katz stepped to the side to continue photographing the arrest, and the federal agent physically shoved her away.

Plaintiffs’ expert witness, Gil Kerlikowske, provided a declaration supporting the district court’s conclusion that these incidents were retaliatory in nature and did not reflect appropriate crowd-control tactics.<sup>5</sup> Kerlikowske opined that defending the federal courthouse in Portland mainly involves establishing a perimeter around the building, and that there is no need to target or disperse journalists. According to Kerlikowske, in crowd-control situations it is inappropriate to shoot non-lethal munitions at a person’s head, chest, or back. Kerlikowske also opined that pepper balls and tear gas canisters should not be aimed at people at all, as those munitions are intended to be shot at the ground where they explode and release their contents into the air. In his view, virtually all of the journalists' injuries were caused by the improper use of force, including shooting people who were not engaged in threatening acts, and the Federal Defendants' misuse of crowd-control munitions.

All told, the district court's findings describe at least forty-five instances similar to the four highlighted here, and all of them occurred between July 15 and July 30 while plaintiffs were observing and recording the Black Lives Matter protests in downtown Portland. The forty-five instances were "just several examples selected" by the district court "from the extensive evidence provided by Plaintiffs." The court was clear that "[t]here are more." Plaintiffs submitted a total of nineteen declarations with their motions for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction. Many of the events described by the declarations were corroborated by accompanying photographs and video clips.

Because the district court's findings include so many instances in which plaintiffs were standing nowhere near protesters while photographing and observing the Federal Defendants' actions, they provide exceptionally strong evidentiary support for the district court's finding that some of the Federal Defendants were motivated to target journalists in retaliation for plaintiffs' exercise of their First Amendment rights. Indeed, in response to this shocking pattern of misconduct, the dissent contemplates that plaintiffs' allegations may well support Bivens actions and claims of excessive force against individual federal agents.<sup>6</sup>

The evidence that at least some of the Federal Defendants' conduct was retaliatory supports the district court's conclusion that the plaintiffs are likely to succeed on the merits of their retaliation claim. On this record, we do not hesitate to conclude that the Federal Defendants have not made the required strong showing that they are likely to prevail on the merits of the claim. This evidence of retaliatory conduct also cuts against the emergency motion for a stay pending appeal.<sup>7</sup>

3

The Federal Defendants have not shown that they are likely to succeed on the merits of plaintiffs' First Amendment right-of-access claim. To begin, the Federal Defendants reframe the issue and mischaracterize the preliminary injunction as recognizing a special, across-the-board exemption for members of the press and legal observers. But the threshold issue presented is whether plaintiffs have a constitutionally protected right to access the public forum where the protests are staged, and as the district court observed, the preliminary injunction does not afford plaintiffs any special rights beyond those enjoyed by the general public pursuant to the First Amendment.

<sup>7</sup> The dissent argues that the retaliation claim does not justify enjoining the Federal Defendants from issuing dispersal orders because the dispersal orders themselves are not retaliatory. This argument overlooks that the preliminary injunction expressly states the Federal Defendants are not precluded from issuing lawful crowd-dispersal orders for a variety of reasons.

In Press-Enterprise II, the Supreme Court articulated a two-part test to determine whether a member of the public has a First Amendment right to access a particular place and process. Press-Ent. Co. v. Superior Court of Cal., 478 U.S. 1 (1986). First, a court must ask “whether the place and process has historically been open to the press and general public” and “whether public access plays a significant positive role in the functioning of the particular process in question.” Id. at 8. If a qualified right of access exists, the government can overcome that right and bar the public by showing that it has “an overriding interest based on findings that closure is essential to preserve higher values and is narrowly tailored to serve that interest.” Id. at 9.

The Federal Defendants argue that the press is not entitled to any special First Amendment right of access to observe and record the protests taking place on Portland’s streets and sidewalks. But the Press-Enterprise II test is not dependent upon plaintiffs’ occupation, and plaintiffs do not argue that it affords them a special right of access not shared by the general public. We agree with plaintiffs that the press is entitled to a right of access at least coextensive with the right enjoyed by the public at large; the press is certainly not disfavored. See Pell v. Procunier, 417 U.S. 817, 833–34 (1974). Indeed, the Supreme Court has repeatedly observed that excluding the media from public fora can have particularly deleterious effects on the public interest, given journalists’ role as “surrogates for the public,” Richmond Newspapers, Inc. v. Virginia, 448 U.S. 555, 572–73 (1980); Cox Broad. Corp. v. Cohn, 420 U.S. 469, 492 (1975) (“Without the information provided by the press most of us and many of our representatives would be unable to vote intelligently or to register opinions on the administration of government generally.”). Recognizing the outsized effect of denying access to the press, we have observed that the Supreme Court’s Press-Enterprise II test “balances the vital public interest in preserving the media’s ability to monitor government activities against the government’s need to impose restrictions if necessary for safety or other legitimate reasons.” Leigh v. Salazar, 677 F.3d 892, 900 (9th Cir. 2012).<sup>8</sup>

The Federal Defendants do not contest that the place—Portland’s streets and sidewalks—and the process—public protests and law enforcement’s response to them—have historically been open to the public. See Hague v. Comm. for Indus. Org., 307 U.S. 496, 515 (1939) (“Wherever the title of streets and parks may rest, they have immemorially been held in trust for the use of the public and, time out of mind, have been used for purposes of assembly, communicating thoughts between citizens, and discussing public questions.”).

Public demonstrations and protests are clearly protected by the First Amendment, and a protest not open to the press and general public is not a public demonstration. See, e.g., Snyder v. Phelps, 562 U.S. 443, (2011) (reiterating that “speech on matters of public concern . . . is at the heart of the First Amendment’s protection” (internal quotation marks omitted)); City of Houston v. Hill, 482 U.S.

<sup>8</sup> The Press-Enterprise II test emerged from a line of cases involving access to criminal judicial proceedings, but by its terms the test is not limited to any particular type of plaintiff or any particular type of forum. The Ninth Circuit and several other courts have applied Press-Enterprise II’s analytical framework to other settings, including planning commission meetings, student disciplinary records, state environmental agency records, settlement records, transcripts of state utility commission meetings, resumes of candidates for school superintendents, and legislator’s telephone records, among others. See Leigh, 677 F.3d at 899 and n.5 (collecting cases).

451, 472 (1987) (“[T]he First Amendment recognizes, wisely we think, that a certain amount of expressive disorder not only is inevitable in a society committed to individual freedom, but must itself be protected if that freedom would survive.”); NAACP v. Claiborne Hardware Co., 458 U.S. 886, 907–12 (1982) (holding that a boycott of local businesses “clearly involved constitutionally protected activity” including “speech, assembly, association, and petition”); Collins v. Jordan, 110 F.3d 1363, 1371 (9th Cir. 1996) (“Activities such as demonstrations, protest marches, and picketing are clearly protected by the First Amendment.”).

Nor do the Federal Defendants deny that public access plays a significant positive role in the functioning of our democracy. Just as streets and sidewalks historically have been recognized as being open to the public, the press has long been understood to play a vitally important role in holding the government accountable.<sup>9</sup> Indeed, the public became aware of the circumstances surrounding George Floyd’s death because citizens standing on a sidewalk exercised their First Amendment rights and filmed a police officer kneeling on Floyd's neck until he died.

“The free press is the guardian of the public interest,” and “[o]pen government has been a hallmark of our democracy since our nation’s founding.” Leigh, 677 F.3d at 897, 900. “In a society in which each individual has but limited time and resources with which to observe at first hand the operations of his government, he relies necessarily upon the press to bring to him in convenient form the facts of those operations.” Cox Broad. Corp., 420 U.S. at 490–91. Transparency assures that the government’s response is carried out “fairly to all concerned,” and public access discourages “misconduct of participants, and decisions based on secret bias or partiality.” Richmond Newspapers, 448 U.S. at 569. Given our deeply entrenched recognition of the public’s right to access city streets and sidewalks, circuit precedent establishing the right to film public police activity, and the broadly accepted principle that the public’s interest is served by the role the press plays, the district court had strong support for its conclusion that plaintiffs demonstrated a likelihood of success on the merits of their First Amendment right-of-access claim.

We are mindful that the Federal Defendants could have overcome plaintiffs’ right of access by demonstrating “an overriding interest based on findings that closure is essential to preserve higher values and is narrowly tailored to serve that interest.” Press-Enterprise II, 478 U.S. at 9. There is no question the Federal Defendants have a strong interest in protecting federal property and persons on federal property, and we do not doubt the district court’s findings related to the difficult and dangerous situation posed by protesters who engaged in violent and criminal conduct. But Federal Defendants argue that dispersing the press, regardless of whether they are on federal property, is essential to protecting the government’s interests. They further argue that their dispersal orders cannot be tailored in any way and that the district court erred by granting a special exemption from crowd-control measures to members of the press and legal observers. We disagree.

First, the district court did not grant a special exemption to the press; it found that dispersing the press was not essential to protecting the government’s interests. The district court was faced with a mountain of evidence that the Federal Defendants routinely left federal property to engage in crowd control. The injunction recognizes that the Federal Defendants did not claim the authority to issue general dispersal orders on Portland’s streets and sidewalks, that local law enforcement retains that authority pursuant to the general police power, and that Portland’s law enforcement agreed not to require journalists and legal observers to disperse. The preliminary injunction does nothing to hinder Federal Defendants from arresting individuals engaged in violent or criminal acts.

The Federal Defendants' argument that the injunction grants a broad special exemption to the plaintiffs hinges on the implied assumption that they have the authority to take action to disperse members of the public who are neither on federal property nor threatening it. At oral argument before our court, the Federal Defendants declined to provide their view of the scope of their authority to take such action, but the district court's order makes clear that, in the district court, the Federal Defendants did not argue they have "the legal authority to declare a riot and order persons to disperse from the city streets in Portland." We need not precisely define the limits of the Federal Defendants' authority in order to resolve their emergency motion, but it cannot be debated that the United States Constitution reserves the general police power to the states, U.S. CONST. amend. X; United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 618 (2000), and the district court found that the Federal Defendants "routinely have left federal property and engaged in crowd control and other enforcement on the streets, sidewalks, and parks of the City of Portland."

The district court did not question that the provision relied upon by the Federal Defendants, 40 U.S.C. § 1315, grants them the authority to protect federal property, including issuing and enforcing dispersal orders against people on or threatening federal property. Paragraph six of the injunction expressly recognizes that the Federal Defendants may issue “lawful crowd-dispersal orders for a variety of lawful reasons.” In footnoting that the authority provided by § 1315 does not allow the Federal Defendants to declare an unlawful assembly on the city’s streets or to disperse people from city streets, the court carefully distinguished the Federal Defendants’ ability to disperse people from federal property and described their authority outside the property as limited to performing authorized duties “to the extent necessary to protect the property and persons on the property.” 40 U.S.C. § 1315(b)(1) (emphasis added). But the Federal Defendants’ suggestion that § 1315 confers authority to take action to disperse members of the public who are neither on nor threatening federal property is dubious.<sup>10</sup> See United States v. Baldwin, 745 F.3d 1027, 1029 (10th Cir. 2014) (Gorsuch, J.) (discussing § 1315 and its implementing regulations as they relate to “[p]ersons in and on [Federal] property” (alterations in original)). On remand, the district court may have occasion to more precisely define the scope of the Federal Defendants’ authority if the Federal Defendants indicate that they intend to issue dispersal orders outside of federal property for lawful purposes.

The district court was not persuaded that the Federal Defendants’ response to the plaintiffs was essential or narrowly tailored to serve the government’s interests. Press-Enterprise II, 478 U.S. at 9. The district court’s conclusions are well supported and the Federal Defendants have not established that they will likely prevail in their efforts to show that the dispersal of press was essential. Nor did the Federal Defendants show that the need to defend federal property made it impossible to tailor their dispersal orders.

The district court cited plaintiffs' expert, Kerlikowske, who opined that "[d]efending the federal courthouse in Portland mainly involves establishing a perimeter around the building, and there is no reason to target or disperse journalists from that position." The district court further relied on Kerlikowske's opinion that "trained and experienced law enforcement personnel are able to protect public safety without dispersing journalists and legal observers and can differentiate press from protesters, even in the heat of crowd control." The district court found this expert qualified, credible, and persuasive. Rather than deferring to the court's findings, the dissent examines the record anew, decides that Kerlikowske did not adequately address crowd control, and questions the district court's tailoring analysis. But the Federal Defendants conceded that they made no effort to tailor their response, and on the record at this preliminary stage they have not made the strong showing required by Nken that dispersing the press was essential or that their response was narrowly tailored to serve the government's interest in protecting federal property.

We also agree with the district court that the City's ability to comply with a similarly worded injunction strongly undercuts the Federal Defendants' argument.

The City has not required journalists and authorized legal observers to disperse when it has issued crowd control orders to the protesters. After the district court entered the first temporary restraining order against the City on July 2, the district court “specifically invited the City to move for amendment or modification if the original TRO was not working or to address any problems at the preliminary injunction phase.” But the City did not seek modification. Instead, on July 16 the City stipulated to entry of a preliminary injunction that was “nearly identical to the original TRO.” The City’s willingness to tailor the dispersal orders it issues pursuant to its general police power is strong evidence that the Federal Defendants’ dispersal of journalists and legal observers is not essential to defend federal property, and that it is possible for the Federal Defendants to tailor their methods more narrowly.

By its terms, the preliminary injunction the district court entered against the Federal Defendants addresses each of the reasons the Federal Defendants advanced to argue that it was impossible to tailor their dispersal orders. As to the contention that journalists or legal observers might interfere with federal law enforcement if not required to disperse, the preliminary injunction expressly prohibits journalists and legal observers from impeding, blocking, or otherwise interfering with the lawful conduct of the Federal Defendants. The preliminary injunction leaves the Federal Defendants free to make arrests if there is probable cause to believe a crime has been committed, even if the perpetrator is dressed as a journalist or legal observer. The preliminary injunction also provides that the Federal Defendants will not be liable for violating the injunction if journalists or legal observers remain in the area after a dispersal order is issued, and are incidentally exposed to crowd-control devices. Finally, though the Federal Defendants argued that large and unique identifying markings on their uniforms could inhibit their ability to carry out their duties, the district court concluded they did not support this claim. Indeed, the district court went to great lengths to make sure the terms of the injunction do not impede the federal defendants' ability to safely achieve their mission.<sup>11</sup>

The dissent faults us for deferring to the district court's findings, but that is precisely what our precedent requires. Walters, 145 F.3d at 1047. It is not our role to second-guess the district court's factual findings; we review the district court's findings for clear error, and we do not see any. The dissent is not so constrained. It reviews the facts de novo, reframes all of the protests as riots, and concludes the Federal Defendants must be permitted to issue dispersal orders without limit. Yet the majority of the protests have been peaceful, and the record is replete with instances in which members of the press were targeted when they were not mixed with, or even proximate to, protesters. Even the Federal Defendants recognize that the general police power is reserved to the states, and the response to protesters on the public streets of Portland is being handled by the state and local police. As for the Federal Defendants' actions on federal property, the injunction expressly recognizes that the Federal Defendants are free to issue dispersal orders for a variety of lawful reasons. Their authority to issue dispersal orders to protect federal property has not been questioned.

<sup>11</sup> Plaintiffs' expert Kerlikowske opined that identifiable markings on law enforcement officers' uniforms increase accountability, act as a check and deterrent against misconduct, and will not interfere with federal officers' ability to perform their duties. This term of the injunction was added after the Federal Defendants were unable to identify their own officers in videos submitted in support of plaintiffs' still-pending motion for sanctions and contempt of the July 23 TRO. The Federal Defendants contend the district court overreached, but requiring the officers' uniforms to bear unique identifiable markings is a common-sense method to ensure that non-compliance with the court's order may be addressed.

But on the record before us, the Federal Defendants have not shown the general dispersal orders they issued were lawful, much less essential or narrowly tailored. Press-Enterprise II, 478 U.S. at 9. We do not condone any form of violence, nor did the district court, but the court found no evidence that any of the named plaintiffs engaged in unlawful conduct. The many peaceful protesters, journalists, and members of the general public cannot be punished for the violent acts of others. “[T]he proper response to potential and actual violence is for the government to ensure an adequate police presence . . . and to arrest those who actually engage in such conduct, rather than to suppress legitimate First Amendment conduct as a prophylactic measure.” Collins v. Jordan, 110 F.3d 1363, 1373 (9th Cir. 1996) (internal citations omitted). Accordingly, we conclude the Federal Defendants have not made a strong showing that they are likely to succeed on the merits of plaintiffs’ First Amendment right-of-access claim, nor that this argument supports their emergency motion for a stay pending appeal.

B

We turn next to the second Nken factor: whether the Federal Defendants have shown a likelihood they will suffer irreparable injury if the district court’s preliminary injunction is not stayed pending appeal. Nken, 556 U.S. at 426. The Federal Defendants contend the district court abused its discretion because the scope of the injunction is unworkable. Specifically, they argue the injunction will force federal officers to make snap judgments to distinguish journalists and legal observers from protesters. They argue federal officers will face irreparable injury absent a stay pending appeal because the preliminary injunction will hinder their ability to safely protect federal property and people on federal property, and will generally place them in the untenable position of having to choose between risking their safety and violating the preliminary injunction.

The district court was not persuaded, and for purposes of their emergency motion for a stay pending appeal, the Federal Defendants have not shown that the court likely erred. First, as we have explained, the preliminary injunction entered against the Federal Defendants is one of two preliminary injunctions the district court entered. In a separate preliminary injunction, the City stipulated that it would not require journalists and legal observers to disperse from Portland's streets and sidewalks after it issues general dispersal orders. In the lengthy preliminary injunction the court issued to address the Federal Defendants' conduct, the court took pains to explain that the general police power is reserved to the states, and that the Federal Defendants had not taken the position that they had the authority to issue general dispersal orders on Portland's streets and sidewalks.

Second, it is clear the district court has worked tirelessly to respond to a tense and sometimes chaotic situation. In order to provide clear direction, the district court required the Federal Defendants to broadly disseminate, to the federal agents responding to the protesters, the three pages of its opinion and order that enumerate the terms of the injunction. The Federal Defendants read one sentence from the three-page excerpt in isolation and argue that the preliminary injunction provides a special, citywide exemption to dispersal orders for journalists and legal observers. In fact, it is apparent the district court was actually providing the Federal Defendants with an unambiguous statement of actions they may and may not take in the field, including the requirement that the Federal Defendants mark their uniforms in some way to allow officers to be identified, thereby incentivizing compliance with the court's orders. Read as a whole, the preliminary injunction does not provide a special exemption for journalists and legal observers. Rather, the terms of the injunction account for the City's stipulation that journalists and legal observers will not be required to disperse from Portland's streets and sidewalks. The injunction also accounts for the district court's finding that the Federal Defendants, at least at this preliminary stage, have not shown that it is essential to disperse press to protect federal property, nor that their response was narrowly tailored.

Third, the preliminary injunction unambiguously provides that the Federal Defendants will not be held liable for violating the preliminary injunction by incidentally exposing journalists or legal observers to otherwise lawful crowd-control measures. The Federal Defendants' argument that they may be irreparably harmed if individuals disguise themselves as journalists or legal observers in order to commit crimes or interfere with law enforcement is similarly unpersuasive because the order explicitly allows the Federal Defendants to arrest anyone if they have probable cause to believe a crime is being committed—regardless of whether that person is, or appears to be, a journalist or legal observer. The preliminary injunction expressly prohibits journalists and legal observers from impeding, blocking, or otherwise physically interfering with the lawful activities of the Federal Defendants.

The district court recognized that Federal Defendants have sustained injuries over the course of the summer, but found no evidence that any of the named plaintiffs engaged in any of the unlawful conduct that caused their injuries, and the Federal Defendants point to no evidence that the injuries they sustained were more severe or more frequent during the time they were operating under the substantially similar terms of the July 23 TRO, or that the alleged confusion in distinguishing between protestors and plaintiffs resulted in any injury.

The district court was heavily influenced by the City’s agreement to enter into a stipulated preliminary injunction that largely mirrors the preliminary injunction entered against the Federal Defendants, and observed “[t]he City did not contend that the terms of the stipulated preliminary injunction were intrusive, unworkable, or vague.” In fact, the City supported entry of the instant preliminary injunction against the Federal Defendants, arguing “[t]he actions of [F]ederal

[D]efendants are escalating violence, inflaming tensions in [Portland], and harming Portlanders who seek to engage in nonviolent protests in support of racial justice.”

Plaintiffs’ expert, Gil Kerlikowske, also seriously undermined the Federal Defendants’ argument that they faced irreparable injury. Relying on Kerlikowske’s expert opinion, the district court concluded that the Federal Defendants’ concerns regarding the workability of the injunction were exaggerated. The district court noted Kerlikowske’s statement that “during his tenure in Seattle, law enforcement did not target or disperse journalists and there were no adverse consequences.” Kerlikowske opined that the prohibitions contained in the July 23 temporary restraining order, which the district court incorporated into the preliminary injunction, were both safe and workable for law enforcement. Kerlikowske stated that dispersing press and legal observers is not necessary to protect public safety, and further explained that trained and experienced law enforcement personnel can differentiate press from protesters in the heat of crowd control.<sup>12</sup>

On the present record, despite the Federal Defendants' assertion that all of their officers and agents are adequately trained, the district court found numerous instances in which Federal Defendants shot munitions directly at journalists' and legal observers' chests, arms, backs, and heads while they were standing entirely apart from the protesters. These methods directly conflict with Kerlikowske's opinion that crowd-control munitions are not appropriately aimed at the upper body, and that pepper balls and tear gas canisters should not be aimed at people at all. We review the court's findings for clear error, and for purposes of the Federal Defendants' emergency motion, the Federal Defendants have not shown that they will likely establish the district court's findings are clearly erroneous.

We also conclude the Federal Defendants' have not made the required showing that they will suffer irreparable harm if the preliminary injunction is not stayed pending a decision on the merits of their appeal. The district court took care to address the Federal Defendants' concerns regarding the workability of the injunction. The terms of the injunction itself adequately address their concerns, and the Federal Defendants' continued objection that the injunction is unworkable is undermined by the City's agreement to operate pursuant to a substantially similar order. Kerlikowske's opinions, which the court found persuasive and credible, further support the district court's finding that the terms of the preliminary injunction are safe and workable.

<sup>12</sup> Plaintiffs' briefing repeatedly asserts that the Federal Defendants lack crowd control training, and the Federal Defendants repeatedly respond that they are trained in the appropriate use of force. At this preliminary stage, the record did not allow the district court to determine whether the Federal Defendants differentiate between crowd control training and training in the proper use of force. Nor does the record make clear whether the training provided to U.S. Marshals differs from the training provided to personnel from the Department of Homeland Security. Those questions may be resolved at a later stage in the proceedings.

The dissent decides that the Federal Defendants are likely to suffer irreparable harm absent a stay pending appeal because the preliminary injunction does not explain how arresting individual suspects is as feasible or safe as using general crowd control tactics during a riot. But the district court found that the protests have been largely peaceful, and the preliminary injunction does not prevent the Federal Defendants from issuing lawful dispersal orders to protect federal property if and when it is threatened by violent protests. We conclude the Federal Defendants have not shown that they will suffer irreparable injury if the district court's preliminary injunction is not stayed.

C

The Federal Defendants have not satisfied the first two Nken factors, but we briefly note that the final two factors also strongly suggest the Federal Defendants' motion must be denied. See Nken, 556 U.S. at 435; Al Otro Lado, 952 F.3d at 1006.

The third Nken factor asks whether the other parties to the litigation will be substantially injured if the district court's preliminary injunction is stayed pending appeal. Nken, 556 U.S. at 426.

The City supported the imposition of the preliminary injunction against the Federal Defendants. As explained, the City asserted that the Federal Defendants' presence in Portland escalated violence and inflamed tensions. Although the Federal Defendants have entered into some type of agreement with Governor Brown, the district court voiced "serious concerns that the Federal Defendants have not fully complied with the Court's original TRO." The district court also highlighted evidence in the record suggesting intentional targeting of journalists or legal observers after the imposition of the TRO. Further, the district court found that the day after the Federal Defendants reached the agreement with the Governor, federal agents fired tear gas at journalists standing nowhere near protesters. In light of this evidence, and the Federal Defendants' stated intention to remain in Portland to continue to protect the federal buildings should they deem local authorities' efforts unsatisfactory, the likelihood that the City will suffer substantial injury supports denial of the emergency motion for a stay pending appeal.

Plaintiffs also face substantial injury if the Federal Defendants' motion is granted because the district court found that the Federal Defendants' conduct chilled the exercise of their First Amendment rights. The district court made this finding after reviewing plaintiffs' vivid descriptions and photographic evidence of injuries they sustained as bystanders. "It is well established that the deprivation of constitutional rights 'unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury.'" Melendres v. Arpaio, 695 F.3d 990, 1002 (9th Cir. 2012) (quoting Elrod v. Burns, 427 U.S. 347, 373 (1976)); see also, e.g., Assoc. Press v. Otter, 682 F.3d 821, 826 (9th Cir. 2012) ("The loss of First Amendment freedoms, even for minimal periods of time, unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury."). In sum, the Federal Defendants have failed to show that the other parties to the litigation will not be substantially injured if the district court's preliminary injunction is stayed pending appeal.

The fourth Nken factor requires courts to determine where the public interest lies. Nken, 556 U.S. at 426. When the government is a party, the irreparable injury and public interest factors merge, id. at 435, but the Federal Defendants are incorrect to suggest that a showing of harm to the government commands the conclusion that the public interest weighs entirely in favor of whichever outcome the government seeks. Our court has consistently balanced the public interest on the side of the plaintiffs against the public interest on the side of the government to determine where the public interest lies. See, e.g., Padilla v. Immigration & Customs Enforcement, 953 F.3d 1134, 1147–48 (9th Cir. 2020) (determining the “balance of the equities and public interest favors plaintiffs”).

Here, the public interest on the Federal Defendants’ side is the uncontested interest in protecting federal agents and property. The harms the Federal Defendants assert relate to the potential challenges the preliminary injunction poses to their ability to safely and effectively protect federal property and personnel. On the other hand, plaintiffs also assert a strong public interest: “It is always in the public interest to prevent the violation of a party’s constitutional rights.” Padilla, 953 F.3d at 1147–48 (internal quotation marks omitted). When weighing public interests, courts have “consistently recognized the significant public interest in upholding First Amendment principles.” Assoc. Press, 682 F.3d at 826 (quoting Sammartano v. First Judicial Dist. Court, 303 F.3d 959, 974 (9th Cir. 2002), abrogated on other grounds by Winter v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 22 (2008)). The Federal Defendants assert a very important public interest, but the record fully supports the district court's conclusion that the Federal Defendants' interest does not require dispersing plaintiffs. They have not threatened federal property, and the journalists, in particular, provide a vitally important service to the public. Accordingly, the final Nken factor does not weigh in favor of a stay.

The Federal Defendants have not made a strong showing that they are likely to succeed on the merits of plaintiffs' claims. Nor have they shown that they are likely to suffer irreparable injury as a result of the district court's preliminary injunction. Further, a stay of the district court's injunction would substantially injure both the City and the plaintiffs. For these reasons, we cannot say at this juncture that the Federal Defendants are entitled to a stay of the preliminary injunction pending appeal. The Federal Defendants' emergency motion for a stay pending appeal is DENIED, and the administrative stay entered August 27, 2020 is lifted.

O'SCANNLAIN, J., dissenting:

MOLLY C. DWYER, CLERK
U.S. COURT OF APPEALS

In the words of the majority—and I agree—“the district court has worked tirelessly to respond to a tense and sometimes chaotic situation”<sup>1</sup> arising from peaceful urban protest events that have degenerated into riots and destructive mob violence, resulting, inevitably, in crowd dispersal actions by law enforcement. Unfortunately, because the constitutional interests of the parties are misaligned in the provisions of the injunction before us, I must, respectfully, dissent from the order. Since the government is likely to prevail on the merits and the other requisite factors are met, I would grant the motion for stay pending appeal.

With its decision today, the majority of this motions panel validates the transformation of the First Amendment-based “right of public access” to governmental proceedings into a special privilege for self-proclaimed journalists and “legal observers” to disregard crowd dispersal orders issued by federal law enforcement officers. The district court’s injunction erroneously curtails an important law enforcement tool for responding to protest events that threaten federal property and personnel, thereby limiting options available for federal officers precisely when they are most needed. While well-meaning, the district court’s decision constitutes a significant and unwarranted departure from the traditional, qualified “right of public access” to criminal judicial proceedings that has been carefully delineated by the Supreme Court. In short, the majority’s decision approves the mutation of a very limited historical right reinforced by a millennium of legal tradition into a broad, amorphous entitlement that finds support nowhere in our precedents or in the historical sources of the First Amendment.

Similarly, the majority’s decision to uphold the injunction before us ostensibly rests on the deference that it accords to the district court’s factual findings with respect to plaintiffs’ “retaliation” claim, which, indeed, reveal quite a disturbing pattern of apparent misconduct by certain federal officers. But even these unfortunate facts cannot justify granting journalists and “legal observers” a unique exemption from lawful dispersal orders—orders that were neither found, nor alleged, to be retaliatory.

I

Because the facts set forth in the majority opinion do not adequately reveal the full picture, I respectfully restate them as found in the record.

A

In the early morning of July 3, 2020, the recent and ongoing political protests in downtown Portland, Oregon took a violent and destructive turn. Rioters smashed the glass entryway doors of the Mark O. Hatfield Federal Courthouse and attempted to set fire to the building. They threw balloons containing an accelerant into the lobby and fired powerful commercial fireworks toward the accelerant, which ignited a fire in the lobby. Vandalism, destruction of property, and assault on federal law enforcement officers securing the building continued throughout the Fourth of July holiday weekend, and federal agents made multiple arrests.

Before July 3rd, federal law enforcement officers at the Hatfield Courthouse had been stationed in a defensive posture, intended to de-escalate tensions with protesters by remaining inside and responding only to breach attempts on the building and assaults on personnel or to other serious crimes. With limited support from the Portland Police Bureau (“PPB”), however, federal agents struggled to contain protests that often focused on the Courthouse and frequently devolved into violence in the late evenings and early mornings.

When this pattern of violent unrest culminated in the July 3rd attack, the Department of Homeland Security (“DHS”) changed its tactics and authorized federal agents to take additional action to protect the Courthouse, and to identify and to arrest serious offenders. After federal officers adopted this more assertive posture, the protests became larger and more intense. These protest events were chaotic and dynamic, and federal officers had frequent confrontations with rioters. According to DHS’s Gabriel Russell, the law enforcement officer leading the federal response in Portland, 120 federal officers experienced injuries, including broken bones, hearing damage, eye damage, a dislocated shoulder, sprains, strains, and contusions. Conflict between federal officers and rioters continued until the early morning of July 30th, after which incidents diminished as a result of DHS reaching an agreement with the Governor of Oregon for the Oregon State Police to provide security in the areas adjacent to the Hatfield Courthouse.

During the period of unrest, journalists and “legal observers” ostensibly reporting on law enforcement’s response to the riots were frequently interspersed with protesters when events degenerated into violence. Some of these individuals even participated in violent and unlawful conduct, including assaults on federal officers and destruction of federal property. For example, a person with a helmet marked “press” used a grinder to attempt to breach the fence surrounding the Hatfield Courthouse. Another person with a “press” helmet entered Courthouse property and encouraged others to join, yelling to the crowd that “they can’t arrest us all!” A man wearing a vest labeled “press” was seen throwing a hard object toward police. In yet another incident, a Courthouse staff member reported being kicked by someone wearing clothing marked “press.”

B

Plaintiffs are a newspaper organization and individual journalists and “legal observers,” some of whom are affiliated with the National Lawyers Guild (“NLG”) and the American Civil Liberties Union (“ACLU”). They allege that federal law enforcement officers with DHS and the U.S. Marshals Service (“USMS”) operating in Portland during the month of July (1) infringed their First Amendment “right of access” to public streets and sidewalks to observe and to document law enforcement’s response to the riots near the Hatfield Courthouse; and, (2) deliberately and unlawfully “retaliated” against them for exercising their putative First Amendment right to report on those events by targeting them with tear gas, less-lethal munitions, and pepper spray.

Plaintiffs initially filed suit against the City of Portland, and unnamed individual PPB officers, in federal district court, alleging similar constitutional violations arising out of the PPB’s response to the protest events. For example, Plaintiffs alleged a “broader pattern of the Portland police repeatedly and intentionally shooting, gassing, and beating journalists and [legal] observers.” Among other incidents, Plaintiffs alleged that the PPB slammed a reporter from The Oregonian in the back with a truncheon, even as she was displaying her press pass, and shoved a reporter from the Portland Tribune into a wall, after he had identified himself as media, when he initially refused to comply with an order to disperse. Plaintiffs further alleged that the PPB had publicly announced that it would use force to disperse reporters unless they had been previously selected to embed with officers. Plaintiffs obtained a temporary restraining order (“TRO”) against the PPB, without the City of Portland’s consent, on July 2nd, with terms similar to those contained in the instant preliminary injunction. In its order granting the TRO, the district court concluded that Plaintiffs had demonstrated “serious questions going to the merits” with respect to their claim of a First Amendment-based “right of public access” to observe law enforcement’s response to protest events. The TRO specified that press and “legal observers” were exempt from any orders to disperse issued by the PPB.

After alleged retaliation by a federal law enforcement agent on July 12th, plaintiffs filed an emergency motion seeking the district court’s leave to file an amended complaint describing such incident and also adding DHS and USMS as defendants in the case. The City of Portland filed an objection, arguing, inter alia, that plaintiffs’ claims against the City of Portland and those against DHS and USMS raised no common questions of law or fact. The City maintained that PPB operates under fundamentally different conditions than federal law enforcement agencies, including different directives governing the use of force, different limitations on the use of force, and a separate command structure.

On July 16th, before the district court had an opportunity to rule on the motion to bring DHS and USMS into the case, plaintiffs and the City jointly filed a “Stipulated Preliminary Injunction” that substantially mirrored the TRO’s terms. The following day, the district court granted plaintiffs’ motion for leave to file the operative Second Amended Complaint.

The Second Amended Complaint sets forth independent causes of action based on the First and Fourth Amendments of the U.S. Constitution and Article I, Sections 8 and 26 of the Oregon Constitution. It seeks both damages and equitable relief. The day it was filed, Plaintiffs immediately moved for a TRO against DHS and USMS, with the request for injunctive relief limited only to their aforementioned First Amendment claims.

On July 22nd, the City filed a brief in support of the entry of the TRO against DHS and USMS. The City accused both agencies of escalating violence, harming non-violent protesters, and effectively kidnapping people off of Portland streets. Notably, on the same day, the Portland City Council passed a resolution prohibiting the PPB from cooperating with federal officers deployed in Portland.

The district court granted the TRO on July 23rd and extended it for an additional 14 days on August 6th. On August 20th, the district court entered the instant preliminary injunction, from which DHS and USMS now seek emergency relief pending appeal.

The preliminary injunction provides, among other things, that journalists and “legal observers” are exempt<sup>2</sup> from general dispersal orders issued by federal officers. It further requires that federal officers refrain from using force or threatening arrest to compel such persons to disperse after an order to disperse has been issued. It also sets forth a non-exclusive list of indicia by which officers are to determine who qualifies as a journalist or “legal observer.”<sup>3</sup>

<sup>2</sup> The precise language of the district court’s order provided that journalists and “legal observers” “shall not be required to disperse following the issuance of an order to disperse, and such persons shall not be subject to arrest for not dispersing following the issuance of an order to disperse.”

<sup>3</sup> The eight-part injunction entered by the district court is lengthy, not to say labyrinthine, but warrants repetition in full for appreciation of its extraordinary scope:

1. The Federal Defendants, their agents and employees, and all persons acting under their direction are enjoined from arresting, threatening to arrest, or using physical force directed against any person whom they know or reasonably should know is a Journalist or Legal Observer (as explained below), unless the Federal Defendants have probable cause to believe that such individual has committed a crime. For purposes of this Order, such persons shall not be required to disperse following the issuance of an order to disperse, and such persons shall not be subject to arrest for not dispersing following the issuance of an order to disperse. Such persons shall, however, remain bound by all other laws. No Journalist or Legal Observer protected order this Order, however, may impede, block, or otherwise physically interfere with the lawful activities of the Federal Defendants.
2. The Federal Defendants, their agents and employees, and all persons acting under their direction are further enjoined from seizing any photographic equipment, audio- or video- recording equipment, or press passes from any person whom they know or reasonably should know is a Journalist or Legal Observer (as explained below), or ordering such person to stop photographing, recording, or observing a protest, unless the Federal Defendants are also lawfully seizing that person consistent with this Order. Except as expressly provided in Paragraph 3 below, the Federal Defendants must return any seized equipment or press passes immediately upon release of a person from custody.
3. If any Federal Defendant, their agent or employee, or any person acting under their direction seize property from a Journalist or Legal Observer who is lawfully arrested consistent with this Order, such Federal Defendant shall, as soon thereafter as is reasonably possible, make a written list of things seized and shall provide a copy of that list to the Journalist or Legal Observer. If equipment seized in connection with an arrest of a Journalist or Legal Observer lawfully seized under this Order is needed for evidentiary purposes, the Federal Defendants shall promptly seek a search warrant, subpoena, or other court order for that purpose. If such a search warrant, subpoena, or other court order is denied, or equipment seized in connection with an arrest is not needed for evidentiary purposes, the Federal Defendants shall immediately return it to its rightful possessor.

4. To facilitate the Federal Defendants' identification of Journalists protected under this Order, the following shall be considered indicia of being a Journalist: visual identification as a member of the press, such as by carrying a professional or authorized press pass, carrying professional gear such as professional photographic equipment, or wearing a professional or authorized press badge or other official press credentials, or distinctive clothing, that identifies the wearer as a member of the press. It also shall be an indicium of being a Journalist under this Order that the person is standing off to the side of a protest, not engaging in protest activities, and not intermixed with persons engaged in protest activities, although these are not requirements. These indicia are not exclusive, and a person need not exhibit every indicium to be considered a Journalist under this Order. The Federal Defendants shall not be liable for unintentional violations of this Order in the case of an individual who does not carry or wear a press pass, badge, or other official press credential, professional gear, or distinctive clothing that identifies the person as a member of the press.
5. To facilitate the Federal Defendants' identification of Legal Observers protected under this Order, the following shall be considered indicia of being a Legal Observer: wearing a green National Lawyers Guild-issued or authorized Legal Observer hat (typically a green NLG hat) or wearing a blue ACLU-issued or authorized Legal Observer vest. It also shall be an indicium of being a Legal Observer protected under this Order that the person is standing off to the side of a protest, not engaging in protest activities, and not intermixed with persons engaged in protest activities, although these are not requirements.
6. The Federal Defendants are not precluded by the Order from issuing otherwise lawful crowd-dispersal orders for a variety of lawful reasons. The Federal Defendants shall not be liable for violating this injunction if a Journalist or Legal Observer is incidentally exposed to crowd-control devices after remaining in the area where such devices were deployed after the issuance of an otherwise lawful dispersal order.

7. Plaintiffs and the Federal Defendants shall promptly confer regarding how the Federal Defendants can place unique identifying markings (using numbers and/or letters) on the uniforms and/or helmets of the officers and agents of the Federal Defendants who are specially deployed to Portland so that they can be identified at a reasonable distance and without unreasonably interfering with the needs of these personnel. Based on the Court's understanding that Deputy U.S. Marshals and Courtroom Security Officers stationed in Portland who are under the direction of the U.S. Marshal for the District of Oregon are not part of the force that has given rise to events at issue in the lawsuit, they are exempt from this requirement. Agents wearing plain clothes and assigned to undercover duties also are exempt from this requirement. If the parties agree on a method of marking, they shall submit the terms of their agreement in writing to the Court, and the Court will then issue a modified preliminary injunction that incorporates the parties' agreement. If the parties cannot reach agreement within 14 days, each party may submit its own proposal, and each side may respond to any other party's proposal within seven days thereafter. The Court will resolve any disputes on this issue and modify this preliminary injunction appropriately.
8. To promote compliance with this Preliminary Injunction, the Federal Defendants are ordered to provide copies of the verbatim text of the first seven provisions of this Preliminary Injunction, in either electronic or paper form, within 14 calendar days to: (a) all employees, officers, and agents of the Federal Defendants currently deployed in Portland, Oregon (or who later become deployed in Portland, Oregon while this Preliminary Injunction is in force), including but not limited to all personnel in Portland, Oregon who are part of Operation Diligent Valor, Operation Legend, or any equivalent; and (b) all employees, officers, and agents of the Federal Defendants with any supervisory or command authority over any person in group (a) above.

relief. As the court, in its role as this motions panel, today denies such emergency request for a stay pending appeal, the injunction will go back into effect and this matter will proceed before the district court, pending disposition of the government's appeal of the preliminary injunction by a merits panel of this court. Plaintiffs' Fourth Amendment and state constitutional claims did not form part of the request for preliminary relief and remain pending before the district court, as do plaintiffs' requests for compensatory and punitive damages, attorney's fees, and costs. As the City's stipulation to a preliminary injunction resolved only Plaintiffs' request for equitable relief, Plaintiffs' remaining claims against the City and individual PPB officers also remain pending in the district court.

I agree with the majority that the Nken v. Holder factors must determine our disposition of the government's request for emergency relief, but I respectfully disagree with how the majority analyzes those factors. 556 U.S. 418, 426 (2009). I address each factor in turn, beginning with the government's burden to make a strong showing of likelihood of success on the merits.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>4</sup> Upon appeal of a preliminary injunction, the district court's conclusions of law are reviewed de novo, its underlying factual findings are reviewed for clear error, and the scope of the injunction is reviewed for abuse of discretion. Padilla v. Immigration & Customs Enf't, 953 F.3d 1134, 1141 (9th Cir. 2020). In addition, "we review First Amendment questions de novo since they present mixed questions of law and fact, requiring us to apply principles of First Amendment

The district court granted injunctive relief on the basis of Plaintiffs’ two First Amendment claims: (1) a “right of public access” to public streets and sidewalks to observe and to document law enforcement officers engaged in riot control and crowd dispersal; and (2) a right to be free from “retaliation” by federal officers for reporting on law enforcement’s response to civil unrest.

With respect to the “right of public access” issue, the district court purported to apply the framework articulated in Press-Enterprise Co. v. Superior Court of Cal. (“Press-Enterprise IP”) for evaluating “claim[s] of a First Amendment right of access to criminal proceedings[.]” 478 U.S. 1, 8–9 (1986). Pursuant to that doctrine, in evaluating a purported claim of public access to a proceeding, a court must consider: (1) “whether the place and process have historically been open to the press and general public;” and (2) “whether public access plays a significant positive role in the functioning of the particular process in question.” Id. “If the particular proceeding in question passes these tests of experience and logic, a qualified First Amendment right of public access attaches.” Id. “A presumptive right of access to any particular proceeding may be overcome by an overriding jurisprudence to the specific facts of this case.” Gerritsen v. City of Los Angeles, 994 F.2d 570, 575 (9th Cir. 1993).

government interest based on findings that closure is essential to preserve higher values and is narrowly tailored to serve that interest.” Id.

But the First Amendment-based right of public access and its corresponding framework have never been deemed to apply to riot control and crowd dispersal in a public street.<sup>5</sup> The Supreme Court has discussed only a qualified right of access to certain criminal judicial proceedings and has never recognized a right of public access outside of that context. See Press-Enterprise II, 478 U.S. at 8–9 (right of public access to preliminary hearings in criminal cases); Press-Enterprise Co. v. Superior Court of Cal., 464 U.S. 501, 503, 508 (1984) (right of public access to voir dire hearings in criminal cases); Richmond Newspapers, Inc. v. Virginia, 448 U.S. 555, 580 (1980) (right of public access to criminal trials).

<sup>5</sup> The majority, echoing arguments offered by plaintiffs’ counsel, invokes prior decisions of our court referencing a First Amendment-based right to record law enforcement activity in public. See Reed v. Lieurance, 863 F.3d 1196, 1211 (9th Cir. 2017); Fordyce v. City of Seattle, 55 F.3d 436, 439 (9th Cir. 1995). Those cases are inapposite, however, as they do not address situations where law enforcement is responding to rioting and violent unrest. At most, those cases merely recognize the right of a person to use a recording device in a public forum, before any measures have been taken to restrict access to the forum, such as issuance of a general dispersal order. They certainly do not stand for the extraordinary proposition that an individual is exempt from a dispersal order or other riot control measure merely because he is engaged in the act of recording law enforcement operations. Moreover, as a matter of doctrine, neither case applied right-of-public-access analysis. In fact, Reed applied public forum analysis, which the district court notably chose not to do here. 863 F.3d at 1211. Cf. fn. 9, infra.

In the decades since Press-Enterprise II, the courts of appeals have expanded the right-of-public-access doctrine considerably beyond its initial, paradigmatic application to criminal proceedings—including, in our court, to a variety of non-criminal, non-adjudicative, governmental proceedings, such as a horse gather on federal land, Leigh v. Salazar, 677 F.3d 892, 894 (9th Cir. 2012), and a referendum on a regulatory order conducted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Cal-Almond, Inc. v. U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, 960 F.2d 105, 109 (9th Cir. 1992)—but the doctrine is not without limit. Rather, the Press-Enterprise II framework has been confined to claims of access to specific governmental proceedings and has never been applied to public spaces in general or to private events therein. Cf. Leigh, 677 F.3d at 894 (evaluating access to horse gather, not to federal lands); Whiteland Woods, L.P. v. Township of W. Whiteland, 193 F.3d 177, 181 (3d Cir. 1999) (evaluating access to town planning commission meeting, not to town hall). Here, protests in a public street are privately sponsored and organized events, and when they degenerate into riots, the crowd control measures taken by law enforcement are spontaneous and temporary responses to ongoing criminal activity. Protests and resulting riots are simply not governmental proceedings to which a right of public access may be claimed.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>6</sup> Curiously, the complaint might be better viewed as claiming a “right of exclusion” from crowd dispersal actions by federal law enforcement. Plaintiffs seek access to a putative proceeding, the necessary impact of which they actually

Similarly, even where the Press-Enterprise II framework applies, it requires a court to evaluate a claim of access by first determining whether “the place and the process” have historically been open to the public, and whether the public’s presence plays a critical role in the specific proceeding at issue. 478 U.S. at 8–9 (emphasis added). Here, the district court noted that streets, sidewalks, and parks constitute traditional public fora, which have been open to speech and expression from “time out of mind,” Hague v. Comm. for Indus. Org., 307 U.S. 496, 515 (1939), but it failed to evaluate any history of public access to law enforcement operations responding to ongoing criminal activity, including violent civil unrest that threatens federal property and personnel. In the absence of historical analysis regarding the proceeding, as distinguished from the place, a presumptive right of public access simply does not attach. Cf. Leigh, 677 F.3d at 894 (calling for inquiry into history of public access to horse gathers, not to federal lands).

The district court’s reasoning here is reflective of an emerging pattern of lower courts expanding the right-of-public-access doctrine well beyond its original scope, with little consideration of a limiting principle. Cf., e.g., N.Y. Civil Liberties Union v. N.Y. City Transit Auth., 684 F.3d 286, 298 (2d Cir. 2012) (noting, with approval, that “there is no principle that limits the First Amendment right of wish to avoid. This contradiction highlights the discrepancy between plaintiffs’ claims and traditional right-of-public-access case law.

[public] access to any one particular type of government process”). When the Supreme Court first articulated the First Amendment right of public access in Richmond Newspapers, Inc. v. Virginia, it drew on an extensive historical record of public access to criminal trials in the Anglo-American legal tradition, dating back to “the days before the Norman Conquest.” 448 U.S. at 580. After canvassing more than a thousand years of “unbroken, uncontradicted” history, the Court felt justified in concluding that the right to attend criminal trials is “implicit in the guarantees of the First Amendment.” Id. In Press-Enterprise II, the Court limited its inquiry to post-Bill of Rights history, but nonetheless identified a “near uniform” “tradition of accessibility” to preliminary hearings in criminal cases dating back to the “celebrated trial of Aaron Burr” in 1807. 478 U.S. at 10–11.

Lower courts, by contrast, including ours, have extended the right of public access largely without extensive historical backing and without further guidance from the Supreme Court regarding the specific contours of the doctrine. If the majority’s reasoning here is any indication, the doctrine is growing haphazardly, like a weed in an untended garden, presaging conflict with more established legal rights and powers. This doctrinal disorder warrants further review.

Even if right-of-public-access analysis were appropriate under these circumstances, any right to access the proceeding in question must apply equally to the press and the public. See Cal. First Amendment Coal. v. Woodford, 299 F.3d 868, 873 n.2 (9th Cir. 2002) (“As members of the press, plaintiffs’ First Amendment right of access to governmental proceedings is coextensive with the general public’s right of access.” (citing Houchins v. KQED, Inc., 438 U.S. 1, 15–16 (1978))). Indeed, it is a long-established and fundamental principle of constitutional law that “the First Amendment does not guarantee the press a constitutional right of special access to information not available to the public generally.” Branzburg v. Hayes, 408 U.S. 665, 684 (1972). Cf. Erwin Chemerinsky, Protect the Press: A First Amendment Standard for Safeguarding Aggressive Newsgathering, 33 U. Rich. L. Rev. 1143, 1145 (2000) (“[The Supreme Court’s] rulings, without exception, have failed to provide any First Amendment protection for newsgathering. Indeed, the Court has declared that there is no exemption for the press from general laws. In other words, while engaged in newsgathering, the press is not exempt from tort liability or criminal laws, no matter how compelling the need for reporting to protect the public’s health and safety.”)

But here, the district court’s injunction, by its own terms, grants self-identified journalists and “legal observers” a special privilege to disregard dispersal orders with which the general public must comply, which has no legal basis. The injunction is thus at odds with a core First Amendment principle and a common-sense rule of thumb: the media have the same rights as the rest of us.<sup>7</sup>

The majority opinion here rejects this characterization of the injunction and insists that it creates no special rights. According to the majority, the injunction merely prevents federal agents from seeking to disperse the press from local streets and sidewalks when the City's current policy is that press may remain there, even during riots, but does not seek to regulate crowd dispersal on federal property. On this view, the injunction is a wholesome exercise in federalism!

But the majority's analysis is inconsistent with the plain text of the district court's order and misapplies principles of constitutional structure. The injunction, by its own terms, appears to extend to dispersal orders issued on federal property, and is certainly not geographically limited in any explicit way. The injunction thus allows the press, but not others, to disregard dispersal orders that are clearly lawful. That can only be understood as a special dispensation that is not consistent with the First Amendment.

<sup>7</sup> Even if journalists had some special claim to enhanced Constitutional protection when reporting on law enforcement activities, grounded in the First Amendment's "freedom of the press" clause, "legal observers" have never been accorded any special recognition under our law. Cf. Wise v. City of Portland, No. 3:20-CV-01193-IM, 2020 WL 5231486, at *7 (D. Or. Sept. 2, 2020) (declining to recognize special status for "protest medics" in similar Portland protests) ("[T]his Court has found no legal authority for affording protest medics, as defined by Plaintiffs, unique recognition under the First Amendment beyond that afforded any individual who attends a protest. . . . They simply have no unique status under the First Amendment that allows them to disregard lawful [dispersal] orders."). That the district court's injunction appears to empower the ACLU and NLG to bestow immunity from lawful dispersal orders is particularly dubious given the status of these organizations as perennial litigation adversaries of law enforcement agencies. In sum, like "protest medics," there is no cognizable basis for "legal observers" to receive "special dispensation" to disregard lawful dispersal orders. Wise, 2020 WL 5231486 at *2.

In any event, even if federal agents are located on City property when they issue, or seek to enforce, an order to disperse, principles of federalism do not justify carving out a special exemption for the press from such orders simply because City police would typically allow for one. The Federal Government is indeed acknowledged by all to be one of limited and enumerated powers, see Nat'l Fed'n of Indep. Bus. v. Sebelius, 567 U.S. 519, 534 (2012), and it is not entitled to exercise general or residual powers, see United States v. Comstock, 560 U.S. 126, 153 (2010) (Kennedy, J., concurring) (“Residual power, sometimes referred to (perhaps imperfectly) as the police power, belongs to the States and the States alone”), such as the prevention and punishment of crime and disorder on local streets, sidewalks, and parks, see United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 618 (2000) ([W]e can think of no better example of the police power, which the Founders denied the National Government and reposed in the States, than the suppression of violent crime and vindication of its victims.”).

It is an inversion of our constitutional structure, however, to require federal officers to abide by municipal policies regarding crowd dispersal when carrying out their statutory prerogative to protect federal property and personnel. Federal officials are prohibited, of course, from “commandeering” state and local law enforcement officers to help secure federal property and must instead rely on voluntary cooperation with state and local officials for this purpose. See Printz v. United States, 521 U.S. 898, 935 (1997). Where such cooperation is inadequate, the federal government must deploy its own agents. In these circumstances, the agency’s lawful directives regarding crowd dispersal, i.e., those adopted pursuant to a constitutionally enacted federal statute or rule, take precedence over state and local ones, not the other way around. Such an arrangement does not violate principles of federalism or dual sovereignty but is rather required by them. See, e.g., Alden v. Maine, 527 U.S. 706, 732 (1999) (federal government sets the supreme law of the land when acting within its enumerated powers).

The majority opinion relies heavily on the district court’s conclusion, with which it agrees, that it is, in fact, unlawful for federal agents to issue orders to disperse if they are situated beyond federal property. According to the majority, DHS and USMS have never claimed to have such authority, and the federal statute upon which they principally rely, 40 U.S.C. § 1315, does not provide for it.

The suggestion that the government has simply conceded this question is overstated. Although this issue was not adequately briefed by either party, the government has consistently articulated the position, both before the district court and on appeal, that federal law enforcement officers may issue dispersal orders on federal property, and in several circumstances, may effectuate those orders beyond federal property, such as by establishing a secure perimeter. In particular, the government has invoked § 1315(b)(1), which provides that the Secretary of Homeland Security may designate DHS agents to protect federal property, including designating agents for duty in “areas outside the property to the extent necessary to protect the property and persons on the property.”

I am inclined to agree with the government’s general understanding of its statutory authority. As the government has pointed out, it would be unreasonable to require that federal officers charged with securing federal buildings wait until violent opportunists have breached the property line or entered the building before taking any protective measures. There is very likely a statutory basis for at least some crowd dispersal activity adjacent to a federal courthouse faced with violent unrest and the other challenging circumstances at issue here.

I also agree with the majority, however, that a determination of the precise scope of DHS’s and USMS’s statutory authority is not required for resolution of this emergency motion. Indeed, the statutory question muddles the First Amendment analysis upon which the district court’s injunction is ultimately grounded. Presumably, if federal officers have no statutory basis for dispersals beyond federal property, then any such dispersals are ultra vires, and the inquiry is at an end. There is no reason to proceed to an evaluation of the constitutional rights of persons subject to such purportedly unlawful measures, let alone to construct a complex injunction that distinguishes the rights of press and “legal observers” from the rights of other participants in a protest. Ultimately, a lack of federal statutory authority for off-property dispersals, as such, cannot serve as the sole, or even primary, basis upon which this particular injunction is upheld, given its reliance on a painstaking analysis of purported constitutional violations with respect to specific persons. Thus, even if I were to accept the majority’s view that the injunction’s aim is simply to prohibit off-property dispersals by federal officers, which I do not, the injunction’s terms would be woefully underinclusive.

Even if a presumptive right of access for press and “legal observers” to witness law enforcement’s response to a riot could be said to exist, the inquiry does not end there. Under Press-Enterprise II, a presumptive right of public access to any particular proceeding may be overcome by an overriding government interest based on findings that closure is essential to preserve higher values and is narrowly tailored to serve that interest. 478 U.S. at 8–9.

The district court’s narrow tailoring analysis failed to take proper account of the government’s interests in defense of federal personnel and property, which justify use of general dispersal orders during riot control situations that threaten federal resources, even in a public forum.<sup>8</sup> Here, considering the chaotic and dynamic situation during Portland’s recent protest events, which have frequently devolved into riots, along with the nefarious actions by certain individuals falsely purporting to be press or “legal observers,” closure of the forum through general dispersal orders is essential to the defense of federal personnel and property. Indeed, the closure of governmental proceedings has been deemed proper in several instances where the government’s interest was arguably less immediate and the restriction on access was equally broad. Cf., e.g., Dhiab v. Trump, 852 F.3d 1087, 1095 (D.C. Cir. 2017) (government’s interest in preventing future threats to military operations would justify closure of habeas proceedings); U.S. v. Index Newspapers LLC, 766 F.3d 1072, 1087 (9th Cir. 2014) (government’s interest in secrecy justified closure of certain grand jury proceedings); ACLU v. Holder, 673 F.3d 245, 252 (4th Cir. 2011) (government’s interest in integrity of ongoing fraud investigation justified sealing of complaints filed in False Claims Act actions).

<sup>8</sup> In addition, the district court’s narrow tailoring analysis was conceptually flawed because the closure evaluated in the Press-Enterprise II framework should be that of a specific governmental proceeding, not of a public forum generally. Utilizing “right-of-public-access” analysis to evaluate the closure of a “traditional public forum,” such as a public street, is unsettling because government restrictions on First Amendment activity in such locations are usually evaluated under “public forum analysis,” which has been more extensively developed in the case law and provides more guidance regarding the policing of protest events. See, e.g., Perry Educ. Ass’n v. Perry Local Educators’ Ass’n, 460 U.S. 37, 45 (1983); Int’l Action Ctr. v. City of New York, 587 F.3d 521, 527 (2d Cir. 2009); Coal. to Protest Democratic Nat’l Convention v. City of Boston, 327 F. Supp. 2d 61, 69–70 (D. Mass.), aff’d sub nom. Bl(a)ck Tea Soc’y v. City of Boston, 378 F.3d 8 (1st Cir. 2004).

Moreover, if the categories of “journalist” and “legal observer” in fact include all members of the public engaged in observation, as distinguished from speech or protest—as the majority seems to suggest—then the government’s interests in full closure of the “proceeding” are even more compelling. Otherwise, in the event of a riot in a public forum that threatens federal property, federal officers could disperse only members of the public that are speaking, assembling, and protesting, but not members of the public that are observing or documenting. Peaceful protesters caught up in the riot would have to obey the dispersal order, but peaceful observers would not. This differential treatment is groundless and, in any event, would render federal dispersal orders a dead letter, even in the face of an undeniable threat to federal property and personnel. Federal law enforcement agents simply would not be allowed to clear the street. Such a prohibition is not only inconsistent with the government’s overriding interest in security in cases of violent unrest that threatens federal property and personnel, it is also contrary to established law in other First Amendment settings, which permits general dispersal orders in similar circumstances. Cf., e.g., Bible Believers v. Wayne Cty., Mich., 805 F.3d 228, 252 (6th Cir. 2015) (“The police may go against the hecklers, cordon off the speakers, or attempt to disperse the entire crowd if that becomes necessary.”). Carr v. D.C., 587 F.3d 401, 409–10 (D.C. Cir. 2009) (“[W]hen police face an unruly crowd they may give a dispersal order and then arrest those who, after reasonable opportunity to comply, fail to do so. We continue to acknowledge that this tactic will be invaluable to police in certain circumstances. A dispersal order might well be necessary in a situation in which a crowd is substantially infected with violence or otherwise threatening public safety.” (internal citations and quotation marks omitted)); Wise, 2020 WL 5231486 at *2 (recognizing propriety of general dispersal orders in response to Portland riots).

The only way the majority arrives at a different conclusion is by according deference to the district court’s factual findings, which placed heavy emphasis on the City of Portland’s consent to abide by an injunction with nearly identical terms and a declaration submitted by former DHS official Gil Kerlikowske stating that law enforcement officers may respond effectively to riots without dispersing journalists and “legal observers.” Evaluating whether a government measure is narrowly tailored is not simply a matter of ordinary fact-finding, however. Narrow tailoring is viewed as a mixed question of fact and law that requires a delicate balancing of legal principles as applied to specific circumstances. See Gilbrook v. City of Westminster, 177 F.3d 839, 861 (9th Cir. 1999); Gerritsen v. City of Los Angeles, 994 F.2d 570, 575 (9th Cir. 1993) (“[W]e review First Amendment questions de novo since they present mixed questions of law and fact, requiring us to apply principles of First Amendment jurisprudence to the specific facts of this case.” (internal quotation marks omitted)); see also Mastrovincenzo v. City of New York, 435 F.3d 78, 100 (2d Cir. 2006) (“Our narrow-tailoring inquiry requires us to apply principles of First Amendment jurisprudence to the specific facts of this case, and therefore we treat this issue as a mixed question of law and fact that we may resolve on appeal.” (internal quotations marks omitted)); Casey v. City of Newport, R.I., 308 F.3d 106, 116 (1st Cir. 2002) (“Inescapably, the application of the narrow tailoring test entails a delicate balancing judgment.” (citations omitted)). Accordingly, I would revisit the district court’s narrow tailoring inquiry, which I believe did not correctly balance the interests at stake.

The City’s stipulation does not have the import that the district court, and the majority, ascribe to it. That the City ultimately agreed to the terms of the injunction does not show that it complied with them, let alone that it did so and managed to protect property and personnel. In any event, the City’s agreeableness should not be overstated here. The PPB is still alleged to have followed until recently a policy of dispersing press and “legal observers,” the TRO was entered without the City's consent, and, after the City agreed to a preliminary injunction, it suggested that modifications would be required.<sup>9</sup>

Moreover, as already discussed, holding DHS and USMS to the City's policies and practices reflects a misunderstanding of the relationship between federal and local law enforcement, each of which operates under a separate command structure and is typically entitled to set different enforcement priorities and to follow different directives regarding lawful crowd control tactics, including general dispersal orders. In this case, the City not only sought to distinguish the PPB from federal law enforcement, it has been explicitly adverse to the presence of federal officers in Portland, leveling serious allegations of unlawful conduct against them, and even going so far as to prohibit the PPB from cooperating with federal agents to provide security for the Hatfield Courthouse. The City's actions, and its filings in the district court, suggest that it has a divergent assessment of the severity of the threat posed to federal personnel and property by protest events that degenerate into riots, and of the proper manner of dealing with that threat. The

<sup>9</sup> The City also resisted a very similar request for injunctive relief brought by so-called "protest medics." Wise, 2020 WL 5231486 at *2. The City apparently argued, and the district court agreed, that an injunction exempting "protest medics" from dispersal orders would be unworkable for the PPB. Why the City expects the PPB to identify and to exempt "legal observers," but not "protest medics," is difficult to understand. Cf. fn. 7, supra.

City is entitled, of course, to utilize different crowd control tactics, but the City's choices obviously do not bind federal law enforcement agencies.

Similarly, Kerlikowske's testimony does not adequately address crowd control under the specific circumstances faced by federal officers in Portland. For example, he deals in a conclusory manner with the evidence placed in the record regarding the involvement of putative journalists and "legal observers" in criminal acts, stating that federal officers "were not fooled" by the "press" labels and that trained officers are capable of dealing with such incidents on an individualized basis. But effectuating an arrest may not be feasible or safe in the chaotic and dynamic environment of a riot that threatens federal property and personnel, which is why dispersal orders—and related crowd control tactics, such as deployment of tear gas—are understood to be legitimate law enforcement tools in the first place. Cf. Wise, 2020 WL 5231486 at *2 (recognizing propriety of general dispersal orders in responding to Portland riots); Don't Shoot Portland v. City of Portland, No. 3:20-CV-00917-HZ, 2020 WL 3078329, at *4 (D. Or. June 9, 2020) (allowing use of tear gas in situations where safety of public or police is at risk). Given the conclusory nature of Kerlikowske's testimony on this point, it is hardly definitive.

Accordingly, the government has made a strong showing that it is likely to succeed in demonstrating that the First Amendment-based right of public access does not support the district court's injunction.

B

With respect to the “retaliation” claim, the district court also concluded that plaintiffs were likely to succeed, largely based on its detailed factual findings indicating a disturbing pattern of unwarranted force by federal agents. The majority opinion here discusses the “retaliation” claim extensively and ultimately defers to these factual findings.

Even if plaintiffs’ retaliation claim were viable, however, that claim alone cannot justify this injunction. The district court’s factual findings regarding retaliation, while apparently based on a meticulous examination of the record, bear no relation to the injunctive relief actually entered. General dispersal orders were not among the acts alleged to be retaliatory, nor did the district court make any findings to support such a conclusion. An injunction that exempts plaintiffs—not to mention, journalists and “legal observers” more generally—from dispersal orders is thus far broader than necessary to provide relief for the injuries alleged, and documented, as a result of retaliation.<sup>10</sup> Indeed, Judge Immergut, of the very same district court, relied on such reasoning in denying a similar request for injunctive relief based on First Amendment “retaliation” just two weeks after the instant preliminary injunction was entered. Wise, 2020 WL 5231486 at *8 (injunction not warranted where instances of alleged targeting appeared to occur when “protest medics” refused to follow dispersal orders).

<sup>10</sup> Remarkably, some of the allegations in the complaint regarding “retaliation” may well support Bivens actions and claims of excessive force against individual officers, but that is not what is before us today. Bivens v. Six Unknown Fed. Narcotics Agents, 403 U.S. 388, 395 (1971).

Accordingly, I would hold that, regardless of whether plaintiffs’ have stated a valid First Amendment “retaliation” claim, an injunction that exempts them from non-retaliatory dispersal orders is overbroad and an abuse of discretion. See Cal. v. Azar, 911 F.3d 558, 584 (9th Cir. 2018) (“The scope of the remedy must be no broader and no narrower than necessary to redress the injury shown by the [plaintiff].”)

I conclude that DHS and USMS have made a strong showing that they are likely to succeed in demonstrating that the district court’s extraordinary injunction was issued without an adequate legal basis. This critical Nken factor favors grant of the government’s emergency motion for stay pending appeal.

III

The remaining Nken factors also favor a stay pending appeal here. First, while a closer question, the government has shown that it is likely to suffer irreparable harm during the pendency of the appeal if the injunction is not stayed, because it is unworkable for federal officers to distinguish journalists and “legal observers” in the midst of a riot that threatens federal property and personnel based on the nebulous criteria established by the district court, particularly in light of the incidents of press and “legal observer” involvement in violent unrest.

The majority rejects the government’s showing on this factor, stating that the injunction is carefully drawn to avoid undue interference with DHS’s and USMS’s defense of federal resources, that the PPB has been operating safely and effectively under nearly identical terms, and that Kerlikowske’s declaration indicates that general dispersal orders are unnecessary for crowd control. The majority’s characterization of the order as carefully drawn is misleading because the order merely restates existing legal rules, such as an officer’s power to make an arrest based on probable cause. And the order does not explain how effectuating arrest of individual suspects is as feasible or safe as utilizing general crowd control tactics during a riot that threatens federal property and personnel. Similarly, the City’s stipulation and Kerlikowske’s declaration do not warrant the treatment they receive, for the reasons discussed above.

Second, the harms to the government are serious because the injunction’s curtailment of general dispersal orders will compromise the security of federal personnel and property, whereas, if there is no right of public access, as I have argued, then any harm to plaintiffs from a stay is minimal because they do not have a right to remain in the street after they have been ordered to disperse, and the injunction does not protect them from retaliation. Third, for similar reasons, the public interest in maintenance of order and public safety also favors stay of an overbroad injunction that unduly interferes with law enforcement operations, while offering little, if any, protection for plaintiffs' actual constitutional rights. This combination of showings justifies a stay pending appeal. See Leiva-Perez v. Holder, 640 F.3d 962, 970 (9th Cir. 2011) (stay warranted where irreparable harm is probable, there is a strong likelihood of success on the merits, and the public interest does not weigh heavily against a stay).

IV

Because the government has made a strong showing that it is likely to succeed in demonstrating that the injunction lacks an adequate legal basis, and the other Nken factors also weigh in favor of a stay, I respectfully dissent and would grant the emergency motion for stay pending appeal.

Subject: Portland Civil Unrest -- Eighth Complaint Filed -- Pettibone v. Trump

Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner – We write to update you on the filing of an eighth matter relating to federal operations in Portland. On August 26, 2020, individuals Mark Pettibone, Fabiym Acuay, Andre Miller, Nichol Denison, Maureen Healy, Christopher David, Duston Obermeyer, James McNulty, the Black Millennial Movement, and the non-profit corporation Rose City Justice, filed a lawsuit in the District Court of Oregon against President Trump (in his official capacity), Acting Secretary Wolf (individual and official capacity), FPS Regional Director Gabriel Russell (individual and official capacity), unknown individual federal officers/agents (individual capacities), DHS, and USMS.

Plaintiff Pettibone alleges that he was walking home after attending a protest near the Hatfield Courthouse in Portland when federal officers/agents put him in an unmarked vehicle without cause or explanation and transported him to the courthouse. At the courthouse, he was photographed, searched, handcuffed, Mirandized, and put in a cell. Mr. Pettibone further alleges that after he “refused to answer questions and requested a lawyer,” the federal officers/agents released him.

Plaintiffs Fabiym Acuay, Andre Miller, Nichol Denison, Maureen Healy, Christopher David, Duston Obermeyer, and James McNulty allege they were attending protests near the Hatfield Federal Courthouse when federal officers/agents used excessive force against them. Plaintiff Acuay, Miller, Denison, and Healy allege federal officers/agents shot or threw munitions at them. These plaintiffs allege the munitions hit them in the head. Plaintiffs David and Obermeyer allege federal officers/agents used chemical irritants on them and beat them. Plaintiff McNulty alleges federal officers/agents threw a flash bang grenade that detonated “at his feet” and then shot him four times with various munitions. The Black Millennial Movement and Rose City Justice allege that federal officers/agents exposed their members to tear gas. Rose City Justice further alleges that federal officers/agents shot its members with munitions. Plaintiffs allege that various injuries resulted from these actions.

Plaintiffs assert Bivens claims (for violations of the First and Fourth Amendments), Administrative Procedure Act claims, an ultra vires claim of actions beyond authorized powers, conspiracy to deprive civil rights, and failure to prevent a conspiracy to deprive civil rights, against various Defendants. Plaintiffs are seeking monetary damages, various declaratory judgments, various forms of injunctive/equitable relief, and fees/costs.

We (b)(5) will continue to keep you updated. Please let us know if you have any questions or would like to discuss. Thanks.

I. INTRODUCTION

1. Plaintiffs are individual Oregonians—or, in the case of Black Millennial Movement and Rose City Justice, Inc., associations of individual Oregonians—who lawfully participated in protests in Portland, Oregon directed against systemic racism and police violence towards Black Americans following the Minneapolis Police killing of George Floyd on May 25, 2020. This action arises out of Defendants’ unlawful attempts to crush Black protesters and their supporters through the use of excessive force and illegal detentions against Plaintiffs in violation of their rights under the First and Fourth Amendments of the United States Constitution as well as federal statutory law.

2. As part of a federal mission known as “Operation Diligent Valor,” spurred by President Donald J. Trump and directed by the purported Acting Director of the United States Department of Homeland Security (“DHS”) Chad Wolf, the federal government deployed more than a hundred federal law enforcement officers or agents employed by a variety of federal agencies in an alleged effort to “quell” the protests, which were occurring near the Mark O. Hatfield Federal Courthouse (the “Hatfield Courthouse”) in the center of Portland. Such federal law enforcement officials, heavily armed and clad in military-type camouflage or dark uniforms, indiscriminately used violent tactics on lawful protesters, including shooting them in the head and body with impact munitions and pepper balls, spraying them directly in the face with pepper spray, shoving them to the ground, hitting and beating them with batons, firing massive clouds of tear gas at them, and, in some instances, arresting and detaining them without any lawful basis. The federal agencies or divisions and their leaders and employees responsible for this conduct are the Defendants in this action.

3. Defendants’ actions in support of “Operation Diligent Valor” manifestly violated Plaintiffs’ rights enshrined in the First and Fourth Amendments to the United States Constitution: the rights to peaceful assembly, to freedom of speech, and to freedom from unwarranted governmental seizures.

4. Defendants’ actions also violated federal statutory law for at least two reasons:

a. First, “Operation Diligent Valor” was not legally authorized. Pursuant to 40 U.S.C. § 1315(a), the Acting Secretary of DHS has limited statutory authority to designate DHS employees to “protect the buildings, grounds, and property that are owned, occupied, or secured by the Federal Government . . . and the persons on the property.” Defendant Wolf, however, had no such authority because he was not properly designated and serving as the Acting Secretary of DHS under the requirements of the Homeland Security Act of 2002, 6 U.S.C. § 113(g), and the Federal Vacancies Reform Act, 5 U.S.C. § 3348. As a result, he had (and still has) no authority whatsoever under 40 U.S.C. § 1315 and his designation of DHS officers pursuant to “Operation Diligent Valor” was null and void.

b. Second, even assuming “Operation Diligent Valor” had been properly authorized, the DHS officers conducting the operation exceeded their limited powers under 40 U.S.C. § 1315, which does not allow making warrantless arrests or taking actions such as detaining individuals or suppressing protests in locations that are away from, or not required to protect, federal property.

5. Plaintiffs are now asking the Court to protect them and vindicate their rights by declaring Defendants’ actions unlawful, entering appropriate injunctive relief, and awarding them economic damages for the violation of their constitutional rights.

II. PARTIES

A. Plaintiffs.

6. Plaintiff Mark Pettibone is a 30-year-old resident of Multnomah County, Oregon and a citizen of the United States. He is currently employed as an essential worker by a national grocery company. He is a supporter of Black Lives Matter and a participant in the recent protests outside the Hatfield Courthouse.

7. Plaintiff Fabiym Acuay (a.k.a. and referred to herein as Mac Smiff) is a 39-year-old resident of Multnomah County, Oregon and a citizen of the United States. He is an artist, a utility worker, and the editor-in-chief of a hip-hop magazine. He is a veteran activist and has been attending Black Lives Matter events in Portland for more than six years, including the recent protests outside the Hatfield Courthouse.

8. Plaintiff Andre Miller is a 36-year old resident of Clackamas County, Oregon and a citizen of the United States. He is currently employed as a facilities and warehouse manager. He is a supporter of Black Lives Matter and participated in the recent protests outside the Hatfield Courthouse on multiple occasions.

9. Plaintiff Nichol Denison is a 39-year-old resident of Washington County, Oregon and a citizen of the United States. She is a veteran of the United States Air Force and is currently employed as an advisor at a global company that manufactures and retails personal care products. She has participated in the protests outside the Hatfield Courthouse on multiple occasions.

10. Plaintiff Maureen Healy is a 52-year-old resident of Multnomah County, Oregon and a citizen of the United States. She is currently employed as a history professor at Lewis & Clark College in Portland, Oregon, where she also serves as Chair of the History Department. She has participated in Black Lives Matter protests in multiple locations across the City of Portland, including outside the Hatfield Courthouse.

11. Plaintiff Christopher David is a 53-year-old resident of Multnomah County, Oregon and a citizen of the United States. He is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy, a former member of the United States Navy's Civil Engineer Corps, and currently employed by the Department of Veteran's Affairs ("VA") hospital in Portland as a clinical chemist. He has participated in the protests outside the Hatfield Courthouse in Portland and is a co-founder of Wall of Vets, an unincorporated association initially formed to support the Black Lives Matter protesters outside the Hatfield Courthouse.

12. Plaintiff Duston Obermeyer is a 42-year-old resident of Clackamas County, Oregon and a citizen of the United States. He is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy, a decorated combat veteran of the United States Marine Corps, and currently works as a real estate broker in Lake Oswego, Oregon. Like Plaintiff David, he has participated in the protests outside the Hatfield Courthouse in Portland and is a co-founder of Wall of Vets.

13. Plaintiff James McNulty is a 42-year-old resident of Multnomah County, Oregon and a citizen of the United States. He is currently employed as an educational department manager at a local university hospital. He has attended the protests outside the Hatfield Courthouse in support of Black Lives Matter and against the disproportionate use of police violence against Black individuals.

14. Plaintiff Black Millennial Movement is an unincorporated association founded in June 2020 by Cameron Whitten, together with Gregory McKelvey, Shanice Clarke, Candace Avalos, and others, with a mission to reclaim space for the voice of Black Millennials on issues such as criminal justice, policing, and student debt. Members of Black Millennial Movement have participated frequently in the protests outside the Hatfield Courthouse in support of Black Lives Matter and against the disproportionate use of police violence against Black individuals.

15. Plaintiff Rose City Justice, Inc. is an Oregon nonprofit corporation whose mission is to bring awareness to the community, to reform systems founded on inequitable and racist ideals, and to demand justice in a nonviolent manner. Rose City Justice, Inc.'s members participated in the Black Lives Matter protests outside the Hatfield Courthouse to provide support and assistance.

B. Defendants.

16. Defendant Donald J. Trump is the President of the United States. He participated with Defendant Wolf and others in setting in motion and causing deployment of "Operation Diligent Valor," as well as in acquiescing in and ratifying the unconstitutional and unlawful actions of DHS and other federal government employees as part of that operation. He is sued in his official capacity.

17. Defendant Chad F. Wolf is a government official who purports to serve as the Acting Secretary of DHS; however, he was not properly designated to that position in accordance with the Homeland Security Act of 2002, 6 U.S.C. § 113(g). He participated in setting in motion, causing, and supervising “Operation Diligent Valor,” designating DHS employees to serve in that operation, and acquiescing in and ratifying the unconstitutional and unlawful actions of such employees as set forth below. He is sued in his individual and official capacities.

18. Defendant Gabriel Russell is the Regional Director for Region 10 of the Federal Protective Service (“FPS”), which is an agency housed within DHS, where it is responsible for protection of federal property. He commanded the DHS Rapid Deployment Force for “Operation Diligent Valor,” and is responsible for the actions of the federal employees who conducted that operation and who currently remain stationed in Portland, Oregon. He is sued in his individual and official capacities.

19. Defendants Does 1-200 (“Defendant Does”) are unknown officers, agents, or contract employees of DHS and/or the United States Marshals Service (“USMS”) deployed to Portland under color of federal authority as part of or in connection with “Operation Diligent Valor.” They are not readily identifiable because they frequently acted in groups and wore uniforms, helmets, and/or other clothing without obvious identifying information. Plaintiffs will amend the Complaint to allege their true names and identities when ascertained. Defendants Does are sued in their individual capacities.

20. Defendant DHS is a cabinet-level department of the United States government that houses various departments and agencies, including United States Customs and Border Protection (“CBP”), FPS, and Immigration and Customs Enforcement (“ICE”). Defendant DHS is an “agency” as that term is defined in 5 U.S.C. § 551(1).

21. Defendant USMS is a federal law enforcement agency housed within the United States Department of Justice. Defendant USMS is an “agency” as that term is defined in 5 U.S.C. § 551(1).

22. Each Defendant is responsible to Plaintiffs for the injuries and damages that Plaintiffs have suffered as a result of the actions of the Defendants alleged in this Complaint.

III. JURISDICTION AND VENUE

23. This Court has subject matter jurisdiction over this case under 28 U.S.C. § 1331 because the claims in this action present federal questions in that they: (1) seek to redress the deprivation of rights under the First and Fourth Amendments to the United States Constitution, (2) arise under the federal Administrative Procedures Act, and (3) arise under 28 U.S.C. § 1343 because they seek to redress violations of 42 U.S.C. §§ 1985 and 1986.

24. Venue is proper in the United States District Court, District of Oregon, Portland Division, because the events giving rise to the claims took place in Multnomah County, Oregon.

IV. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

A. The Portland Protests and the Federal Deployment of “Operation Diligent Valor.”

25. Just after 8:00 p.m. on May 25, 2020, Minneapolis Police officers killed George Floyd, a 46-year-old African American man. Mr. Floyd was arrested on suspicion of his involvement in a nonviolent offense. After he was handcuffed and fell to the pavement, a police officer knelt on Mr. Floyd’s neck with the weight of his body. For eight minutes and 46 seconds, the officer held his knee on Mr. Floyd’s neck as Mr. Floyd pleaded for relief, until he was killed. Other officers held his legs or stood by and watched.

26. The video of Mr. Floyd’s murder—coupled with the nation’s long history of police killings of a disproportionately large number of Black Americans—triggered a series of protests opposing rampant police violence against Black Americans and supporting Black Lives Matter across the county, including in Portland, Oregon.

27. Beginning on or about May 29, 2020, protesters took to the streets of Portland in large numbers. These protests have continued for more than 80 consecutive nights and have included regular protests in the city parks and streets that surround the Hatfield Courthouse and the Multnomah County Justice Center.

28. Over the course of the month following Mr. Floyd’s tragic death, Defendant Trump issued multiple statements denouncing the protests in various cities and threatening to use federal forces to crush them. For example, on May 29, 2020, three days after the protests began in Minneapolis, Defendant Trump issued a tweet stating, “Either the very weak Radical Left Mayor, Jacob Frey, get his act together and bring the City under control, or I will send in the National Guard & get the job done right.”<sup>1</sup> He continued, “Any difficulty and we will assume control, but when the looting starts the shooting starts.”<sup>2</sup> Similarly, on June 3, 2020, he claimed in a televised broadcast interview with Sean Spicer “the nation needs law and order because you have a bad group of people out there and they’re using George Floyd and they’re using a lot of

29. On June 26, 2020, as the protests in Portland and elsewhere continued, Defendant Trump went further, issuing an Executive Order on Protecting American Monuments, Memorials, and Statutes and Combating Recent Criminal Violence (“Executive Order”).<sup>4</sup> The Executive Order blamed “left-wing extremists” for “advanc[ing] a fringe ideology that paints the United States of America as fundamentally unjust and have sought to impose that ideology on Americans through violence and mob intimidation.”<sup>5</sup> In addition, it directed the Secretary of DHS to provide “personnel to assist with the protection of Federal monuments, memorials, statues, or property.”<sup>6</sup>

30. The Executive Order reflected Defendant Trump’s consistent policy of defending racist monuments and institutions and attacking individuals who seek to dismantle them as lawless extremists. For example, in a press conference on August 15, 2017, Defendant Trump criticized protesters who sought to confront white nationalist and neo-Nazi groups opposing the removal of a statue of Robert E. Lee in Charlottesville, Virginia as “alt-left” groups who were “very, very violent,” suggesting that both sides were to blame for the clash, even though the principal violence was by a right-wing extremist who killed a woman by driving his car into

You...can’t change history but you can learn from it. Robert E. Lee, Stonewall Jackson-who’s next, Washington, Jefferson? So foolish!”<sup>8</sup> Similarly, on July 6, 2020, Defendant Trump mounted a defense of the Confederate flag and suggested NASCAR had made a mistake in banning it at racing events while accusing a well-known Black race driver, Darrell Wallace, Jr., of perpetrating a hoax involving a noose found in his garage.<sup>9</sup>

31. Acting pursuant to Defendant Trump’s Executive Order and consistent with his purpose of suppressing protests against racism and white nationalism, on July 1, 2020, Defendant Wolf announced that DHS would form a special task force charged with “conduct[ing] ongoing assessments of potential civil unrest or destruction and allocat[ing] resources to protect people and property,” and to engage in “potential surge activity to ensure the continuing protection of critical locations.”<sup>10</sup> He further stated that the federal government “won’t stand idly by while

In accordance with his announcement, Defendant Wolf and DHS officials created and sent a Rapid Deployment Force to Portland in advance of the July 4, 2020 holiday weekend as part of what they termed “Operation Diligent Valor.”<sup>12</sup> The Rapid Deployment Force, which was directed by Defendant Russell, was composed of approximately 114 CBP and ICE officers. The CBP officers included members of the Border Patrol Tactical Unit, a quasi-militarized operations unit typically based on the United States-Mexico border or deployed overseas.<sup>13</sup> As DHS itself has admitted, while such federal officers are heavily armed, they do “not specifically [have] train[ing] in riot control or mass demonstrations,” e.g., in policing protests that are subject to First Amendment protections.<sup>14</sup>

33. “Operation Diligent Valor” also relied on USMS officers who were present or brought to Portland and who conducted operations in concert with the DHS Rapid Deployment Force.

34. Starting in the early morning hours of July 4, 2020, the Rapid Deployment Force and affiliated USMS officers began to engage in tactical operations designed to crush the protests in Portland and to further Defendant Trump's stated political aim of appearing to take control over allegedly lawless cities run by Democratic mayors. The tactics used by the officers went beyond what was required for their limited mission of protecting federal property and reflected a policy designed to retaliate against and to deter the protesters because of their views and beliefs. These tactics included the use of surveillance, warrantless arrests, or custodial detentions of protesters, and the indiscriminate use of excessive force, including shooting protesters in the head and body with impact munitions and pepper balls, spraying them directly in the face with pepper spray, shoving them to the ground, hitting and beating them with batons, and firing massive clouds of tear gas at them, even when doing so was not necessary to protect federal property.

35. Many of these unlawful actions were captured on video or photographed by the news media or other protesters as they occurred. For example, on Saturday, July 11, 2020, Oregon Public Broadcasting ("OPB") published a video showing federal law enforcement officers shooting a 26-year-old protester, Donovan LaBella, in the head with impact munitions. At the time Mr. LaBella was shot, he was standing across the street from the Hatfield Courthouse protesting while holding a music speaker above his head.<sup>15</sup> As a result of that shooting, Mr. LaBella suffered severe injuries—he was initially in critical condition upon admission to a hospital with a skull fracture, and he subsequently underwent facial reconstruction surgery for his injuries.

38. This same practice of snatching protesters off the street was reported by OPB on July 16, 2020<sup>22</sup> and by an individual protester on July 17, 2020, who posted an online video that showed two men in unidentifiable military-style uniforms seize an isolated individual on a sidewalk, then force him into an unmarked grey van and drive him away for no apparent reason.<sup>23</sup>

B. The Individual Defendants Confirm and Ratify Their Support for “Operation Diligent Valor” Despite Denouncements by State and Local Officials.

39. Defendants’ unlawful actions under “Operation Diligent Valor” were immediately condemned by state and local officials. For example, Oregon Governor Kate Brown denounced the shooting of Mr. LaBella as “the tragic and avoidable result of President Donald Trump, for weeks, continuing to push for force and violence in response to protests . . . . President Trump deploying armed federal officers to Portland only serves to escalate tensions and, as we saw yesterday, will inevitably lead to unnecessary violence and confrontation.”<sup>24</sup> Portland Mayor Ted Wheeler echoed Governor Brown’s concern, stating “the actions of federal officers last night escalated, rather than de-escalated, already heightened tensions in our city.”<sup>25</sup>

40. Individual Defendants Trump and Wolf nonetheless publicly proclaimed their firm support for the tactics employed as part of “Operation Diligent Valor” and reiterated that the purpose of the operation was to crush the protests. For example, on July 13, 2020, two days after Mr. LaBella's shooting, Defendant Trump lauded federal authorities for doing "a great job" in Portland.<sup>26</sup> He stated that "Portland was totally out of control . . . [A]nd we very much quelled it, and if it starts again, we'll quell it again very easily."<sup>27</sup>

41. Similarly, on July 16, 2020, Defendant Wolf issued a statement while visiting Portland in which he referred to Portland's demonstrators as "violent anarchists" and a "violent mob," and stated that "local and state leaders are . . . focusing on placing blame on law enforcement and requesting fewer officers in their community."<sup>28</sup> In response to what he characterized as an invitation for DHS to pack up and go home, Defendant Wolf was blunt: "That's just not going to happen on my watch."<sup>29</sup>

42. The next day, July 17, 2020, Defendant Wolf posted a photo on Twitter of federal agents in camouflage within the Hatfield Courthouse, writing that "[w]e will never surrender to violent extremists on my watch." He later removed the post.<sup>30</sup>

43. One day later, on July 18, 2020, Defendant Trump issued a Twitter post, stating, “We are trying to help Portland, not hurt it . . . . Their leadership has, for months, lost control of the anarchists and agitators. They are missing in action. We must protect Federal property, AND OUR PEOPLE. These were not merely protesters, these are the real deal!”<sup>31</sup>

44. On July 20, 2020, Defendant Trump again criticized Portland as “totally out of control . . . the liberal Democrats running the place had no idea what they were doing.” He went still further, threatening to deploy federal law enforcement officers to other cities run by “liberal Democrats,” specifically New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, Baltimore, and Oakland. He portrayed those cities as out of control, characterizing them as “run by very liberal Democrats. All run, really, by radical left.”<sup>32</sup>

C. Continued State and Local Opposition Finally Leads to a Stand Down, but Federal Officers Remain in Portland Poised to Recommence Operations.

45. Despite the statements of Individual Defendants Trump and Wolf supporting “Operation Diligent Valor,” state and local leaders continued to press their request that federal law enforcement officers leave Portland. For example, on July 19, Portland City Commissioner Jo Ann Hardesty stated that she was joining “the loud chorus of elected officials calling for the federal troops in Portland’s streets to go home . . . . Their presence here has escalated tensions and put countless Portlanders exercising their First Amendment rights in greater danger.”<sup>33</sup>

46. These calls reflected the widely reported fact that the presence of federal officers was aggravating rather than diffusing tension at the protests and significantly increasing the number of protesters, many of whom were now protesting against the presence of the federal officers as well as in support of Black Lives Matter and in opposition to police violence against Black Americans.<sup>34</sup> Indeed, federal law enforcement officers speaking on the condition of anonymity acknowledged to OPB that their actions “contributed to the quick escalation between law enforcement and groups of protesters, which had dwindled to a couple hundred people or less earlier this month [i.e., before the attack on Mr. LaBella].”<sup>35</sup> Such officers also acknowledged that “the nature of the situation in Portland is a ‘crisis’ being watched and managed from the highest levels of the federal government.”<sup>36</sup>

47. Against this backdrop, on July 28, 2020, Governor Brown negotiated an agreement with Vice President Mike Pence and other senior federal administration officials under which CBP and ICE officers would “leave downtown Portland” and Oregon State Police would step in to keep the peace and allow protesters to refocus attention on racial justice and police accountability.<sup>37</sup>

48. While federal officials have acknowledged this arrangement, they have steadfastly refused to commit to a full disengagement. For example, on July 28, 2020, Defendant Wolf acknowledged that Oregon State Police would step in, but informed the nation that DHS “will

Morgan, the Acting Senior Official Performing the Duties of the Commissioner for CBP, reiterated that the federal officers “are not leaving Portland” until DHS deemed that “the violent criminal activity” was over.<sup>39</sup>

50. Along these same lines, on August 4, 2020, DHS confirmed that although federal officers had not interfered with peaceful protesters during the preceding days, “[t]here has been no reduction in federal presence; federal law enforcement officers remain in Portland at augmented levels.”<sup>43</sup> “[T]he increased federal presence in Portland will remain until [DHS] is certain that federal property is safe.”<sup>44</sup> DHS characterized the situation as “dynamic and volatile” and stated that “no determination of timetables for reduction of protective forces has yet been made.”<sup>45</sup>

51. On August 7, 2020, OPB also reported that federal officials speaking off the record said that some of the forces might be drawn down, depending on how the weekend went, but an elevated force would likely remain in Portland through the November election.<sup>46</sup>

52. Meanwhile, Defendant Trump has continued to defend and reward the actions of Defendant Wolf and DHS. As recently as August 21, 2020, Defendant Trump thanked Defendant Wolf “very much,” commenting that “[y]ou’re right in the heart of it, and you’ve got some very big things coming. Very big things. Good job.”<sup>47</sup>

D. The Deployment and Continued Presence of Federal Officers in Portland as Part of “Operation Diligent Valor” Was Not Lawfully Authorized or Executed.

54. In addition to violating Plaintiffs’ constitutional rights, the deployment of federal officers to Portland as part of “Operation Diligent Valor” was unlawful because Defendant Wolf lacked the authority to designate DHS employees to protect the Hatfield Courthouse and because the operation was not executed in accordance with the federal statute under which Defendants claimed to be acting.

1. Defendant Wolf Lacked the Authority to Deploy Federal Officers to Portland Because He Was Not Properly Serving as Acting Secretary of DHS.

55. Defendant Wolf designated DHS officers to protect the Hatfield Courthouse pursuant to 40 U.S.C. § 1315, which grants the Secretary of DHS (or properly serving Acting Secretary) limited statutory authority to designate DHS employees to “protect the buildings, grounds, and property that are owned, occupied, or secured by the Federal Government . . . and the persons on the property.” Defendant Wolf’s designation, however, was not lawful, valid, or effective because he was not legally serving as the Acting Secretary of DHS when he commenced “Operation Diligent Valor.” As a result, he had and still has no power under 40 U.S.C. § 1315 and there was no lawful basis for the deployment of the Rapid Deployment Force to Portland.

56. By way of background, the Secretary of DHS is normally appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. 6 U.S.C. §§ 112(a)(1), 113(a)(1)(A). In the event of a vacancy, the Homeland Security Act of 2002 provides an order of succession to fill the position pending the presidential appointment of a replacement. Id. § 113(g). Pursuant to this order of succession, the Deputy Secretary and Under Secretary for Management of DHS are next in line to serve in an acting capacity when there is a vacancy. Id. § 113(g)(1). Beyond this mandated order, “the Secretary may designate such other officers of the Department in further order of succession to serve as Acting Secretary.” Id. § 113(g)(2).

57. Defendant Wolf assumed the role of Acting Secretary through a series of events following the resignation of DHS Secretary Kristjen Nielsen on April 10, 2019. At that time, the Deputy Secretary position had been vacant since April 14, 2018 and the Under Secretary for Management had resigned on April 10, 2019, meaning that Secretary Nielsen’s own list of further successors would apply. That list, which was set forth in Delegation 00106, Revision No 08.5 (Apr. 10, 2019), provided that vacancies due to the Secretary’s death, resignation, or inability to perform the functions of the position were to be filled in the following order: (1) Deputy Secretary, (2) Under Secretary for Management, (3) Administrator of Federal Emergency Management Agency, and (4) Director of the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency.

58. Although this was the required order of succession, it was not followed. Instead, the person who purported to assume the Acting Secretary position was Keven McAleenan, who had been serving as the Commissioner of CBP. While Mr. McAleenan had been identified in Delegation 00106 as a potential successor to Secretary Nielsen in the event of a disaster or catastrophic emergency, he was not properly in line to assume her role in the event of her resignation. As a result, Mr. McAleenan’s assumption of the role of Acting Secretary was not lawful and all orders that he issued in that capacity are null and void.

59. Defendant Wolf assumed the position of Acting Secretary following Mr. McAleenan’s resignation as of November 13, 2019. Defendant Wolf took the position based on a new version of Delegation 00106, Revision No. 08.6, that Mr. McAleenan issued on November 8, 2019, to create a new order of succession. However, given that Mr. McAleenan had not properly assumed the role of Acting Secretary in the first instance, he lacked the authority to modify Delegation 00106, rendering his modifications invalid and making Defendant Wolf’s designation as Acting Secretary pursuant to such modifications similarly invalid.

60. Defendant Wolf was also barred at the time from lawfully serving or issuing valid orders as Acting Secretary by a separate statute, the Federal Vacancies Reform Act (“FVRA”). Under the FVRA, the power of any acting official to perform the functions and duties of the office expires 210 days after the office first became vacant. 5 U.S.C. § 3346. Moreover, if 210 days pass without a Senate-confirmed officer or a nomination for the office, the FVRA requires the office to remain vacant. Id. § 3348(b)(1). When Mr. McAleenan issued his revision of Delegation 00106 under which Defendant Wolf assumed the Acting Secretary role, more than 210 days had passed since Secretary Nielsen resigned on April 10, 2019, and the President had not appointed a successor. As a result, even if Mr. McAleenan had properly assumed his position, he lacked the authority to modify Delegation 00106 so that Defendant Wolf could become Acting Secretary. Passage of the 210-day deadline also meant that the office had to remain open and that it could not be filled with anyone serving in an acting capacity, including Defendant Wolf.

61. The invalidity of Defendant Wolf’s claim to serve as Acting Secretary was confirmed on August 14, 2020, in an analysis by the United States Government Accountability Office (“GAO”).<sup>48</sup> The GAO concluded that, for the reasons summarized above,

<sup>48</sup> GAO, Decision in the Matter of Department of Homeland Security—Legality of Service of Acting Secretary of Homeland Security and Service of Senior Official Performing the Duties of Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security, File No. B-331650 (Aug. 14, 2020), <https://www.gao.gov/assets/710/708830.pdf>.

Mr. McAleenan was the “incorrect” official to have assumed the title of Acting DHS Secretary following the resignation of Secretary Nielsen and that his subsequent amendments to the order of succession “were invalid.” As such, Defendant Wolf’s purported assumption of the role was “improper” and pursuant to “an invalid order of succession.”

62. Given that Defendant Wolf did not lawfully assume the role of Acting Secretary of DHS and that more than 210 days had passed since the office became vacant, he was without any authority to designate employees of DHS to protect federal property pursuant to 40 U.S.C. § 1315. His orders deploying DHS officers to Portland as part of “Operation Diligent Valor” and maintaining such officers in the city should therefore be declared unauthorized and unlawful.

2. Even if “Operation Diligent Valor” Had Been Validly Authorized, It Has Been Conducted in a Manner Exceeding DHS’s Limited Authority Under 40 U.S.C. § 1315.

63. Even if it had been properly authorized, “Operation Diligent Valor” has been conducted in a manner that exceeded DHS’s limited authority under 40 U.S.C. § 1315. Pursuant to 40 U.S.C. § 1315(b)(2), DHS employees properly designated to protect federal property and persons on the property have limited enumerated powers, including the powers to:

- a. “enforce Federal laws and regulations for the protection of persons and property,” 40 U.S.C. § 1315(b)(2)(A);
- b. “make arrests without a warrant for any offense against the United States committed in the presence of the officer or agent or for any felony cognizable under the laws of the United States if the officer or agent has reasonable grounds to believe that the person to be arrested has committed or is committing a felony,” id. § 1315(b)(2)(C); and

c. “conduct investigations, on and off the property in question, of offenses that may have been committed against property owned or occupied by the Federal Government or persons on the property,” id. § 1315(b)(2)(E).

64. Defendants have exceeded these limited powers by (a) engaging in the warrantless arrest of multiple individuals well away from any federal property and without probable cause to believe they were committing or had committed a felony; (b) using excessive force to suppress protesters who were exercising their First Amendment rights and who were not posing any threat to federal property or persons on federal property; and (c) engaging in surveillance and intelligence gathering directed at suppressing protests rather than protecting federal property or persons on federal property.

65. Defendants’ employment of such tactics in excess of their statutory authority should be declared unlawful, and Defendants should be enjoined from engaging in the same tactics in the future.

E. Factual Allegations Relating to Individual Plaintiffs.

1. Plaintiff Mark Pettibone

66. Mr. Pettibone has attended the protests outside the Hatfield Courthouse on multiple occasions since they initially commenced in late May 2020. While attending the protests, he has repeatedly witnessed the use of excessive force by federal officers, including the use of impact munitions, pushing and shoving, and the indiscriminate use of tear gas on individuals protesting in a peaceful and lawful manner. In the early morning hours of July 15, 2020, after having attended the protests and non-violently protesting in support of Black Lives Matter, he was personally subjected to such unlawful tactics when he was snatched off the street by unidentified federal officers, who arrested him and detained him in jail for hours without ever informing him of the reasons for their actions, much less charging him with an offense.

67. The incident began when Mr. Pettibone and a friend were walking home from the protests a block west of Chapman Square on Main Street. They were approached by a group of people who warned them that unidentified men in camouflage were driving around the area in unmarked minivans and grabbing people off the street. Almost immediately thereafter, an unmarked dark-colored minivan stopped in front of Mr. Pettibone and four to five men in camouflaged military garb jumped out of the van and sought to detain him.

68. Mr. Pettibone could not see any specific agency badges or identification on the clothing worn by the men, particularly given the darkness at the time, and they did not identify themselves as law enforcement officers. Uncertain about who the men were and afraid of what they might do, Mr. Pettibone ran west on Main Street and then turned south on Broadway with one of the camouflaged men chasing him. As he ran down Broadway, the same or a similar unmarked van pulled up and stopped in front of him and several men wearing the same clothing jumped out in front of him.

69. Mr. Pettibone still did not know who the men were but felt that he was not free to leave. He sank to his knees and asked “Why?” several times. The men did not respond and offered no explanation for their actions. Instead, they firmly led him into the unmarked van, where he was put on the floor. One of the men restrained Mr. Pettibone’s hands above his head and put pressure on his head and neck to force his head down. The men then pulled his hat down over his eyes to temporarily blind him, determined that he had no weapons, and drove him into the garage of a building that he later learned was the Hatfield Courthouse.

70. Once Mr. Pettibone was inside the Hatfield Courthouse, a second group of unidentified men wearing fatigue pants and tee shirts photographed him, searched the contents of his backpack without asking consent, cuffed his hands and ankles, and placed him in a cell. While Mr. Pettibone was in the cell, two officers approached him, represented that they were recording their interaction with him, and read Mr. Pettibone his Miranda rights. The officers asked Mr. Pettibone to waive his Miranda rights. Mr. Pettibone refused to answer questions and requested a lawyer. No lawyer was provided. Instead, the officers left, saying, “This interview is terminated.”

71. At the time of his arrest, Mr. Pettibone had not committed and was not committing any federal offense and he was blocks away from the Hatfield Courthouse. In addition, the federal officers who detained him did not have either probable cause or a warrant for his arrest. After being held in the jail cell for more than an hour, Mr. Pettibone was released without being given any paperwork indicating that he had even been arrested, much less charged with any crime. He was given his belongings back in a garbage bag, but a respirator that was in his backpack had been damaged, and it was unclear whether his cell phone had been accessed.

72. Not surprisingly, the experience of being snatched off the street and put in an unmarked van by unidentified men in military-style uniforms who did not explain their actions, searched his possessions without consent, and held him in jail with no explanation has injured Mr. Pettibone and caused him significant emotional distress and anxiety. Even after his arrest, Mr. Pettibone has continued to experience anxiety about the potential of being arrested or stopped again for exercising his lawful right to peacefully protest.

73. On information and belief, some or all of the federal officers who arrested Mr. Pettibone were DHS employees, and the federal officers who photographed him, searched his possessions, and imprisoned him were USMS employees.

74. On information and belief, Mr. Pettibone was arrested and detained because of his participation in the protests at the Hatfield Courthouse, which was nonviolent in nature.

75. Defendants have made multiple warrantless arrests of individuals in Portland who had not committed and were not committing any federal offenses, including arrests of individuals who were not in the immediate vicinity of the Hatfield Courthouse. On information and belief, these arrests, including Mr. Pettibone's arrest, were part of officially sanctioned behavior and reflected a policy, practice, or custom that was directed or sanctioned by high-ranking officials, including Defendants Wolf and Russell in support of Defendant Trump's policy of targeting protesters supporting Black Lives Matter and opposing police violence on Black Americans as violent left-wing extremists or anarchists undermining white nationalist values.

3. Plaintiff Mac Smiff.

76. Mr. Smiff has attended the protests outside the Hatfield Courthouse on numerous occasions since they initially commenced in late May 2020 and has repeatedly witnessed the use of excessive force by federal officers, including the use of impact munitions, pushing and shoving, and the indiscriminate use of tear gas on individuals protesting in a peaceful and lawful manner. In the early morning hours of July 25, 2020, he was personally subjected to such unlawful actions when an unidentified federal officer shot him in the head with an impact munition while he was lawfully attending the protests.

77. At the time he was shot, Mr. Smiff was standing in Lownsdale Square, which is separated from the Hatfield Courthouse by SW Third Avenue. Mr. Smiff was wearing a helmet which had a sign on it indicating that he was a member of the press. Federal officials were clearing nonviolent protesters in SW Third Avenue immediately in front of the Hatfield Courthouse, some 15 to 20 yards away from where Mr. Smiff was standing. Mr. Smiff was approximately 10 feet away from any other protesters. When Mr. Smiff looked down at his phone to send a tweet, he was shot in the right side of his face with an indelible hard-cap paintball, just below the line of his helmet and just above a face mask he was wearing.

78. The impact of the shot and resulting shock caused Mr. Smiff to fall to the ground. He got up and retreated as well as he could towards SW Fourth Avenue where there was an ambulance and volunteers providing medical care. Mr. Smiff was partly blinded by the paint in his face and had a large contusion on his head, which restricted his mobility. He received treatment from the volunteer medics, who told him that he may have suffered a concussion.

79. As a result of being shot by the federal officers, Mr. Smiff suffered physical pain as well as anxiety that his concussion could leave him vulnerable to more serious adverse health consequences if he were injured again. This trauma affected Mr. Smiff's ability to work in the days following his injuries and the potential of repeated injury left him fearful of exercising his lawful right to peacefully protest during his recovery.

4. Plaintiff Andre Miller.

80. Mr. Miller attended the protests outside the Hatfield Courthouse on numerous occasions since they initially commenced in late May 2020. Mr. Miller has been involved in documenting the protests and providing volunteer crowd-safety and medic services at the protests. While at the protests, he has repeatedly witnessed the use of excessive force by federal officers, including spraying peaceful protesters in the face with chemical irritants, hitting protesters with batons and firing cannisters of tear gas indiscriminately into crowds of individuals protesting in a peaceful and lawful manner.

81. On July 22, 2020, he was personally subjected to such unlawful actions when an unidentified federal officer shot him in the head with a tear gas cannister, causing a gash in his head that required seven stitches and a concussion that continues to have lingering effects. At the time he was injured, Mr. Miller was standing in a crowd of individuals on Main Street, between SW Fourth and Fifth Avenues. The crowd was peacefully protesting when federal officers began marching up Main Street while firing tear gas cannisters and impact munitions into the crowd without any advance warning or instructions.

82. The crowd began to fall back in response to the tear gas and shooting. Mr. Miller turned and began to move back as well. As he retreated west on Main Street, he looked to his right and left and was then hit on the forehead. He exclaimed, "I got hit! I got hit!" to his fiancée who was standing next to him. She said she had been hit as well, apparently with the cannister that ricocheted off of Mr. Miller. Mr. Miller looked down at his phone and saw that blood was streaming from his head. His eye closest to the wound then filled with blood and he could not see. He was deeply frightened by the volume of blood as he remembered the wound suffered at the protests by Donovan LaBella and he was unsure how badly he had been wounded.

83. Mr. Miller's fiancée applied pressure to his forehead to stanch the bleeding. She then led him in the same direction with the crowd, moving west on Main Street towards SW Fifth Avenue. Mr. Miller and his fiancée then turned north on SW Fifth Avenue, at which point Mr. Miller could not walk further. He sat down and his fiancée continued to apply pressure to the wound on his head and called for an ambulance. They then walked to try to locate the emergency vehicle, but Mr. Miller passed out momentarily and was unable to continue walking.

He was then helped into a safe vehicle where he laid down and then vomited twice. Eventually, he was transported to the hospital where he received treatment, including the removal of metal fragments from his wound, seven stitches, and a CAT scan.

84. As a result of his injury, Mr. Miller has suffered significant pain, emotional trauma, memory loss and confusion, and irritability. He has been unable to work and the potential of further injury has left him fearful of exercising his lawful right to peacefully protest during his recovery.

5. Plaintiff Nichol Denison.

85. Ms. Denison attended the protests at the Hatfield Courthouse on several occasions in June and July 2020. She witnessed the use of excessive force by federal officers, including the use of impact munitions, pushing and shoving, and the indiscriminate use of tear gas on individuals protesting in a peaceful and lawful manner.

86. On July 24, 2020, she was personally subjected to such unlawful tactics when she had a tear gas cannister hurled into her head, causing a three-inch gash to her forehead that ultimately required 11 stitches. Ms. Denison had come to the protests that evening as a member of the Wall of Moms, an unincorporated association with a mission to support Black Lives Matter, and to protect protesters supporting Black Lives Matter from being subject to excessive use of force by the federal government. She wore a bright yellow short-sleeved tee shirt over a long-sleeved shirt, a respirator, and a bright yellow plastic hard hat with “BLM” written on it in black marker.

87. Shortly before she was hit by the tear gas cannister, Ms. Denison was standing with the Wall of Moms outside the fence surrounding the Hatfield Courthouse. People in her vicinity were chanting and yelling, and some were banging on the fence, but there were no lasers, no fireworks, and no items being thrown at the Hatfield Courthouse anywhere near where she was standing. Ms. Denison herself did not engage in any violence or destruction of property. She merely stood in a line of women with arms linked, facing the fence, which was approximately eight feet in front of them.

88. As she and others were chanting, Ms. Denison saw federal officers emerge from the Hatfield Courthouse. They made no announcement or order to disperse. Instead, they simply began launching cannisters of tear gas at the peaceful protesters without warning. Some of the protesters who had leaf blowers tried to blow the gas back towards the federal agents.

89. While this was occurring, approximately five additional federal officers dressed in black with the label "DHS" on their chests came out from the Hatfield Courthouse and rushed up to the fence line. They had their weapons drawn and pointing directly at the women who were standing in the line with Ms. Denison. Without any warning, the officers then began firing at Ms. Denison and the other women through gaps in the fence. The weapons appeared to be shooting pepper balls or bullets the size of paint balls. The officers were close enough that Ms. Denison could see them looking for people to shoot, including her.

90. Ms. Denison was hit repeatedly and was then struck far more forcefully in the head by a tear gas cannister that was, on information and belief, thrown or shot from a position well above her in the Hatfield Courthouse. Although she was wearing a yellow hard hat, the blow stunned her. She tried to back away through the crowd, but the blow to her head made it difficult to move. As she removed her mask to check her injury, she was exposed to additional tear gas, burning her face and eyes. As she touched her head, she realized she was bleeding profusely. Meanwhile, federal officers were discharging more gas cannisters at the protesters.

91. Ms. Denison then worked her way as best she could to a medic van where volunteers were offering treatment to injured protesters. When she removed her hard hat and respirator to receive treatment, she found that she had a three-inch v-shaped gash that was gushing blood and was exposed to a significant amount of tear gas. The wound was too severe to be treated on site, and Ms. Denison was taken to the VA hospital by some friends, where she received 11 stitches before being taken home. A photo showing the wound on Ms. Denison's head taken at the hospital is below:

92. Once she was at home, Ms. Denison developed a black eye and major swelling from the injury. Although she was exhausted by the incident, she was unable to sleep and suffered extreme anxiety, reliving the event in her mind and finding herself unable to stop crying.

93. As a result of her injury, Ms. Denison has suffered pain and ongoing anxiety and irritability consistent with having received a concussion. She has also incurred medical expenses, and suffered limitations on her ability to perform her daily tasks during her recovery and fear of repeated injury for exercising her lawful right to peacefully protest.

6. Plaintiff Maureen Healy.

94. Ms. Healy has attended protests supporting Black Lives Matter and opposing police violence against Black Americans at multiple locations in Portland, including the Hatfield Courthouse.

95. On July 20, 2020, Ms. Healy was among a large group of protesters in Lownsdale Square in front of the Hatfield Courthouse who were peacefully protesting and chanting. Just after midnight, she saw a small number of protesters trying to remove plywood from around the Hatfield Courthouse.

96. Without warning, federal officers then appeared and began firing flash-bangs, impact munitions, and tear gas cannisters into the crowd. The federal officers were approaching the Hatfield Courthouse and the crowd from the south, either from the Justice Center or the Federal Building. The crowd began to fall back, and Ms. Healy heard other protesters telling people to walk and not run to avoid trampling each other. Many people, however, including Ms. Healy, began to turn and run. Just as she did so, Ms. Healy was hit in the head with a projectile that felt metallic and the size of a small can. Although she was wearing a bike helmet at the time, the impact cut her face and gave her a black eye and concussion as shown below:

97. Ms. Healy realized she had been hit and was bleeding profusely. After calling out for help, Ms. Healy was helped to some volunteer medics who sought to treat her injuries. But federal officers continued to fire tear gas into the area, forcing them all to move farther away to a van where Ms. Healy was bandaged. She was then driven to a location where her husband was able to pick her up and take her to the hospital for additional treatment.

98. The actions of the federal officers caused Ms. Healy to suffer pain, fear, and anxiety. Ms. Healy has been forced to take time off from work owing to her concussion and outsource work to colleagues. She has had multiple medical appointments and still does not know what substance is trapped under her skin as a result of being struck by the metallic can. Although she would have liked to continue attending protests while the federal officers were deployed in and around the Hatfield Courthouse, she was afraid for her safety and did not do so.

In other words, she has suffered a fear of repeated injury for exercising her lawful right to peacefully protest.

7. Plaintiff Christopher David.

99. On July 18, 2020, Mr. David attended the protests at the Hatfield Courthouse for the first time. He decided to attend after seeing news and online video footage of protesters being attacked by federal officers, as well as the online video of an unknown person being abducted in an unmarked van by officers without any readily apparent identifying insignia. He wanted to support the voices of the protesters in support of Black Lives Matter and against police violence.

100. Mr. David arrived downtown at around 8:15 p.m. on July 18, 2020. Mr. David was wearing a sweatshirt that said “NAVY” on the front. He was also wearing a disposable surgical cloth facemask, but he was not wearing a respirator, helmet, or any other protective clothing.

101. At around 10:45 p.m., as he was about to leave the protest, Mr. David saw federal officers emerging from the Hatfield Courthouse. He saw them launch tear gas cannisters and rush a line of protesters standing in the intersection, knocking several to the ground.

102. Mr. David was standing in Lownsdale Square at the time. He was shocked by the federal officers’ actions and walked into SW Third Avenue to talk to the officers, as shown below:

103. Mr. David then attempted to ask the officers what they were doing and why they were not honoring their oath to support the Constitution. The officers did not verbally respond or instruct Mr. David to move, but one of the officers trained his firearm on Mr. David's chest and then lowered it, after which another officer plowed into Mr. David to knock him back.

104. Mr. David stumbled backwards in the street to recover his balance. Two federal officers then approached Mr. David, one after the other, and struck him with their batons while one of them deployed a canister of chemical irritant spray directly into Mr. David's face. Mr. David was able to knock the cannister away in self-defense only to have another officer approach and spray him in the face again.

105. In addition to being sprayed twice in the face, Mr. David believes that he was struck with a baton at least five times, including a blow to his right hand. Mr. David tried to move away, but the officers kept hitting him and spraying him with irritant. An officer struck him across the back with a baton after he had completely turned around and begun walking away.

106. Mr. David was unable to see or move freely as a result of the chemicals deployed directly in his eyes and face. He moved away gingerly, walking through a cloud of tear gas, and sat down on a park bench, where a volunteer street medic helped him with his injuries before locating an ambulance for him.

107. The ambulance took Mr. David to Portland's VA hospital, where he learned that his right hand had been broken in two places as a result of the baton beating from the federal officers. His ring finger required surgery.

108. At the time of the incident, Mr. David did not know which federal agency employed the officers who beat and gassed him. Subsequently, however, Kenneth Cuccinelli (purportedly Acting Deputy Secretary of the DHS) indicated that officers involved in beating Mr. David were USMS officers.<sup>49</sup>

109. Mr. David would like to return to the protests but has not done so because of the beating that he received and the concerns of his family members that he will be further injured if he returns. "[S]ometimes I have to listen to better advice from other people," he was forced to conclude. “I am 53 and am not indestructible.”<sup>50</sup> In other words, he is fearful of repeated injury for exercising his lawful right to peacefully protest.

8. Plaintiff Duston Obermeyer.

110. Like Mr. David, Mr. Obermeyer attended the protests outside the Hatfield Courthouse for the first time on July 18, 2020. He was motivated by press reports that federal officers were using excessive force to suppress the protests. He believed the protesters should be free to express their views in favor of Black Lives Matter and against systemic racism—views he supported himself. Mr. Obermeyer was dressed in ordinary clothes with a cotton mask on his face. He was not wearing any protective gear.

111. When Mr. Obermeyer arrived at the protests, he witnessed a large number of people talking and chanting emotionally about Black Lives Matter, police reform, and more general government reform. The protests were generally very peaceful and Mr. Obermeyer did not observe protesters engaged in any actions that would appear to justify a harsh response from law enforcement.

112. At close to 11:00 p.m., as Mr. Obermeyer was standing in Lownsdale Square facing the Hatfield Courthouse, he noticed a commotion on the right side of the front of the building. He then saw a phalanx of federal officers begin marching north towards a group of protesters who were chanting in the middle of SW Third Avenue. Mr. Obermeyer did not see any identification on the officers’ fatigues, but he did note that they were heavily armed, with batons and automatic weapons.

113. Mr. Obermeyer then saw the officers shoot tear gas into the crowd without any advance warning and push a woman to the ground. The woman was thrown to the ground with such force that she slid across the pavement. Mr. Obermeyer saw no provocation for this use of force by the federal officers.

114. Mr. Obermeyer was shocked by what he saw and approached the federal officers in front of the Hatfield Courthouse. While he was standing in SW Third Avenue with his hands up in a gesture showing that he meant no harm, Mr. Obermeyer heard a man to his left—whom he did not know, but whom he later learned to be Mr. David—ask the officers if they understood their oath of office. They did not respond. Mr. Obermeyer then repeated Mr. David’s question, and asked the federal officers whether they understood what an illegal order was.

115. The federal officers did not respond verbally to the questions that either Mr. David or he had posed, but one of them came up to Mr. David and struck him with a baton. The same officer then tried to strike Mr. Obermeyer. Other officers then approached and one pointed an automatic weapon in Mr. Obermeyer’s face while another shot him at point-blank range with an orange chemical irritant. One of the officers also struck Mr. Obermeyer in the face and chest with a baton. A photograph of Mr. Obermeyer being sprayed in the face is set forth below:

116. Mr. Obermeyer's eyes and nose burned terribly from the chemical and immediately closed up. The burning spread to every part of his body touched by the chemical. He was blinded, had difficulty breathing, and required the assistance of other protesters to guide him away and flush out his eyes. While medics attended to him, he listened to the sounds of gunfire, artillery simulation rounds, CS gas canisters being deployed, and protesters screaming. To Mr. Obermeyer, a veteran of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, it sounded like a combat zone.

117. The injuries Mr. Obermeyer suffered initially left him unable to walk. After some time, he was able to make it a block or so away from the scene where he continued to use eye-wash solution and water to flush his eyes and head. After still more time, he was able to walk to his car, but he still did not feel that he could drive and he called his wife who came and picked him up. When he got home, Mr. Obermeyer took multiple showers but was unable to completely rinse off the chemical that the officers had sprayed on him, which continued to burn his skin and eyes, as well as the inside of his chest.

118. Mr. Obermeyer's injuries persisted, and it was three days before he felt well enough to resume his normal activities or to return to the protests, which he has only been able to do on a limited basis. Even in subsequent days, he has continued to have breathing problems and felt pain in his chest and lungs. He, too, has suffered a fear of repeated injury if he exercises his lawful right to peacefully protest.

9. Plaintiff James McNulty.

119. Mr. McNulty attended the protests outside the Hatfield Courthouse on July 21, 2020. He went because he believed that the federal officers were preventing demonstrators from expressing their legitimate grievances about systemic racism. He wanted to be another voice to stand up and say that what was happening is unacceptable.

120. Mr. McNulty arrived at the protests shortly after 9:00 p.m. He saw no vandalism, no fires, and nothing being thrown. The protests were peaceful.

121. At approximately 11:15 p.m., Mr. McNulty was standing with other protesters on SW Third Avenue near the intersection with Madison Street when he heard flash-bang grenades. When he looked towards the Hatfield Courthouse, he saw federal officers wearing camouflage uniforms marching up Main Street towards the intersection with SW Third Avenue, launching tear gas cannisters and smoke grenades. The officers came without any warning, and Mr. McNulty did not hear them issue any orders of any kind. The group of protesters standing next to him began to retreat, and Mr. McNulty followed them as the federal officers advanced up Main Street.

122. A flash-bang grenade then went off at Mr. McNulty's feet, and the area began to fill with tear gas, which was blowing towards Mr. McNulty. To escape from the tear gas, Mr. McNulty moved through the intersection of Main Street and SW Third Avenue, crossing in front of the federal officers. As he crossed the intersection, his eyes and face began to burn. The federal officers then shot Mr. McNulty four times: three times with rubber bullets and one time with a pepper ball. He was given no warning and was not disobeying any orders or engaging in any violence before he was shot.

123. Mr. McNulty was bleeding, in considerable pain, and unable to move easily. He sought out volunteer medics who could assist him. The medics provided Mr. McNulty with short-term treatment and sent him to a hospital emergency room. At the emergency room, Mr. McNulty learned that one of the munitions that struck him in the back had not only gone through his clothes, but pieced his skin, fat layer, and at least one layer of muscle. The wound was severe enough that Mr. McNulty had to have a CT scan to confirm that it had not punctured his peritoneal cavity. A photograph showing two of his wounds taken at the emergency room where he received treatment is set forth below (with personal identifying information redacted):

124. Mr. McNulty's injuries caused him considerable pain, suffering, and emotional trauma, as well as medical expenses, and an inability to conduct his daily activities in a normal manner during the period of his recovery. In addition, they have made him fearful of repeated injury for exercising his lawful right to peacefully protest.

10. Plaintiff Black Millennial Movement.

125. On June 5, 2020, a group of younger Black citizens in the Portland area gathered together to create the Black Millennial Movement. These individuals came together in response to the killings of George Floyd and so many other Black citizens at the hands of the police. With national attention finally being focused on racial justice, these individuals sought to uplift the concerns shared by many Black Millennials, including student debt, economic opportunity, housing and home ownership, and political representation.

126. The group was organized by Cameron Whitten, a 29-year old Oregonian, who created a Facebook group and invited several other young Black leaders in the Portland community to join him, including Gregory McKelvey, Shanice Clarke, and Candace Avalos. The Black Millennial Movement originated in that Facebook group.

127. Traditionally, the press has focused on only one segment of Black leadership; the Black Millennial Movement seeks to provide an alternate voice and educate others about the disproportionate use of force used by law enforcement towards largely nonviolent protesters—a perspective that has not traditionally received media attention.

128. Portland-area media, such as television station KATU, have looked to members of the Black Millennial Movement to understand the opinions on the Portland protests held by younger Black leaders in Portland, including how the public pressure caused by the protests is forcing local leaders to be more responsive than they have been previously.<sup>51</sup>

<sup>51</sup> Lincoln Graves, Black Millennial Movement seeks to offer different perspective among Black leaders, KATU, July 30, 2020, <https://katu.com/news/local/black-millennial-movement-seeks-to-offer-different-perspective-among-black-leaders>.

129. Members of the Black Millennial Movement were regular participants in the nonviolent protests outside of the Hatfield Courthouse. While attending those protests, members of the Black Millennial Movement have been repeatedly tear-gassed when federal officers deploy tear gas in an effort to disperse the largely peaceful crowds. Members of the Black Millennial Movement have suffered injuries from the tear gas used by the federal officers, including vomiting, debilitating pain, and irritation to their eyes, skin, and respiratory systems lasting nearly a week after the respective protest in which they were inflicted.

130. Being subjected to tear-gassing by federal officials further adversely affected Black Millennial Movement's ability to engage in free speech and to raise its concerns about the racial violence and injustice faced by the Black community. After experiencing the harm caused by the tear gas deployed by federal officers and seeing video footage of disproportionate violence deployed against nonviolent protesters on a nightly basis, members of the Black Millennial Movement have been fearful of exercising their lawful right to peacefully protest at the Hatfield Courthouse.

11. Plaintiff Rose City Justice, Inc.

131. Rose City Justice, Inc. ("Rose City Justice") is a Black-led, BIPOC supported, grassroots organization committed to unifying local activism efforts in response to historical racial inequities by the justice system. While Rose City Justice initially operated as an informal group following the murder of George Floyd, it incorporated as an Oregon nonprofit corporation in June 2020. Rose City Justice has organized peaceful protests in various neighborhoods in Portland, including ones in front of the Multnomah County Justice Center and adjacent to the Hatfield Courthouse, and participated in the Black Lives Matter protests outside the Hatfield Courthouse.

132. After the presence of federal officers and their use of excessive force against protesters increased in early July, Rose City Justice focused its efforts on providing support and safety equipment to protesters outside the Hatfield Courthouse, including helmets, goggles, and masks. Its members assisted protesters who were injured by the use of tear gas, rubber bullets, and concussion grenades by federal officers against peaceful protesters and were injured themselves by the officers' tactics. Several members of Rose City Justice have bruises from being shot with rubber bullets and experienced the adverse effects of tear gas.

133. Being subjected to federal officers' excessive use of force against protesters caused Rose City Justice to utilize its resources to support the peaceful protesters and deterred their ability to organize and engage in other protest activities. The federal officers' presence in Portland also inhibited its ability to advocate for ending racial inequities, especially as it related to its efforts to divert funds from the Portland Police Bureau to other community activities

(Violation of Fourth Amendment Right Against Unlawful Search and Seizure – Bivens Claim)

(Plaintiffs (Excluding Black Millennial Movement and Rose City Justice) Against Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does in Their Individual Capacities)

134. Plaintiffs hereby reallege and incorporate by reference the allegations in paragraphs 1 through 133 as though fully set forth herein.

135. Plaintiffs bring this claim against Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does in their individual capacities.

136. The actions of Defendants Does—including (1) the use of unjustifiable and excessive physical force against Plaintiffs Smiff, Miller, Denison, Healy, David, Obermeyer, and McNulty in an effort to move them from public spaces in which they gathered to express their political opinion and/or in retaliation against Plaintiffs for their viewpoints, (2) the seizure of Mr. Pettibone without probable cause or a judicially authorized warrant, or, alternatively, (3) the extraordinary manner of Mr. Pettibone's seizure (an abduction off a public street in the early hours of the morning without stated justification by unidentified individuals who emerged from an unmarked van, whose clothing did not identify their name or agency or government, who did not identify themselves, and who Congress had not authorized to make warrantless arrests in the first place)—and the actions of Defendants Wolf and Russell in ordering or approving such actions deprived Plaintiffs of their rights to be free from unlawful searches and seizures secured to them under the Fourth Amendment to the United States Constitution.

137. Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does acted in clear violation of well-settled law with regard to standards for seizure of which a reasonable law enforcement officer in Defendants' positions should have been aware. They are not entitled to qualified or official immunity.

138. The actions of Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does were intentional, malicious, and reckless and showed a callous disregard for, or indifference to, the federally protected civil rights of Plaintiffs.

139. Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does are jointly and severally liable to Plaintiffs pursuant to Bivens v. Six Unknown Named Agents of Federal Bureau of Narcotics, 403 U.S. 388 (1971). Plaintiffs have no adequate alternative remedy.

140. As a direct and proximate result of the unlawful actions of these Defendants, Plaintiffs are entitled to recover damages from Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does, and each of them.

SECOND CLAIM FOR RELIEF

(Violation of First Amendment (Violation of Freedom of Speech and Assembly))

(Plaintiffs Black Millennial Movement and Rose City Justice Against Individual Defendants Wolf and Russell and Does in Their Official Capacities)

141. Plaintiffs Black Millennial Movement and Rose City Justice hereby reallege and incorporate by reference the allegations in paragraphs 1 through 140 as though fully set forth herein.

142. The actions of Defendants Wolf and Russell in ordering and/or approving the indiscriminate use of excessive force against Plaintiffs Black Millennial Movement and Rose City Justice and their members as set forth above—violated and threatens to continue to violate the First Amendment rights of freedom of speech and assembly of Plaintiffs Black Millennial Movement and Rose City Justice and their members.

143. Defendants Wolf and Russell's actions were based on the viewpoint being expressed by Plaintiffs Black Millennial Movement's and Rose City Justice's members. But for their nonviolent participation in the protests at the Hatfield Courthouse in support of Black Lives Matter and against police violence towards Black Americans. Defendants would not have ordered the indiscriminate deployment of tear gas and other chemical agents, flash-bangs, and less-lethal impact munitions and caused injury to Black Millennial Movement's and Rose City Justice's members.

144. Defendants' actions of ordering and/or approving violence and/or deployment of tear gas and other chemical agents, flash-bangs, and impact munitions against protesters, including members of Plaintiffs Black Millennial Movement and Rose City Justice, in retaliation against Plaintiffs Black Millennial Movement's and Rose City Justices' members' expression of their viewpoints and exercise of their First Amendment rights. Based on Defendants' past actions and the continued presence of federal law enforcement officials deployed as part of “Operation Diligent Valor,” Defendants are reasonably likely to take similar actions in the future.

145. By depriving Plaintiffs Black Millennial Movement and Rose City Justice of the opportunity to express their views and retaliating against them and their members on the basis of their views, Defendants have violated Plaintiff Black Millennial Movement’s and Rose City Justices’ First Amendment rights and are imposing ongoing irreparable harm upon Plaintiffs. Plaintiff Black Millennial Movements’ effectiveness as an organization will be irreparably harmed by its inability to generate participation at protest events because potential participants will have been deterred from participation by the threat of unjustified use of violence and/or tear gas. Rose City Justice’s ability to advocate for racial justice and to advance its mission was irreparably harmed by forcing it to divert resources to protect its members and supporters at protests in front of the Hatfield Courthouse and preventing it from engaging in free speech and assembly, in responses to Defendants’ practices.

146. The Court has inherent equitable power to enjoin violations of federal law by federal officials. See Armstrong v. Exceptional Child Ctr., Inc., 575 U.S. 320 (2015).

THIRD CLAIM FOR RELIEF

(Unlawful Agency Action Exceeding Statutory Authority Under 40 U.S.C. § 1315 – 5 U.S.C. §§ 702, 706)

(Plaintiff Pettibone Against Defendants Wolf and Russell in Their Official Capacities, and DHS and USMS)

147. Mr. Pettibone hereby realleges and incorporates by reference the allegations in paragraphs 1 through 146 as if fully set forth herein.

148. The arrest of Mr. Pettibone was pursuant to a policy adopted by Defendants DHS, USMS, Wolf and Russell.

149. The policy pursuant to which Mr. Pettibone was arrested is an agency action, within the meaning of 5 U.S.C. § 551.

150. The policy pursuant to which Mr. Pettibone was arrested is a final action, ripe for judicial review, within the meaning of 5 U.S.C. § 704.

151. Federal government officials have issued statements approving of the policy leading to the arrest of Mr. Pettibone.

152. Defendants DHS, USMS Wolf, Russell, and Defendant Does, acting pursuant to the policy they had put in place, had no statutory authority to arrest Mr. Pettibone without a warrant, as set forth below.

a. There has been no valid designation of Defendants Does for duty in Portland in connection with the protection of property owned or occupied by the federal government or persons on such property pursuant to 40 U.S.C. § 1315(b)(1) because Defendant Wolf lacked the authority to make that designation and his purported designation has no force or effect.

b. The arrest of Mr. Pettibone by Defendants Does occurred blocks away from the Hatfield Courthouse and beyond the geographic limit of “areas outside the property” within the meaning of 40 U.S.C. § 1315(b)(1).

c. Defendants Does patrol of the area where they arrested Mr. Pettibone, blocks away from the Hatfield Courthouse, was beyond “the extent necessary to protect” the property or persons on the property within the meaning of 40 U.S.C. § 1315(b)(1).

d. Employees of DHS, including Defendants Does, do not possess any power under 40 U.S.C. § 1315(b)(2) to make warrantless arrests, let alone warrantless arrests without probable cause that a crime has been committed, while off the federal property.

e. Mr. Pettibone did not commit a federal offense in the presence of Defendants Does.

f. Defendants Does did not have “reasonable grounds,” within the meaning of 40 U.S.C. § 1315(b)(2)(C), to believe that Mr. Pettibone had committed or was committing a felony under the laws of the United States.

g. Even assuming Defendants Does had “reasonable grounds” within the meaning of 40 U.S.C. § 1315(b)(2)(C), to believe that Mr. Pettibone had committed or was committing a felony under the laws of the United States, such “reasonable grounds” do not constitute probable cause sufficient to justify an arrest.

153. The policy that led to the arrest of Mr. Pettibone was an agency action (a) not in accordance with law, (b) contrary to constitutional right, power, privilege, or immunity, (c) in excess of statutory authority, and/or (d) without observance of procedure required by law.

154. The Court should hold the policy that led to the arrest of Mr. Pettibone to be unlawful.

155. As a direct and proximate cause of his arrest, Mr. Pettibone has suffered legal wrong and/or was aggrieved and is realistically threatened by a repetition of Defendants’ unlawful acts.

FOURTH CLAIM FOR RELIEF

(Unlawful Agency Action by Deployment of Force Against Protesters Exceeding Authority Under 40 U.S.C. § 1315 – 5 U.S.C. §§ 702, 706)

(Plaintiffs (Excluding Black Millennial Movement and Rose City Justice) Against Defendants Wolf and Russell in Their Official Capacities, and DHS and USMS)

156. Plaintiffs hereby reallege and incorporate by reference the allegations in paragraphs 1 through 155 as though fully set forth herein.

157. As alleged herein, Defendants Wolf, Russell, DHS and USMS orderd, supervised and implemented the deployment of excessive physical force—including use of pepper spray, impact munitions, batons, chemical agents, and/or physical “charges” by law enforcement officers against Plaintiffs—to forcibly remove them from public spaces in which they gathered with others to lawfully express their political opinions, or in retaliation against Plaintiffs and other protesters for their viewpoints, purportedly pursuant to their statutory authority under 40 U.S.C. § 1315.

158. The policy of deploying excessive physical force against Plaintiffs was an agency action, within the meaning of 5 U.S.C. § 551.

159. The policy of deploying excessive physical force against Plaintiffs was a final action, ripe for judicial review, within the meaning of 5 U.S.C. § 704.

160. Defendants Wolf, Russell, Does, DHS, and USMS had no statutory authority to deploy excessive physical force against Plaintiffs, as set forth below:

a. There has been no valid designation by Defendant Wolf of Defendants Does for duty in Portland in connection with the protection of property owned or occupied by the federal government or persons on such property pursuant to 40 U.S.C. § 1315(b)(1), because Defendant Wolf lacked the authority to make that designation and his purported designation has no force or effect.

b. Defendants Does deployed force against Plaintiffs while off federal government property in a manner that was not “necessary to protect the property and persons on the property,” 40 U.S.C. § 1315(b)(1), often forcing protesters to move blocks away from the Hatfield Courthouse..

c. Defendants Does deployed force to arrest Mr. Pettibone and others without the authority or grounds to make any such arrest.

161. The policy of deploying excessive force against Plaintiffs was an agency action (a) not in accordance with law, (b) contrary to constitutional right, power, privilege, or immunity, (c) in excess of statutory authority, and/or (d) without observance of procedure required by law.

162. The Court should hold the policy of deploying of excessive force against Plaintiffs unlawful.

163. As a direct and proximate cause of deployment of force against Plaintiffs, Plaintiffs have suffered legal wrong and/or are aggrieved and are realistically threatened by a repetition of the unlawful acts of Defendants Wolf, Russell, Does, and DHS.

FIFTH CLAIM FOR RELIEF

(Violation of Fourth Amendment (Right to be Free from Unreasonable Search and Seizures))

(Plaintiff Mark Pettibone Against Defendants Wolf and Russell in Their Official Capacities, and DHS and USMS)

164. Mr. Pettibone hereby realleges and incorporates by reference the allegations in paragraphs 1 through 163 as if fully set forth herein.

165. The actions of Defendants in (a) ordering and/or approving the arrest of Mr. Pettibone and (b) the search of his belonging while in federal custody, both of which were done without probable cause or pursuant to any applicable exception under the Fourth Amendment of the United States Constitution, violated Mr. Pettibone's rights to be free from unlawful searches and seizures.

166. This Court has inherent equitable power to issue declaratory and injunctive relief, including to enjoin violations of federal law by federal officials. See Armstrong, 575 U.S. 320.

SIXTH CLAIM FOR RELIEF

(Ultra Vires Action)

(Plaintiffs (Excluding Black Millennial Movement and Rose City Justice) Against Defendants Trump, Wolf, and Russell in Their Official Capacities, and DHS and USMS)

167. Plaintiffs hereby reallege and incorporate by reference the allegations in paragraphs 1 through 166 as if fully set forth herein.

168. To the extent any of Defendants' actions are unreviewable under any of the preceding causes of action, this Court has jurisdiction to review Defendants' actions under the doctrine of non-statutory review.

169. As alleged herein, Defendants' actions exceeded the authority conferred on Defendants by Congress.

170. As alleged herein, Defendants' actions were contrary to the United States Constitution.

171. Plaintiffs are entitled to a declaration that Defendants' actions were ultra vires.

172. As a direct and proximate cause of Defendants' ultra vires actions, Plaintiffs have suffered legal wrong and are realistically threatened by a repetition of Defendants' unlawful acts.

SEVENTH CLAIM FOR RELIEF

(Violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3) (Conspiracy to Deprive Rights))

(Plaintiffs (Excluding Black Millennial Movement and Rose City Justice) Against Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does in Their Individual Capacities)

173. Plaintiffs hereby reallege and incorporate by reference the allegations in paragraphs 1 through 172 as if fully set forth herein.

174. Plaintiffs bring this claim against Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does in their individual capacities.

175. Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does conspired together to deprive Plaintiffs of their civil rights in violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3).

176. The conspiracy included those involved in ordering and executing “Operation Diligent Valor” and conducting law enforcement actions in connection with that operation, including Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does.

177. The conspirators engaged in overt acts in furtherance of the conspiracy, including, but not limited to, using excessive force against civil rights activists outside the Hatfield Courthouse and in the surrounding area between July 4, 2020 and July 29, 2020, including shooting them in the head and body with impact munitions and pepper balls, spraying them directly in the face with pepper spray, shoving them to the ground, hitting and beating them with batons, firing massive clouds of tear gas at them, and, in some instances, arresting and detaining them without any lawful basis.

178. The conspiracy targeted Black Americans and their supporters, who were protesting on behalf of Black Lives Matter and in opposition to disproportionate police violence against Black Americans. Both groups are protected classes under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3).

179. Defendants Wolf and Russell directed the conspiracy to take these actions because of their adverse effects upon an identifiable group—namely, civil rights activists protesting on behalf of Black Lives Matter and in opposition to Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does.

180. The conspiracy targeted Plaintiffs’ protected First Amendment activities because Defendants held animus towards Plaintiffs’ viewpoints as reflected in, but not limited to, the public statements of Defendants Trump and Wolf. The violent actions of the conspirators directly interfered with Plaintiffs’ protected First Amendment activities.

181. The conspiracy violently interfered with Plaintiffs’ rights to use public accommodations, and therefore their right to be free from the badges and incidents of slavery. Lownsdale Square, SW Third Avenue, and the surrounding environs are places of public accommodation.

182. Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does are liable in their individual capacities under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3) for damages.

183. Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does are liable for punitive damages due to their willfully or recklessly depriving Plaintiffs of the equal protection of the laws and/or equal privileges and immunities under the laws.

EIGHTH CLAIM FOR RELIEF

(Violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1986 (Failure to Prevent a Conspiracy to Deprive Rights))

(Plaintiffs (Excluding Black Millennial Movement and Rose City Justice) Against Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does in Their Individual Capacities)

184. Plaintiffs hereby reallege and incorporate by reference the allegations in paragraphs 1 through 183 as if fully set forth herein.

185. Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does violated 42 U.S.C. § 1986 by failing to meet their duty to prevent or aid in preventing a conspiracy to deprive civil rights.

186. Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does knew that a Section 1985 violation was about to occur or was occurring, had the power to prevent or aid in preventing it, and neglected or refused to prevent or aid in preventing it.

187. As set forth above, the Section 1985 conspiracy consisted of using excessive force against civil rights activists outside the Hatfield Courthouse and in the surrounding area between July 4, 2020 and July 29, 2020, including shooting them in the head and body with impact munitions and pepper balls, spraying them directly in the face with pepper spray, shoving them to the ground, hitting and beating them with batons, firing massive clouds of tear gas at them, and, in some instances, arresting and detaining them without any lawful basis, for the purpose of depriving them of equal privileges and immunities under the laws. Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does knew such violence was planned and could have taken actions to stop or limit that violence. Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does willfully or negligently took no such action.

188. Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does could have and should have refused to issue or comply with unlawful orders, refused to use unlawful force against Plaintiffs, refused to order or allow officers under their command to carry out unlawful acts against Plaintiffs, and/or attempted to appeal to superiors to take a different course of action.

189. As a result of Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does' failure to prevent the Section 1985 conspiracy, Plaintiffs were injured and their rights were violated.

190. Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does acted with reckless or callous indifference to the federally protected rights of Plaintiffs and are therefore liable for punitive damages.

PRAYER FOR RELIEF

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs respectfully pray that the Court:

1. Issue a declaration that the acts of Defendants Wolf, Russell, and Does described herein violated the Fourth Amendment to the United States Constitution as well as 42 U.S.C. § 1985 and 42 U.S.C. § 1986;
2. Issue a declaration that Defendants Wolf and Russell's actions in ordering and/or supervising the indiscriminate use of excessive force against Plaintiffs Black Millennial Movement and Rose City Justice violated the First Amendment to the United States Constitution;
3. Issue a declaration that the policy under which Mr. Pettibone was arrested was an unlawful agency action (a) not in accordance with law, (b) contrary to constitutional right, power, privilege, or immunity, (c) in excess of statutory authority, and/or (d) without observance of procedure required by law;
4. Issue a declaration that the policy under which excessive force was indiscriminately deployed against Plaintiffs was an unlawful agency action (a) not in accordance with law, (b) contrary to constitutional right, power, privilege, or immunity, (c) in excess of statutory authority, and/or (d) without observance of procedure required by law;
5. Issue a declaration that Defendants' unlawful arrest of Mr. Pettibone violated the Fourth Amendment;
6. Enjoin Defendants to inform Mr. Pettibone whether Defendants maintain records relating to his unlawful arrest, including without limitation, photographs, notes and/or records of the arrest, and any information collected from Mr. Pettibone's cell phone;

7. Enjoin Defendants to inform Mr. Pettibone whether Defendants disseminated records relating to Mr. Pettibone's arrest to other individuals and/or agencies;
8. Enjoin Defendants to expunge all records and information they have retained about Mr. Pettibone collected during his unlawful arrest, including any information collected from his cell phone;
9. Issue a declaration that Defendants' actions were ultra vires;
10. Award compensatory and punitive damages to Plaintiffs according to proof at trial, including damages for pain and suffering;
11. Award costs of suit and attorneys' fees; and
12. Provide such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL

13. Plaintiffs demand a jury trial.

MORGAN, a senior official currently performing the duties of the Commissioner of the U.S. Customs and Border Protection; WILLIAM BARR, Attorney General of the United States; L. ERIC PATTERSON, Director of Federal Protective Services; RICHARD K. CLINE, Principal Deputy Director of the Federal Protective Services; DONALD W. WASHINGTON, Director of the U.S. Marshals Service; CHRISTOPHER WRAY, Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; TIMOTHY J. SHEA, Acting Administrator of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency; REGINA LOMBARDO, Acting Director of the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms; and UNKNOWN AGENTS AND OFFICERS OF THE UNITED STATES 1-10, and state as follows:

INTRODUCTION

1. The President and his appointees are sending federal agents to the streets of Chicago in order to intimidate and falsely arrest civilians who are exercising their constitutional right to speak and to assemble.

2. Federal authorities have promised to deploy in Chicago the same secret police force that has terrorized the people of Portland, Oregon for more than two weeks, where civilians have been kidnapped, beaten, and tear gassed by anonymous federal agents.

3. Rarely in modern times has a President of the United States trampled on bedrock constitutional protections on this scale or so brazenly usurped states' police power by directing federal agents to carry out an illegal mission against the people for his own personal political benefit.

4. Plaintiffs have been engaged intensively in and have reported on peaceful protest in Chicago for the past nine weeks, in the wake of the murder of George Floyd and other Black Americans who were murdered by police officers, and they and their members have additional peaceful protests planned for today and the immediate future.

5. Plaintiffs are entitled to this Court's protection of their constitutional right to peacefully protest. This Court must check the unrestrained and unlawful actions of the executive branch.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

6. This Court has jurisdiction of this action pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1331, the First and Fourth Amendments to the United States Constitution, and 5 U.S.C. § 702, et seq.

7. The Court is authorized to award the requested declaratory and injunctive relief by the Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 U.S.C. §§ 2201 and 2202; the Administrative Procedures Act, 5 U.S.C. § 706; and the Court's equitable powers.

8. Venue is proper under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b). Defendants are United States agencies or officers sued in their official capacities. Plaintiffs are residents of the State of Illinois, and the events giving rise to this complaint occurred and are likely to continue occurring in the State of Illinois, within the City of Chicago.

9. Venue is also proper under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(e)(1) because Defendants are officers or employees of the United States acting in their official capacity, and at least one Plaintiff resides in this district or a substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to the claims occurred in this district.

PARTIES

10. Plaintiff BLACK LIVES MATTER CHICAGO is an organization that fights for justice alongside the families most impacted by racially motivated violence and marginalization of Black communities, while working to create just and equitable systems. Black Lives Matter (BLM) Chicago works to end state violence and criminalization of Black communities by deconstructing the white supremacist, capitalist patriarchy. Individual members of BLM Chicago regularly plan and participate in protests and political actions, have participated in the recent protests in Chicago, and are likely to be subjected to constitutional violations by the Defendants under the policies and practices described herein, including but not limited to violations of their First Amendment rights and false arrests and detentions. These constitutional violations would require BLM Chicago to spend additional time and resources providing support to its members, diverting resources away from BLM's mission of creating just and equitable systems for all. BLM

Chicago brings this action on its own behalf and as an organizational representative for its members.

11. Plaintiff BLACK ABOLITIONIST NETWORK (BAN) is a network of organizers, strategists, and activists who provide strategic support to the movement. BAN members conduct mass trainings, teach-ins and town halls for community members. Individual members of BAN regularly plan and participate in protests and political actions, have participated in the recent protests in Chicago, and are likely to be subjected to the constitutional violations by the Defendants under the policies and practices described herein, including but not limited to violations of their First Amendment rights and false arrests and detentions. These constitutional violations would require BAN to spend additional time and resources providing support to its members, diverting resources away from BAN's mission of providing support to movements and increasing the capacity of community members involved in movement work. BAN brings this action on its own behalf and as an organizational representative for its members.

12. Plaintiff CHICAGO DEMOCRATIC SOCIALISTS OF AMERICA (CDSA) is an organization of over 2,500 members in Cook County, Illinois and an Illinois corporation. As part of pursuing its political mission, it engages in peaceful mass protest against violent police repression of the working class. Through its online magazine, newsletter, podcast, and other media channels, CDSA and its individual members are also engaged in journalism on the subject of the recent uprisings responding to police violence against the working class. Individual members of CDSA regularly plan and participate in protests and political actions, have participated in the recent protests in Chicago, and are likely to be subjected to the constitutional violations by the Defendants under the policies and practices described herein, including but not limited to violations of their First Amendment rights and false arrests and detentions. These constitutional violations would require CDSA to spend additional time and resources providing support to its members, diverting resources away from CDSA's mission of creating a more equitable world by establishing socialism as a political force. CDSA brings this action on its own behalf and as an organizational representative for its members.

13. Plaintiff GOOD KIDS/MAD CITY (GKMC) are young Black and Brown people united in fighting to end violence in their cities. They work to achieve more resources for underserved communities on the South Side and West Side of Chicago and provide support to young people affected by violence. Individual GKMC members regularly plan and participate in protests, have participated in the recent protests in Chicago, and also have launched "love marches" to encourage communities to resolve conflicts peacefully. They are likely to be subjected to the constitutional violations by the Defendants under the policies and practices described herein, including but not limited to violations of their First Amendment rights and false arrests and detentions. When these constitutional violations occur, GKMC must divert time and resources from its mission of reducing violence and improving equality in underserved neighborhoods.

14. Plaintiff #LETUSBREATHE COLLECTIVE is a collaborative of artists and activists that serves communities directly impacted by mass criminalization, police violence, and systemic injustice by centering marginalized voices and dismantling oppressive systems. Through direct action and cultural events, #LETUSBREATHE COLLECTIVE aims to organize artists to love and transform themselves and their communities through radical imagination and creative healing work. Individual members of #LETUSBREATHE COLLECTIVE regularly plan and participate in protests and political actions, have participated in the recent protests in Chicago, and are likely to be subjected to the constitutional violations by the Defendants under the policies and practices described herein, including but not limited to violations of their First Amendment rights and false arrests and detentions. When these constitutional violations occur, #LETUSBREATHE COLLECTIVE must divert time and resources from its mission of promoting radical healing work in underserved communities.

15. Plaintiff SOUTH SIDERS ORGANIZED FOR UNITY AND LIBERATION (“SOUL”) is a membership organization that consists of more than two dozen faith based organizations and community organizations on the Southside of Chicago, that organizes the communities in which its member organizations operate to fight for low-income people of color in the Chicago southland to build power and leverage that power to fight for their own interest and liberation. SOUL partners with their membership organizations and trains them and other community activists and leaders in organizing strategies specifically designed to build leadership and impact public policy and legislation on multiple issues including housing, health care, education, economic development, employment, youth services and public safety policy. For the last two months, SOUL has focused its organizing on public safety policy and has activated many of the members and congregants of its membership organizations and congregations to participate in protests to encourage smarter public safety strategies that involve less policing and more resources in disinvested communities. Individual staff and members of SOUL regularly plan and participate in protests and political actions, have participated in the recent protests in Chicago, and are likely to be subjected to the constitutional violations by the Defendants under the policies and practices described herein, including but not limited to violations of their First Amendment rights and false arrests and detentions. When these constitutional violations occur, SOUL must divert time and resources from its mission of promoting radical healing work in underserved communities.

16. Plaintiff NATIONAL LAWYERS GUILD CHICAGO (NLG Chicago) is an organization of lawyers, law students, legal workers, and jailhouse lawyers who operate as a political and social force, working to build a world where human rights are regarded as more sacred than property interests. Individual members of NLG Chicago have been subject to aggressive policing and incommunicado detention by virtue of their advocacy in support of First Amendment-protected protest activity. NLG Chicago provides “Legal Observers” who document police behavior during protests, including the most recent ones opposing police violence. It also provides legal representation to protesters who are arrested. Individual members of NLG Chicago regularly attend protests as Legal Observers, have participated in the recent protests in Chicago, and are likely to be subjected to the constitutional violations by the Defendants under the policies and practices described herein, including but not limited to violations of their First Amendment rights and false arrests and detentions. When these constitutional violations occur, NLG Chicago is forced to divert time and resources away from their mission of protecting members' and clients' civil rights and liberties during protests. Furthermore, when Legal Observers are arrested during protests, NLG Chicago loses the ability to provide oversight of police activities and treatment of protesters. NLG Chicago is further forced to divert resources to find other Legal Observers to cover the duties of arrested members.

17. Plaintiff FIRST DEFENSE LEGAL AID (FDLA) was originally a pro bono nonprofit that provided free representation at police stations in Chicago. This was its purpose for nearly a quarter century until it organized its mission out of existence by fighting for and achieving a Cook County-wide policy that calls for the Cook County Public Defender to represent arrestees at police stations in Chicago and throughout Cook County. FDLA still maintains a hotline that sends callers looking for police station representation to the Public Defender, and therefore uses resources when those calls are made. But the primary two functions of FDLA are now different. First, FDLA continues to employ attorneys that represent pro bono individuals that have low-damage civil rights cases against the City of Chicago when no private firm will take that case. Second, FDLA operates a hotline that provides non-police alternatives for community members that do not want to call police to deal with issues such as mental health disturbances, suicidal relatives, domestic disturbances, homeless people, minor trespassing, etc. This hotline is the model of what local jurisdictions including Chicago should be doing to de-escalate violent interactions between police and citizens. Lastly, FDLA has some community navigators that work with community activists and leaders to organize for community power and say so in public policy including public safety public policy. Every aspect of FDLA's operations will see its resources stressed by the presence of federal law enforcement in Chicago. This includes its navigators' desires to engage in public policy action being tempered.

18. Plaintiff IN THESE TIMES (ITT) is an independent, nonprofit magazine which is dedicated to advancing democracy and economic justice, informing movements for a more humane world, and providing an accessible forum for debate about the policies that shape the future. ITT is based in Chicago and covers topics of social and political interest, with a focus on movements for social change, including the Black Lives Matter movement and other movements calling to defund police departments. In order to effectively report on these movements, journalists employed full-time or in a freelance capacity by ITT have attended protests against police violence in Chicago and intend to continue to do so. Journalists employed by ITT are likely to be subjected to constitutional violations by Defendants—including but not limited to violations of their First Amendment rights.

FACTS

I. PLAINTIFFS ARE ENGAGED IN PEACEFUL PROTESTS

A. Peaceful Protests in Chicago in 2020

32. On May 25, 2020, Minneapolis police officers murdered George Floyd, who was handcuffed and lying face down on the ground, by suffocating him to death in broad daylight on the street.

33. Floyd’s murder and the police murder of Breonna Taylor in Louisville, Kentucky, in addition to recent police murders of other Black people in the United States sparked the largest movement for social and racial justice in history and has included peaceful protests around the world against anti-Black police violence, systemic racism, and inequality.

34. In Chicago, Plaintiffs are the leaders of this movement against anti-Black racism and for human rights and social justice.

35. Since the end of May 2020, there have been nearly daily protests and actions throughout the city of Chicago, ranging in size from a few dozen people to thousands. These protests have occurred throughout Chicago, in the Loop, and the South, West, and North sides.

36. Plaintiffs have been part of the largest global movement for human rights in recent memory. The Plaintiffs Black Lives Matter Chicago, Black Abolitionist Network, Chicago Democratic Socialists of America, Good Kids/Mad City, #LetUsBreathe Collective, South Siders Organized for Unity and Liberation, OCAD, and their membership have been in the streets protesting police brutality as part of the movement for Black lives.

37. Legal observers associated with the Plaintiffs National Lawyers Guild Chicago and First Defense Legal Aid have been attending the protests to document police activity and police constitutional violations.

38. Journalists and employees of Plaintiff In These Times have been present at protests to report on the historic protests as well as on the police response.

B. Violence by the Chicago Police During Peaceful Protests

39. The Chicago Police Department (CPD) has responded—and continues to respond—to these protests with brutal, violent, unconstitutional tactics that are clearly intended to silence protestors.

40. CPD officers consistently target protesters with unlawful, retaliatory, and lethal force. Officers' animus against protesters is unmistakable—they regularly refer to protestors with terms that are vile, misogynistic, and anti-gay. CPD also targets protester's property—destroying cameras, phones, eyeglasses and confiscating bikes, backpacks, and other belongings.

41. Protesters often report that CPD officers intentionally strike them on their head with batons with enough force to leave people bloodied and in some instances with serious concussions.

42. On June 23, 2020, the Chicago Reader published an in-depth examination of the CPD's use of lethal force during the May 2020 protests. The reporter documented "83 baton strikes on at least 32 different people by officers, most captured on video. Nearly all appear to violate [CPD] policy with more than half of the strikes on video involving police beating people who were already on the ground. Multiple videos also show officers hitting protesters in the head with batons despite rules limiting these strikes to situations requiring deadly force." The Reader article notes that these unlawful uses of force often occurred in full view of supervisors who failed to intervene and that most officers failed to report their uses of force.

43. CPD's brutal response has also included police officers tackling protesters to the ground, kneeling protesters in the neck and back, kicking protesters in the legs to cause them to fall, trapping protesters on bridges, pushing protesters stranded on bridges, pinning protesters against hard surfaces, using tear gas and pepper spray, dragging protesters through the streets, punching protesters in the face, stomping on protesters on the ground, and beating protesters severely.

44. Protesters widely report that CPD targets those it has identified as protest marshals or leaders with the most brutal violence apparently as part of a strategy to quell the protesters' free expression. CPD also was particularly violent with protesters who expressed concern that CPD was harming other people. Protestors repeatedly reported that CPD officers pushed, shoved, battered, and harassed people who were filming acts of police brutality during the uprisings. Often this resulted in confiscated or damaged camera and physical injury to protesters exercising their First Amendment right to record the police.

45. People of all races who interact with CPD officers during protests report that officers are aggressive, rude, disrespectful, and often affirmatively escalate encounters through taunts, shoves, pushes and other inappropriate behavior. CPD officers used particularly hostile language towards women and members of the LGBTQ community.

46. CPD's response to the protests also reflects a pattern and practice of breaking, stealing, or otherwise disposing of protestors' belongings, including bikes, cameras, glasses, goggles and, in some instances, canes used to assist with mobility.

47. CPD has also engaged in a systemic practice of illegal searches of protesters, seizure of protesters, and false arrest of protesters.

48. Throughout these events, Mayor Lori Lightfoot has praised the police for their "restraint."

C. Chicago's History of Illegal Force, Arrest, Detention, and Surveillance of Protestors

49. CPD has long used excessive force and false arrest at protests, including in recent years, at the Black Lives Matters protests and the protests against the NATO Summit in 2012.

50. CPD has a long history of surveillance of protesters. This has included sending law enforcement infiltrators to surveil protest groups and using technology to surveil the communications of protesters and organizers.

51. CPD has long operated an unconstitutional detention center at the intersection of South Homan Street and West Filmore Avenue (hereinafter "Homan Square"). CPD has brought thousands of people—predominately and disproportionately Black and Latinx people—to Homan Square and interrogated them using unconstitutional tactics including: physical threats and assaults, denial of food, water, bathrooms, and sleep, placing individuals in cells with the overwhelming stench of human feces and urine, psychological coercion, threats of false charges, and racial slurs. CPD has used these interrogations to try to obtain information from individuals. CPD holds these individuals for long periods of time, without allowing them access to legal counsel or taking them before a judge, and without revealing their whereabouts to concerned friends, family members, or counsel. In other words, the activities of CPD at Homan Square proceed under a shroud of secrecy without any judicial or public oversight.

II. THE PRESIDENT HAS DEPLOYED A SECRET POLICE FORCE

A. President Trump's Threats to Use Force Against Civilians

52. President Donald Trump has long fancied himself a strongman leader better suited for a dictatorship than a democracy.

53. He has maligned the nation's cities, including Chicago, Portland, and New York, saying they are "run" by "Radical Left Democrats" who, in his view, will "destroy our Country as we know it."

54. The President has continually spoken out against peaceful protestors, even directing his agents to clear peaceful protestors from public grounds outside of the White House through the use of physical force and chemical weapons.

55. The President and members of his administration, including Defendants, have repeatedly referred to protestors as "violent anarchists," "agitators," and "violent" or "lawless" "mobs."

56. On June 1st, 2020, some 350 CBP officers were deployed to Washington, D.C. to patrol the protests. CBP's purported Acting Commissioner Mark Morgan defended this deployment in a tweet stating that: "These 'protests' have devolved into chaos & acts of domestic terrorism by groups of radicals & agitators. @CBP is answering the call and will work to keep DC safe."

57. Repeatedly, the President has warned the nation's cities that he will use similar force against their civilians to end peaceful protest.

58. On June 1, 2020, the President warned that he would militarize the streets of American cities, stating, "Mayor and governors must establish an overwhelming law enforcement presence until the violence has been quelled . . . . If a city or state refuses to take the actions that are necessary to defend the life and property of their residents, then I will deploy the United States Military and quickly solve the problem for them.”

59. To this end, on June 26, 2020, the President signed an Executive Order on “Protecting American Monuments, Memorials, and Statues, and Combating Recent Criminal Violence,” in which he fulminated against the protests in American cities and gave federal law enforcement and military leave to “assist” in protecting federal property for the next six months.

60. On July 1, 2020, CBP circulated a memorandum to CBP officers detailing their mission in Portland as a response to the President’s recent Executive Order.

61. The July 1st CBP Memo explained that the purported Acting Secretary of DHS, Chad Wolf, created the DHS Protecting American Communities Task Force, which would “provide an ongoing assessment of potential civil unrest and property destruction and to address resource allocation and potential surge activity to ensure the continuing protection of people and property.”

62. The July 1st CBP Memo further explained that DHS has decided along with other departments and agencies that it is “in the public interest and fiscally sound for the Federal Protective Services . . . to partner with other federal law enforcement to execute the directive of the President. To that end, DHS began coordination with the Department of Justice (DOJ) and Department of the Interior (DOI) to establish information/intelligence sharing[.]”

63. The July 1st CBP Memo goes on to explain that CBP officers were to be deployed to cities across the country for the July 4th weekend.

64. Defendant Wolf announced on July 3, 2020 that DHS was “following [President Trump’s] lead in deploying special units to defend our national treasures from rioters.” He also stated, “We won’t stand idly by while violent anarchists and rioters seek not only to vandalize and destroy the symbols of our nation, but to disrupt law and order and sow chaos in our communities,” and “civil unrest will not be tolerated.”

65. CBP officers, and upon information and belief, other federal agents, have been deployed in undisclosed cities throughout the country in response to the nationwide protests, or what DHS calls “civil unrest” or “disruptive activity.” One of these locations was Portland, Oregon.

B. The Secret Police Terrorize Portland

66. Starting on or about July 1, 2020, President Trump gave life to his authoritarian vision for our cities, sending unidentified federal agents to the streets of Portland, Oregon.

67. For several weeks, a paramilitary force of agents of the DHS, as well as other federal agents known and unknown to Plaintiffs, have been deployed on Portland streets.

68. It has been reported in the media that the camouflaged federal troops sent to Portland were officers from several federal agencies, including not only CBP, but also the U.S. Marshals Service.

69. These federal agents dressed in camouflage, fatigues, and tactical gear, without any insignia or information identifying them. They have used batons, tear gas, rubber bullets, and munitions on protesters, journalists, and legal observers.

70. They have used such force and intimidation despite the fact that protestors, journalists, and legal observers were not committing any federal crimes, and were not doing anything threatening whatsoever.

71. For example, federal agents shot unarmed protester Donovan LaBella in the head with a munition, reportedly fracturing his skull.

72. On July 12, 2020, while journalist Mathieu Lewis-Rolland was documenting protests in Portland, federal agents shot him in the side and back ten times with hard plastic bullets that tore holes into his "PRESS" t-shirt, despite his clear identification as press, and despite that he was carrying bulky camera equipment, staying in well-lit areas, and posing no threat to anyone.

73. Journalist Garrison Davis was also covering protests in Portland on the night of July 11, 2020 and the early morning of July 12, wearing a helmet that said "PRESS" on it in big block letters, holding his press pass, and not participating in protests. Though he posed no threat to anyone, a federal agent shot him in the back with a tear gas canister, pepper bullets, and other munitions.

74. Egregiously, federal agents beat and pepper-sprayed a Navy veteran, Christopher David, who went to the protests to ask the federal agents whether they thought they were upholding the U.S. Constitution with their actions. In response, the agents beat him, breaking his hand, and pepper sprayed him in the face, despite the fact that David posed no threat.

75. Indeed, even when a “wall of mothers”—women, some of whom were pregnant—stood in front of the protestors peacefully, arm-and-arm, and chanted things like “leave our kids alone,” the federal agents terrorized them with chemical weapons and other acts of violence.

76. When the Mayor of Portland, Ted Wheeler, joined the protests in Portland last week, federal agents tear gassed him, too.

77. On July 16, 2020, another Memorandum was sent to Chad Wolf as Acting Secretary of DHS (July 16th DHS Memo).

78. This July 16th DHS Memo stated that acting in response to President Trump’s Executive Order CBP and ICE had “mobilized tactical teams to provide support to [FPS] in protecting federal buildings and assets within the greater Portland, Oregon area.”

79. Further, the July 16th DHS Memo explains how the U.S. Marshals Service “deployed their Special Operations Group (USMS/SOG) to further assist FPS in the protection of the Mark O. Hartfield Federal Courthouse in Portland,” and that the “U.S. Secret Service, . . . ICE/HSI, and the . . . FBI have also provided investigative support to FPS.”

80. While in Portland, these CBP officers reportedly entered sections of the city where residents were peacefully protesting racial and social injustice. CBP officers have roamed far from any federal property, buildings, or monuments that they were purportedly deployed to protect.

81. CBP officers in Portland were wearing generic green law enforcement uniforms with no identifying insignias. These CBP officers then approached protesters in unmarked vehicles.

82. The July 1st CBP Memo and the July 16th DHS Memo each outline the coordination between subagency officers and agents of DHS, DOJ, and DOI which has been ongoing throughout the summer since in response to nationwide protests.

83. According to Ken Cuccinelli, the purported Acting Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security, the Hatfield courthouse in Portland is protected by the FPS. The Acting Deputy Secretary explained that CBP and ICE officers were called in to support FPS and, thus, that FPS was directing the involvement by CBP, ICE, and other DHS officers.

84. Defendant Wolf has publicly stated that 43 arrests have been made in relation to operations in Portland since the weekend of July 4th, including by teams of FPS and CBP officers working together. It is unknown how many instances have resulted in unauthorized searches, questioning, or seizure and temporary detention. It is also unknown which agencies have carried out exactly which arrests, searches, detainments, or custodial interrogations.

85. The President and his appointees and officers have tried to characterize these incidents of detainment and arrests as a response to individuals destroying federal property. For example, DHS Acting Deputy Secretary Ken Cuccinelli stated in an interview with NPR that “We’re talking only about violent rioters. We’re not talking about actual protesters. We’re not seeking to interfere at all with anyone peacefully expressing themselves—period, full stop.”

86. However, incidents like what happened to Mark Pettibone show otherwise—that protesters could do nothing more than walk down the street and still be subject to search, arrest, and hours of detainment.

87. Oregon Governor Kate Brown has called the federal agents’ conduct in Portland “a blatant abuse of power,” and has criticized the Trump Administration for intentionally “provok[ing] confrontation for political purposes.”

88. In a letter co-signed by the mayors of five other cities, including Chicago’s Mayor, Portland Mayor Ted Wheeler criticized the federal agents for using “tactics we expect from authoritarian regimes—not our democracy” and confirmed that “the irresponsible actions of [the federal] agencies threaten community safety.”

89. Oregon’s Attorney General has filed a federal lawsuit seeking to enjoin the federal agents from continuing to engage in their unlawful tactics.

90. Oregon’s Governor has requested the removal of federal agents from Portland’s streets, as has Mayor Wheeler, but Defendant Wolf has refused.

91. The modus operandi of the paramilitary force of federal agents in Portland includes: (1) anonymous federal agents dressed in camouflage who bear no known designation and refuse to identify themselves; (2) the use of unmarked vehicles used to illegally arrest and detain and round up protestors, journalists, and observers; (3) kidnapping of innocent civilians without probable cause; (4) uses of excessive, inexcusable force against people exercising their right to speak and to assemble as well as people reporting on peaceful protests; (5) “preemptive arrests” of people without probable cause to believe they committed any federal crime; (6) extending the “perimeter” of what is considered federal property to engage with protestors; and (7) investigating and questioning protestors about their associational activities.

C. Illegal Federal Policies of Conducting False Arrests, Unlawful Domestic Surveillance, and Silencing Protestors

92. Defendants have established official federal policies of conducting false arrests without probable cause, performing unlawful domestic surveillance, and silencing protestors, all with the purpose of intimidating and quashing speech because of its viewpoints.

93. Beginning on or about July 2020, Defendants established a federal policy of conducting arrests without probable cause to believe that any crime, let alone a federal crime, had been committed.

94. On July 15, 2020, armed federal agents dressed in camouflage pulled Mark Pettibone into an unmarked van without identifying themselves, drove him to what is believed to have been a federal courthouse, and detained him in a cell before releasing him without any paperwork, citation, or record of his arrest.

95. There was no probable cause for Pettibone's arrest.

96. On July 15, 2020, a video emerged showing camouflaged federal agents grabbing an individual with his hands up standing on a sidewalk in Portland, placing him in an unmarked van, and driving away.

97. The NLG Legal Observers who was recording the video objected to this kidnapping.

98. These abductions occurred outside the jurisdiction of federal law enforcement.

99. Those abducted were not attacking federal property or personnel.

100. Those abducted had not committed any crime and there was no probable cause to suspect them of committing any crime.

101. On July 17, 2020, an official U.S. Customs and Border Patrol statement confirmed that the camouflaged officers were CBP agents.

102. In a press conference on July 21, 2020, Defendant Wolf called on Defendant Cline to explain the "standard of probable cause" justifying these arrests.

103. Defendant Cline specifically addressed the July 15th unmarked officer arrests explaining that the CBP agents had identified a man "in a crowd and in an area" where someone was aiming a laser at officers, and they followed him to a calmer location to talk to him. After doing so, they removed him from the area where other protesters and observers were nearby and took him to another location in a van.

104. According to Defendant Cline, the CBP agents held the protestor for approximately 20 minutes of interrogation and then released him “because they did not have what they needed”—namely, probable cause—to hold him.

105. In attempting to justify the constitutionality of this act, Cline characterized it as a “simple engagement” and “not a custodial arrest.”

106. Later the same day, Defendant Wolf stated that DHS was “having to go out and proactively arrest individuals . . . to hold them accountable.”

107. Defendant Wolf’s statement explaining DHS’s authority to “proactively arrest” individuals further confirmed a federal policy that is being implemented by federal agents on city streets that contravenes the protections of the Fourth Amendment by sanctioning arrests without probable cause.

108. Defendants’ unlawful policy has been directed by Defendant Wolf, who purports to be Acting Secretary of Homeland Security but is not legally serving in this role. He has not received Senate confirmation, and indeed, the President has not even nominated him, reflecting his preference for “acting” officials and avoiding the oversight and accountability that the confirmation process ensures.

109. During Defendant Barr’s testimony before the House Judiciary Committee on July 28, 2020, he reaffirmed Defendants’ belief that they and their agents can carry out arrests without probable cause to believe that federal crimes have been committed.

110. Specifically, Congressman Ted Lieu asked Defendant Barr to acknowledge that the Portland van arrests are inconsistent with Dunaway v. New York, 442 U.S. 200 (1979), in which the Supreme Court held that police violate the Fourth Amendment when they pick someone up off the street and take them for questioning without probable cause.

111. Defendant Barr testified that his understanding is that the “modus operandi” of DHS agents is to take individuals into custody and question them based on their previous proximity to criminal activities.

112. Defendants’ statements have established a federal policy of allowing officers to make arrests without probable cause in violation of the Fourth Amendment.

113. President Trump has approved of the actions of the federal agents in Portland, thereby ratifying the federal agents’ policy of arresting individuals without probable cause and justifying the continued and expanded use of unlawful arrests that agents employed in Chicago and other cities.

114. For example, on June 20, 2020, President Trump stated “we’ve done a great job in Portland. . . . I guess we have many people in jail right now. We very much quelled it, and if it starts again, we’ll quell it again very easily. It’s not hard to do, if you know what you’re doing.”

115. Moreover, Defendants have established a federal policy of illegal domestic surveillance based on political viewpoint.

116. In connection with the President's June 26 Executive Order, DHS launched an expansive program of domestic surveillance. Pursuant to an internal unclassified DHS policy document, the DHS Office of Intelligence & Analysis has authorized its intelligence officers to surveil protestors if the agency determines that they pose "[t]hreats to damage or destroy any public monument, memorial, or statue," "regardless of whether such structures are situated on Federal property".

117. The DHS intelligence directive further indicates that DHS analysts can collect information about "individuals or groups" whom they "reasonabl[y] belie[ve]" threaten to damage or destroy any public monument, including "their tactics, techniques, or procedures," and "information that otherwise informs an overall assessment that threats to [monuments] will materialize."

118. In other words, Defendants are operating under a directive that minor property damage to a non-federal monument or statue—a "threat" the agency for the first time characterizes as a matter of homeland security—justifies as significant expansion of the sweep of the federal government's authority to collect intelligence about civilians.

119. Defendants have also enacted a federal policy of unlawfully monitoring, intimidating, and silencing protestors because of their message.

120. Defendants' statements, an internal DHS memorandum, and the conduct of federal officers on the ground are evidence of this policy.

121. In addition, the brutality that protestors in Portland have faced at the hands of federal agents is the result of an unlawful policy that Defendants have established to quell lawful protest and intimidate protestors.

122. Confirming this policy, Defendant Barr testified on July 28, 2020 that he believes chemical irritants are very important tools and that their use is warranted even if it harms peaceful protestors.

123. In fact, Defendants have used a number of means to intimidate and deter protestors because of their views and beliefs, including surveillance, the use of militarized and excessive force by unidentified agents, the deployment of tear gas, pepper balls, and lethal munitions into civilian crowds, and warrantless arrests and custodial detentions without probable cause.

124. In addition, protestors who have been arrested by federal agents in Portland have been asked to name their associates and fellow protestors and identify what associations with which they are affiliated.

125. Statements from the President, the White House, and other officials also reveal that the purpose of these federal policies is to quell speech and lawful assembly based on its viewpoint.

126. At a White House event on July 13, 2020, the President claimed that “[f]ar-left mayors are escalating the anti-cop crusade, and violent crime is spiraling in their cities.” He reiterated his plan to be “very strong on law enforcement” by sending federal officers to “liberally run” jurisdictions—“even if we have to go in and take over cities.”

127. In a Fox News interview on July 17, 2020, Kenneth Cuccinelli, who is the Senior Official Performing the Duties of the Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security, asserted that the President is determined “to help restore peace to these beleaguered cities.”

128. On July 20, 2020, Cuccinelli told CNN, “We will maintain our presence,” and admitted, “When that violence recedes and those threats recede, that is when we would ratchet back down to what I would call normal presence defending and protecting federal facilities.”

129. When the President and Defendants Wolf and Barr announced at their July 22, 2020 press conference that they would deploy a “surge” of federal agents to other cities, including Chicago, at no point did any of them or anyone else state that the federal policies discussed in this section would cease during the “surge” of officers being imminently deployed to Chicago.

D. The Secret Police Have Been Deployed to Chicago

130. Despite public outcry against these flagrant constitutional violations, the President has vowed to continue to use federal agents to mount a hostile takeover of U.S. cities.

131. The President has said that his efforts in Portland were designed to “help” that city and that Chicago, among other cities, is next.

132. These developments are unsurprising, given that on May 28, 2020, the President said that he would send the military to confront protesters and invoked the racist phrase of a segregationist used to quell prior cries for racial equality:

“When the looting starts, the shooting starts.”

133. The President again made threats about deploying the National Guard to “dominate the streets” and using “thousands of heavily armed soldiers” against civilians.

134. On June 1, 2020, amid the protests in Washington, D.C., the President ordered police and National Guard troops to clear peaceful protestors from Lafayette Square and surrounding streets using tear gas and other weapons. This was done solely so that the President could walk from the White House to St. John’s Episcopal Church, so that he could hold a Bible for a photo-op.

135. Other federal appointees and officers have also made clear the Administration’s intention to replicate what is taking place in Portland elsewhere, including in Chicago.

136. Defendant Wolf announced that DHS was going to deploy agents to Chicago and would “do that whether they like us there or not.”

137. In an interview on July 19, 2020, the President called Chicago “stupidly run” and pledged to have “more federal law enforcement” in Chicago and other cities “all run by liberal Democrats.”

138. On July 22, 2020, the President held a news conference from the East Room of the White House confirming that there would be a “surge” of federal agents arriving imminently in Chicago.

139. During those remarks, the President was explicit that the federal law enforcement response is needed to address problems purportedly caused by the activities and demands of protestors, and that federal agents would help to restore order in Chicago.

140. In addition, neither the President, Defendant Barr, nor Defendant Wolf gave any assurance that the “hundreds” of federal agents flooding Chicago would leave protestors alone. At no time did they acknowledge that the federal government had overstepped in Portland. At no time did they agree that the federal law enforcement activities currently taking place in Portland would be limited to Portland.

141. On the contrary, the President and Defendants made clear that there would soon be an unchecked federal presence on the streets of Chicago, with the President describing federal authority “as wide as it can be.”

142. The President and Defendants repeatedly tied the decision to send federal law enforcement officers to Chicago to the actions of protestors, blaming protestors for violence in Chicago.

143. The President cited “a radical movement to defund, dismantle and dissolve our police departments” that “has led to a shocking explosion of shootings, killings, murders, and heinous crimes of violence.” He complained that local “politicians have now embraced the far-left movement to break up our police departments causing violent crime in their cities to spiral . . . seriously out of control.” He demanded that Americans “insist that community officials fully support, fully back and fully fund their local police departments” and said federal law enforcement would remain until then. He repeated “[w]e will never defund the police, we will hire more great police” and “[w]hile others want to defund, defame and abolish the police, I want to support and honor our great police.”

144. Defendant Barr announced: “[W]e’re going to continue to confront mob violence,” and he claimed that “a significant increase in violent crime” is the “direct result of the attack on the police forces” and calls “for the defunding of police departments.”

145. All of this is consistent with the President’s numerous statements since the beginning of the nationwide protests that he intends to use federal agents to stop protestors.

146. For instance, the President tweeted: “Get tough Democrat Mayors and Governors. These people are ANARCHISTS. Call in our National Guard NOW. The World is watching and laughing at you and Sleepy Joe. Is this what America wants? NO!!!” This early suggestion that the National Guard was needed to quell actions of particular political groups or protestors with political leanings, such as “anarchists,” makes clear that the aim in calling in federal officers is to quell protests—not just those committing crimes against property.

147. The President has expressed his disdain for the viewpoints of the protestors: “Our great National Guard Troops who took care of the area around the White House could hardly believe how easy it was. “A walk in the park,” one said.

The protesters, agitators, anarchists (ANTIFA), and others, were handled VERY easily by the Guard, D.C. Police, & S.S. GREAT JOB!”

148. In addition, he repeatedly has expressed his view that Black Lives Matter is a hateful sentiment.

149. The President has indicated his intention to “dominate” protestors: “D.C. had no problems last night. Many arrests. Great job done by all. Overwhelming force. Domination. Likewise, Minneapolis was great (thank you President Trump!)”

150. The President has expressed satisfaction when protestors self-censor by staying home: “I have just given an order for our National Guard to start the process of withdrawing from Washington, D.C., now that everything is under perfect control. They will be going home, but can quickly return, if needed. Far fewer protesters showed up last night than anticipated!”

151. At President Trump’s rally at Mount Rushmore on July 4, 2020, he announced that he was “deploying federal law enforcement to protect our monuments, arrest the rioters, and prosecute offenders to the fullest extent of the law.”

152. In retweeting a thread which showed New York stores boarded up in anticipation of any violence following the continuation of nationwide protests, President Trump wrote: “The National Guard is ready!”

153. On July 27, 2020, the President referred to the protestors in Portland as “sick and deranged Anarchists & Agitators who our great men & women of Law Enforcement easily control, but who would destroy our American cities, and worse, if Sleepy Joe Biden, the puppet of the Left, ever won. Markets would crash and cities would burn.”

154. In addition, he informed the governor of Oregon that “[s]he must clear out, and in some cases arrest, the Anarchists & Agitators in Portland,” or else “the Federal Government will do it for her. We will not be leaving until there is safety!”

155. The President’s response to the Black Lives Matter protests, and specifically his insistence that they be shut down, stands in sharp contrast to his response to anti-quarantine protestors earlier his year. When armed protestors objecting to COVID-19 quarantine measures rallied in the Michigan state house, the President called them “very good people” and urged Michigan Governor Gretchen Whitmer to “give a little” in response to the protestors’ objections.

III. CHICAGO IS UNABLE OR UNWILLING TO STOP UNLAWFUL FEDERAL INTERVENTION

156. Chicago’s Mayor has publicly recognized the problems with the President’s secret police force, saying, “We don’t need federal agents without any insignia taking people off the streets and holding them, I think, unlawfully.”

157. The Mayor has also recognized that an “influx” of federal agents to Chicago is on its way.

158. In a July 20, 2020 letter to the President, Chicago’s Mayor stated that federal agents deployed to Chicago “that would not be within our control or within the direct command of the Chicago Police would spell disaster.”

159. Chicago is already saturated with federal law enforcement agents who conduct duly authorized law enforcement activities in Chicago and the region on a daily basis.

160. A further influx of such agents in lieu of investment in the communities most affected by gun violence, police violence, and racism is counterproductive, destructive, and a potentially violent disaster.

161. Contrary to her stated position, Chicago's Mayor has had discussions with federal authorities about the initial deployment of federal agents in Chicago, and on July 21, 2020, she confirmed that federal agents would be deployed to Chicago.

162. On or about July 22, 2020, Chicago's Mayor confirmed that she had spoken with the President about the deployment of federal agents to Chicago and reported "I think we have an understanding," without an indication of the extent to which Chicago has assented to the federal illegal policies set out above.

163. The assent of Chicago's Mayor to the surge of federal forces means that when the President sends federal agents to Chicago, as he did to Portland, the CPD and the City will be unable and unwilling to protect protestors from unlawful use of excessive force and arrests without probable cause.

IV. PLAINTIFFS FEAR CONTINUING THEIR LAWFUL ACTIVITIES

164. Given the City of Chicago's history of violence against peaceful protestors, and its recent violence against protestors, the addition of federal forces to illegally intimidate, police, and falsely arrest peaceful protestors will ignite additional official violence against civilians and a serious constitutional crisis within the City of Chicago.

165. Indeed, recognizing these legitimate and imminent fears, State Representative Will Guzzardi, whose district covers the City of Chicago's northwest side, reports that his constituents are "terrified by the news" of impending federal agents, and that some have been dissuaded from protesting.

166. Plaintiffs have planned frequent protests and political actions into the foreseeable future, including next week. Examples of their recent activities on July 24, 25, and 26, 2020, include: a) a #LetUsBreathe rally at Freedom Square on Friday, July 24, 2020, across the street from the Homan Square, a police station notorious for disappearing people (sometimes in conjunction with Federal DEA or ATF agents); b) a protest organized by multiple organizations including Plaintiffs BLM Chicago and CDSA on Saturday, July 25, 2020 in Grant Park to support Black Lives; c) another protest also in Grant Park on Saturday, July 25, 2020 to call for the abolition of ICE.

167. NLG Chicago Legal Observers have observed over 50 demonstrations since the end of May 2020, when nationwide protests—sparked by the murders of George Floyd and Breonna Taylor—against systemic racism, inequality, and police violence began.

168. Plaintiff NLG Chicago seeks to protect the First Amendment rights of protestors by observing protests and obtaining information from protestors who are arrested so that they can be tracked and provided pro bono or low-cost representation.

169. Plaintiff FDLA seeks to protect the First Amendment rights of protesters by observing protests and obtaining information from protesters who are arrested so that they can be tracked and provided pro bono or low-cost representation.

170. Plaintiff In These Times has documented and tracked hundreds of instances of violence, harassment and arrests directed toward journalists by members of law enforcement of local, state, and federal agencies throughout the country. Individual journalists employed by In These Times are aware of “less lethal” munitions being deployed by federal agents against journalists covering protests in Portland and instances where members of the Chicago Police Department have used physical force to prevent journalists from covering protests.

171. Plaintiffs are aware of the activities of federal law enforcement officers in Portland; specifically, they are aware that federal agents have kidnapped, falsely arrested, and brutalized protestors and NLG Legal Observers.

172. Plaintiffs are also aware that President Trump has deployed federal officers to Chicago imminently, and that the CPD intends to work with the federal agents.

173. Plaintiffs would like to continue exercising their First Amendment rights of speech, assembly, observing, and newsgathering, but they fear that federal agents will kidnap, falsely arrest, or physically abuse them.

174. Plaintiffs would also like to continue to engage in exercising their First Amendment rights without fear that federal agents will unlawfully surveil their activities or infringe on their right to associate with political, activist groups.

175. Plaintiffs would also like to continue to engage in exercising their First Amendment rights without fear that federal agents will unlawfully suppress or interfere with their protests.

176. Specifically, Plaintiff BLM Chicago has members who are not going to attend the protests and rallies planned for this weekend because they fear federal agents will kidnap, falsely arrest, or physically abuse them, as they did to protestors in Portland.

177. In addition, Plaintiffs have had to divert their financial resources and their time to address members' concerns that federal agents will be present at the planned protests.

178. For example, since the President's announcement on July 22, that federal agents would be sent to Chicago, OCAD has had to redirect their staff and financial resources from organizing for participation in peaceful protests in solidarity with BLM and dismantling systematic racism to preparing "Know Your Rights" flyers and information for distribution to respond to their members' concerns that they may encounter federal agents at the protests.

179. Similarly, NLG has had to redirect its resources from organizing legal observers for the protests to preparing and distributing "Know Your Rights" information related to inquiries from protestors about possible encounters with federal agents present at protests.

180. Plaintiffs also fear that their speech and message is being hijacked and drowned out by a new focus on protesting the presence of federal agents in Chicago.

181. Plaintiffs are aware of the nightly clashes with federal agents and protestors in Portland at the Mark O. Hatfield Courthouse and how other groups have shifted the focus of the peaceful protests from the Black Lives Matter and anti-racist campaign to protesting simply the presence of federal agents in the City.

182. Plaintiffs' speech that has not been prevented or chilled, has been diluted and drowned out by Defendants' illegal policies outline in this complaint and their deployment of agents to Chicago.

183. Indeed, Defendants' actions to further the President's political agenda to demonstrate that he is strong on "law and order" and denigrate "liberal cities" in furtherance of his re-election campaign has resulted in not only interference with Plaintiffs' anti-racist message, but it has diluted and drowned out the speech that has persisted despite Defendants' efforts to stop it.

LEGAL CLAIMS

COUNT I

Interference with Speech, Peaceful Assembly, and the Press In Violation of the First Amendment

184. Plaintiffs incorporate by reference each of the paragraphs in this Complaint as if restated fully herein.

185. Individuals who peacefully gather on the streets of Chicago to protest have the right to gather, express themselves, and petition for redress of grievances under the First Amendment.

186. Members of the press and individuals have the right to gather, receive, record, and disseminate information and news under the First Amendment.

187. Defendants' actions are undertaken with the intent of discouraging and suppressing lawful protest and therefore constitute an illegal prior restraint on individuals' First Amendment right to peacefully protest racial inequality.

188. Many individuals who are reasonably afraid of being brutalized or picked up and shoved into unmarked vans by federal agents will feel compelled to stay away, for their own personal safety, and will therefore be unable to express themselves in the way that they have the right to do.

189. Many individuals also fear that they will be unlawfully surveilled by federal agents simply for participating in these peaceful protests.

190. Plaintiff has also had to redirect and divert their resources to addressing their members' concerns about the presence of federal agents at the protests.

191. Relatedly, since President Trump's July 22nd announcement of sending federal agents to Chicago, the purpose, message and participation of the protests in Chicago shifted from a unified focus on dismantling systemic racism to protestors speaking out against the deployment of federal agents in Chicago.

192. Prior to July 22, the protests had a sustained anti-racist, Black Lives Matter message and focus over the course of several months since the protests began in May.

193. In the manner described more fully above, Plaintiffs' First Amendment rights have been and are being infringed. Their exercise of their rights to speak, assemble, petition, and gather news is being chilled due to the well-founded fear that they will be brutalized or kidnapped by federal agents for no reason other than being a protestor, journalist, or legal observer on the streets and sidewalks of Chicago.

COUNT II

Federal Policy of Conducting False Arrests In Violation of the Fourth Amendment

194. Plaintiffs incorporate by reference each of the paragraphs of this Complaint as if restated fully herein.

195. The Fourth Amendment prohibits unreasonable seizures, and in particular prohibits federal officials from arresting a person without probable cause to believe that they have committed a federal crime.

196. In so doing, the Fourth Amendment also plainly prohibits "preemptive arrests" in anticipation of a possible violation of the law.

197. Defendants and the federal agents discussed in this complaint are operating pursuant to an official federal policy, approved by responsible federal agency heads with final policymaking authority, of conducting arrests of individuals without probable cause to believe they have committed federal crimes, including “preemptive arrests” of peaceful protestors, journalists, and legal observers.

198. Federal agents’ conduct in other cities as described above, and in particular their false arrest of peaceful protestors and journalists, was caused by and pursuant to this unconstitutional federal policy.

199. No probable cause exists to believe that Plaintiffs, their members, or any other similarly situated protestors, legal observers, or journalists, has committed a federal crime. Plaintiffs’ anticipated participation in protests does not provide probable cause to believe that a person has committed a federal crime.

200. In the absence of an injunction, Defendants will arrest and seize individuals off the streets in Chicago without probable cause, in violation of the Fourth Amendment, pursuant to official federal policy.

COUNT III

28 U.S.C. § 2201 Declaration of Rights

201. Plaintiffs incorporate each of the paragraphs of the complaint as if restated fully herein.

202. In a case of actual controversy within its jurisdiction, any court of the United States may declare the rights and other legal relations of any interested party seeking such declaration, whether or not further relief is or could be sought, under 28 U.S.C. § 2201.

203. There is an actual controversy within the jurisdiction of this court, inasmuch as one or more federal defendants have engaged in actions endangering

Plaintiffs and others assembled on Chicago's streets. No federal authority has agreed to stop this practice.

204. Plaintiffs are entitled to a declaration that the acts at issue are unlawful, and an injunction precluding Defendants from continuing in them.

COUNT IV

Conspiracy

205. Plaintiffs incorporate each of the paragraphs of this complaint as if restated fully herein.

206. Defendants, acting in concert with other co-conspirators, known and unknown, reached an agreement among themselves to deprive Plaintiffs of their constitutional rights, all as described in the various paragraphs of this Complaint.

207. In so doing, these co-conspirators conspired to accomplish an unlawful purpose by unlawful means. In addition, these co-conspirators agreed among themselves to protect one another from liability for depriving Plaintiffs of these rights.

208. In furtherance of their conspiracy, each of these co-conspirators committed overt acts and were otherwise willful participants in joint activity.

209. The misconduct described herein was undertaken intentionally, in total disregard of Plaintiffs' constitutional rights.

COUNT V

Tenth Amendment

210. Plaintiffs incorporate each of the paragraphs of this complaint as if restated fully herein.

211. By conducting traditional law enforcement activities on the streets and sidewalks of Chicago, Defendants are encroaching upon powers explicitly reserved to the State of Illinois, and to Illinois's citizens, pursuant to the Tenth Amendment.

212. Defendants conduct such law enforcement activities under color of federal law.

213. Each Plaintiff has standing to bring this claim because each has suffered cognizable injuries that are redressable through injunctive relief, and the Tenth Amendment confers a substantive, personal right.

214. There is no adequate remedy under state law.

PRAYER FOR RELIEF

Wherefore, Plaintiffs pray for a judgment and the following relief:

1. A declaration, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2201, that the federal actions described in this complaint restrain Plaintiffs' ability to assemble in peaceful protest, observing, and news gathering, in violation of the First Amendment;

2. A declaration, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2201, that the federal actions described in this complaint constitute a federal unlawful policy of committing arrests without probable cause, in violation of the Fourth Amendment;

3. A declaration, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2201, that the federal actions described in this complaint present an imminent threat that Plaintiffs will be arrested without probable cause, by unidentified federal agents, in violation of the Fourth Amendment; and

4. An injunction, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2202 and 5 U.S.C. § 702, permanently enjoining the Defendants from engaging in the federal actions described in this complaint, and specifically requiring that the Defendants and their officers and agents:

- a. Refrain from interfering in or otherwise policing lawful and peaceful assemblies and protests in the City of Chicago;
- b. Cease enforcement of their unlawful policy of conducting arrests without probable cause to believe a federal crime has been committed and conducting “preemptive arrests”;
- c. Refrain from arresting individuals in the City of Chicago without probable cause to believe that a federal crime has been committed;
- d. Identify themselves and their agency before detaining or arresting any person off the streets of Chicago;
- e. Explain to any person detained or arrested that the person is being detained or arrested and explain the basis for that action; and
- f. Any other relief this Court deems proper.

Respectfully submitted,

Civil Action No. 20-cv-7184

COMPLAINT FOR
INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

[Administrative Procedure Act Case]

2           1.       This lawsuit challenges the unlawful and unconstitutional overreach of federal law
3 enforcement in response to and in anticipation of civil protests in progressive United States cities.
4 In particular, the lawsuit challenges the federal government’s new policy authorizing the expanded
5 and unbounded jurisdiction of federal law enforcement under the guise of protecting federal 6 property, and the federal government’s related and unconstitutional practice of commandeering
7 local law enforcement officers for similar ends.

8           2.       Plaintiffs are the cities of Portland, Oregon, and Oakland, California—cities that,
9 like others across the United States, have primary responsibility for the health, safety, and welfare
10 of their residents, including the protection and oversight of general public safety during protests.
11 Plaintiffs have police departments, fire departments, and other local governmental departments
12 whose purposes and responsibilities are to reduce and address violence and/or support public safety 13 in their communities. In conducting these important functions, Plaintiffs aim to respect, honor, and 14 protect the First Amendment rights, among other rights, of their residents and visitors, so that those 15 residents and visitors can demonstrate, march, and protest. Plaintiffs also have obligations under 16 local and state law to respond, as necessary, to threats of violence and community harm. Outside
17 of the exceptional actions taken by Defendants as described in this Complaint, Plaintiffs have long 18 operated with this understanding of their duties and authority.

19           3.       Defendants are the Department of Justice (“DOJ”) and the United States
20 Department of Homeland Security (“DHS”), and the leaders of both departments. In response to 21 directives from President Donald J. Trump beginning in or around June 2020, Defendants 22 unilaterally, unlawfully, and unconstitutionally began instituting a policy that authorized the 23 deployment and operation of federal agents in United States cities, allegedly for the purpose of 24 assuring domestic “law and order” and “tak[ing] over cities.”

25           4.       The full scope and parameters of the policy authorizing these actions are currently 26 unknown, as no ordinary public process was followed in its creation. However, for the first known 27 time, Defendants are using 40 U.S.C. § 1315—a statute which authorizes federal agents to protect 28 federal property and personnel—as the basis for, at a minimum: (a) deploying federal law

1 enforcement to quash civil protests in United States cities; (b) authorizing the engagement,
2 surveillance, and operations of these deployments to include non-federal property and virtually
3 limitless jurisdiction; and (c) erecting a fence around the Hatfield Federal Courthouse in Portland,
4 without a permit or City consent, that encroaches on the City's right-of-way (the "Policy").

5 5. Using that authority or other, unknown authorities, Defendants have also instituted
6 an unlawful practice in Portland of commandeering control of local law enforcement officers in 7 direct contravention of the City's express revocation of consent, and for unknown or pretextual
8 ends (the "Practice").

9 6. Based on information and belief, the Policy is a response to, incorporates, and/or is 10 guided by, the June 26, 2020 Executive Order 13933, Protecting American Monuments,
11 Memorials, and Statues and Combating Recent Criminal Violence (the "Executive Order"), signed
12 by President Trump following nationwide protests—quite possibly the largest social justice
13 protests in our nation's history—over police brutality and systemic racism. The Executive Order
14 prescribes a set of directives aimed at punishing and responding to "State and local governments"
15 that had allegedly "lost the ability to distinguish between the lawful exercise of rights to free speech 16 and assembly and unvarnished vandalism," or otherwise "failed to protect public monuments, 17 memorials, and statues."

18 7. Based on information and belief, the Practice is similarly in response to, 19 incorporates, and/or is guided by, the Executive Order.

20 8. Armed with this Executive Order, Defendants instituted and/or continued refining 21 and executing the Policy, which concerns the broad deployment and operation of federal law
22 enforcement in United States cities without the consent, request, or authorization from the states 23 or local leaders; without using any known and non-pretextual legal authority to do so; and with the 24 purpose and/or effect of taking on quintessential general policing powers granted to other 25 governments.

26 9. Federal law enforcement agents have, under the Policy, been deployed to United 27 States cities, either secretly or with little warning, under at least three separate operations or 28

1 programs: Operation Legend; Operation Diligent Valor, which includes the recent deployment of 2 agents in Portland, Oregon; and the Protecting American Communities Task Force (“PACT”).

3 10. Although Defendants and/or their agents or employees have publicly claimed that 4 certain operations are for the purpose of protecting federal property under 40 U.S.C. § 1315,
5 internal memoranda, continuing public statements, and activities in cities such as Portland instead 6 reveal a distinct and meaningful policy shift to use federal law enforcement to unilaterally step in 7 or replace local law enforcement departments that do not subscribe to the President’s view of 8 domestic “law and order.”

9 11. Among other things, reported non-public memos from DHS reveal that, under the 10 Policy and in response to the Executive Order, federal law enforcement agents are now authorized 11 to engage in surveillance activities for threats to any public monument, memorial, or statue—12 which in major cities like Plaintiff jurisdictions, could constitute surveillance within the entire 13 jurisdiction regardless of federal interests or harms at stake.

14 12. In addition, DOJ and/or DHS have engaged in a variety of unauthorized activities 15 under the Policy. Such activities in Portland have included surveilling the text messages of 16 protesters and building a fence that blocks the right-of-way on City property and refusing to 17 remove it upon request of City officials.

18 13. Defendants, as well as President Trump, have expressed an intent to expand or at 19 least continue the Policy. President Trump has stated: “We’re going to have more federal law
20 enforcement. That I can tell you.”—while threatening to send federal agents into major cities “run 21 by liberal Democrats.” For instance, he said: “We’re not going to let New York and Chicago, and 22 Philadelphia and Detroit and Baltimore and all of these—Oakland is a mess. We’re not going to 23 let this happen in our country.”

24 14. These threats are not new. President Trump has long threatened American cities led 25 by Democrats. But as recently as April 2020, Defendants did not purport to have, or act in 26 accordance with, the authority they now assert under the Policy. In April, numerous public 27 monuments, memorials, and statues were equally or more under threat from armed and uncivil
28 protesters who opposed public health measures to control COVID-19. But those protesters

1 expressed a different set of political views than the majority of those protesting after May 25, 2020,
2 and no policy was then in effect to allow or require the type of federal operations now occurring
3 or allowed to occur under the Policy.

4 15. The Policy threatens to upend the current federalism structure and working
5 relationships between local and federal law enforcement agencies. Section 1315 has never before 6 been interpreted to permit the actions taken by Defendants under its auspices.

7 16. Defendants have not and did not publicly rely on any of the limited authorities, as 8 described below, that would lawfully allow deployments of federal agents within the parameters
9 defined in such laws.

10 17. The Policy is not merely a change in Defendants' interpretation of their own
11 enforcement authority. The Policy is based on a misunderstanding, misinterpretation, error, and/or 12 disregard for the scope of Defendants' legal authority.

13 18. In addition, no constitutional authority has been offered for the related Practice of 14 commandeering Portland's law enforcement by refusing to release Portland law enforcement 15 officers from their temporary deputation as federal agents, conscripting them without consent and 16 against Portland's express wishes into ongoing deputation.

17 19. This monumental policy change and new commandeering practice harms Plaintiffs'
18 and other cities' abilities to safely govern and police in ways aligned with and responsive to 19 community goals and racial equity reforms. As local governments, Plaintiffs have independent 20 police forces; community relationships; and locally-determined policing policies, practices, and 21 procedures. Plaintiffs' police forces have always been able to expect when and how federal law
22 enforcement agents could assert federal powers within their jurisdictions. The use of deployments
23 and operations violating established constitutional parameters, politically motivated interventions, 24 and lawless commandeering of local law enforcement are unconstitutional and unauthorized in 25 part because of the havoc such actions impose on local jurisdictions and the innumerable ways in 26 which these deployments run roughshod over the longstanding federalist balance of the general
27 policing power.

1 Portland is home to more than 650,000 residents, and the City's leadership has committed to 2 significant reforms to local policing and other policies, with an aim toward promoting racial 3 justice.

4 29. The CITY of OAKLAND is a municipal corporation and charter city located in the 5 Northern District of California, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State
6 of California. The City of Oakland is home to over 420,000 people and consistently ranks as one
7 of the most ethnically and racially diverse major cities in the United States. Approximately 23%
8 of Oakland's residents identify as Black or African American, 26% as Hispanic or Latinx, 15% as 9 Asian or Asian-American, and 5.5% as multi-racial. The City's leadership is engaged in significant 10 reforms to local policing and other policies, with an aim toward promoting racial justice.

11 30. Plaintiffs are aggrieved by Defendants' actions and have standing to bring this 12 action because the Policy and its implementation and the Practice harm Plaintiffs' independent and 13 constitutionally recognized economic, dignitary, and proprietary interests and will continue to 14 cause injury unless and until the Policy is vacated and Defendants' practices are permanently 15 enjoined.

16 31. WILLIAM BARR is the United States Attorney General. He is sued in his official 17 capacity.

18 32. The UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE is a cabinet agency within 19 the executive branch of the United States government and is an agency within the meaning of 5
20 U.S.C. § 552(f).

21 33. CHAD F. WOLF is the purported Acting Secretary of Homeland Security. He is 22 sued in his official capacity.

23 34. The UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY is a 24 cabinet agency within the executive branch of the United States government and is an agency
25 within the meaning of 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). Its stated missions involve anti-terrorism, border security,
26 immigration and customs. It was created in 2002 by combining 22 different federal departments
27 and agencies into a single Cabinet agency.

FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS

Background

35. Adherence to the Constitution is the bedrock of American democracy. Regardless of any changes to the interpretation of the Constitution over time, certain structures endure.

36. One such foundational structure is the separation of federal powers: the division of authority and responsibility that guides all legal action taken in the United States. Under the separation of powers, the Congress makes law, the Executive Branch implements that law, and the Judiciary assesses the legality of those laws and actions.

37. Another foundational structure is federalism: the division or sharing of legal power between the national government and other government units, including states, counties, cities, parishes, commonwealths, territories, and tribal governments (hereafter “other governments”). Other governments, including cities, “ensure[] that powers which ‘in the ordinary course of affairs, concern the lives, liberties, and properties of the people’ [are] held by governments more local and more accountable than a distant federal bureaucracy.” Nat’l Fed’n of Indep. Bus. v. Sebelius, 567 U.S. 519, 536 (2012) (quoting The Federalist No. 45 at 293 (J. Madison)).

38. A federalist system’s division of power evolves, but in expected ways, such as through Congress passing new laws to further regulate other governments, or other governments using the courts to push back on laws or rules made by the Congress or the Executive Branch.

39. Within this federalism framework and under the Tenth Amendment to the United States Constitution, the general police powers are left to the states, who in turn often delegate such plenary authority to cities like Plaintiffs. See, e.g., Cal. Const., art. 11, § 7; Or. Const., art XI, § 2. As the Supreme Court has long held, “the facets of governing that touch on citizens’ daily lives are normally administered by smaller governments closer to the governed.” Nat’l Fed’n of Indep. Bus., 567 U.S. at 536.

40. Accordingly, the federal government has never created a federal domestic police force with broad powers. The general policing power, including over most violent crime, is left to other governments. As courts have repeatedly held, “We can think of no better example of the police power, which the Founders denied the National Government and reposed in the States, than

1 the suppression of violent crime and vindication of its victims.” United States v. Morrison, 529
2 U.S. 598, 618 (2000).

3 41. Instead, where Congress has authorized, the Executive Branch has executed, and 4 the Judiciary approved, the federal government has created a constellation of different law
5 enforcement agencies, each of which has a specific domain of authority as defined by federal 6 statutes. For the most part, those domains of authority are not coextensive with other governments’
7 general policing power.

8 42. Within the scope of those federal statutes, such federal law enforcement activities
9 have been limited to: (a) the enforcement of a direct federal interest (e.g., enforcement of a federal 10 law); or (b) assisting other governments, which constitutes the enforcement of an indirect federal 11 interest.

12 43. Whether enforcing a direct federal interest or assisting other governments, federal 13 law enforcement acts within prescribed legal bounds. Either federal law enforcement is invited by 14 other governments to participate in any number of lawful collaborative activities or federal law
15 enforcement may intervene without invitation in the circumstances where federal law permits.

16 44. In the former category of invited collaboration, Plaintiffs have, like many other 17 cities, frequently engaged in lawful partnerships with federal law enforcement. From subject-18 specific task forces to investigating borderless crimes, other governments often depend on and 19 engage with federal law enforcement to help protect residents and visitors. Plaintiffs have, for 20 example, partnered with the Federal Bureau of Investigation on child exploitation task forces; with 21 the Drug Enforcement Administration to combat illegal drug trafficking; with the Bureau of 22 Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives to proactively identify the source of guns used for 23 crimes; with the United States Marshals Service (“USMS”) to apprehend those fleeing the justice
24 system; and with the United States Secret Service to tackle identity theft.

25 45. These past and present local-federal relationships are voluntary and consensual.
26 Federal law enforcement and local law enforcement agencies generally work together in Plaintiffs’
27 communities with a mutual understanding of the mission, clear directives regarding jurisdictional
28 functions, and specific agreements (e.g., via Memoranda of Understanding or Agreement) that

1 inform both sides of their respective obligations. Such partnerships were and are authorized by 2 law, typically memorialized by mutual agreement, and not the subject of this lawsuit.

3 46. In the latter category of uninvited intervention, the federal government has certain 4 powers that are superior to those of other governments, made so by the Supremacy Clause.

5 47. Such powers include federal enforcement of crucial fundamental federal rights, 6 including civil rights. Throughout the nation's history, federal enforcement authorities have at 7 times overridden other governments' ignorant or bigoted refusals to grant or defend 8 constitutionally protected rights. Whether desegregating schools or extending the voting franchise
9 to Black people, federal enforcement—without invitation or local approval—has been at times 10 both lawful and vital.

11 48. Such intervention powers may also, in extraordinary circumstances, permit the 12 deployment of federal forces domestically, in which federal law enforcement temporarily takes 13 over the general police powers otherwise reserved to other governments. Such circumstances are 14 constitutionally delineated by Article I, Section 8, one of the Militia Clauses (allowing Congress
15 to “call[] forth the Militia to execute the Laws of the Union”) and by Article IV, Section 4 (the 16 obligation to protect the states against invasion and against “domestic violence”).

17 49. The Constitution reserves both of those described powers for the Legislative 18 Branch, either exclusively or principally. The cited Militia Clause only gives power to Congress.
19 The Article IV Republican Form of Government Clause gives power first to the Legislature, and 20 then only to the Executive “when the Legislature cannot be convened.”

21 50. Under these authorities, Congress has, among other things, passed the Insurrection
22 Act of 1807, now codified as amended at 10 U.S.C. §§ 251-255, which allows domestic military 23 intervention when circumstances make it impracticable to enforce the law by any other means, and 24 the complementary Posse Comitatus Act of 1876, now codified at 18 U.S.C. § 1385, eliminating 25 virtually any use of the military to regulate American civilians.

26 51. These laws represent some key legal guardrails constitutionally implemented by 27 the Legislative Branch to limit and define where the Executive Branch may, without permission 28 and while overriding other governments' prerogatives, nonetheless enforce federal law.

1           52.     Specifically, the Insurrection Act empowers the President to call into service the
2 United States Armed Forces and the National Guard: (a) when formally requested by a state; (b)
3 to address an insurrection in any state, when that insurrection makes it impracticable to otherwise
4 enforce the law; or (c) to address an insurrection, domestic violence, unlawful combination or 5 conspiracy, in any state, which results in the deprivation of constitutionally secured rights, and 6 where the state is unable, fails, or refuses to protect those rights. 10 U.S.C. §§ 251-253.

7           53.     There is a set legal process for invoking the Insurrection Act that is neither
8 clandestine nor equivocal. To invoke the Act, a president must issue a “proclamation to disperse”:
9 that is, “by proclamation, immediately order the insurgents to disperse and retire peaceably to their 10 abodes within a limited time.” 10 U.S.C. § 254. Such proclamations have been issued as Executive 11 Orders and/or as Proclamations published in the Federal Register.

12           54.     The Insurrection Act has never been invoked in the 21st century. In its limited usage
13 in the 20th century, the federal government often invoked the Act to protect civil rights, 14 particularly the rights of Black children to attend desegregated schools.

15           55.     When the Act was most recently invoked, in 1992, then-President George H.W.
16 Bush issued a general Proclamation and an operationalizing Executive Order. See Proclamation
17 No. 6427, 57 Fed. Reg. 19,359 (May 1, 1992); Exec. Order No. 12804, 57 Fed. Reg. 19,361 (May 18 1, 1992). Executive Order 12804 provided detailed instructions for Cabinet officials to respond to 19 the alleged insurrection in California. Among other things, it directed the Attorney General: “(1) 20 to coordinate the activities of all Federal agencies assisting in the suppression of violence and in 21 the administration of justice in and about the City and County of Los Angeles, and other districts
22 of California, and (2) to coordinate the activities of all such agencies with those of State and local 23 agencies similarly engaged.”

24           56.     DOJ and Defendant Barr are aware of the legal process for invoking the 25 Insurrection Act. As an agency, DOJ has typically been involved when the Insurrection Act is 26 invoked. As an individual, Defendant Barr was serving in an official capacity as Attorney General 27 in 1992.

1           57.     The Executive Branch’s authority under the Act, or under other such extraordinary
2 emergency powers, does not undergird the Policy.

3           58.     Any invocations of emergency powers or interventions under those powers are rare,
4 reserved for extraordinary circumstances, and are not the subject of this lawsuit.

5           59.     Finally, Executive Branch agencies, endowed by Congress or the Constitution with 6 particular powers, must, per Article II, Section 3, “take care” to execute their duties under those 7 authorities. Sometimes, those authorities are clearly defined by statute or a provision of the 8 Constitution. At other times, those authorities are further crystalized and concretized by Executive 9 Branch interpretations of the authority so granted. Those interpretations come in forms such as 10 regulations, rules, and myriad types of sub-regulatory guidance.

11           60.     The legality of such Executive Branch interpretations of its authority is easily
12 tested, commonly through the APA, which governs how the Executive Branch creates and acts on 13 those interpretations, and what those interpretations are. Stated simply, the APA is a key method 14 by which the Judiciary may assess the legality of the Executive Branch’s interpretation of its 15 powers, including whether such interpretations are “arbitrary and capricious,” “contrary to 16 constitutional right[s],” or “in excess of statutory authority.” 5 U.S.C. § 706.

17           61.     Such Executive Branch interpretations of its authority may also be tested through 18 other legal means, such as by questioning their constitutionality directly in federal court.

19           62.     Such Executive Branch interpretations are or may be the subject of this lawsuit.

20           63.     As these recitations reflect, the federal government has lawful tools to intervene—
21 voluntarily or involuntarily—in other governments’ exercise of their police powers. These 22 recitations also reflect that those tools are either used with mutual agreement, or without agreement
23 in circumstances, such as those enumerated, rooted in the Constitution. Finally, these recitations
24 reflect that the federal government follows lawful and expected paths to exercise authority over 25 other governments.

1 Policy Change Regarding Deployment and Operation of Federal Forces

2 64. Consistent with the above framework, until recently, Plaintiffs believed that they
3 understood the structure, procedures, and basis for both the invited and the uninvited deployment
4 and operations of federal law enforcement agents into their communities.

5 65. However, in recent months, following the direction of President Trump, Defendants
6 have instituted this new Policy, whose full parameters are unknown, but that, at minimum,
7 unlawfully expands the unilateral deployment and operations of federal law enforcement to quell
8 protests and broadly assert general police powers.

9 66. The Policy and each and every instance where Defendants, through their officers, 10 employees, and/or agents, unlawfully deployed or commanded federal law enforcement to act in 11 excess of or contrary to 40 U.S.C. § 1315 or the Constitution constitutes “final agency action”
12 under the APA.

13 Prior Status Quo

14 67. President Trump has long issued threats against cities he views as progressive or 15 racially diverse, including Plaintiffs. In 2017, he threatened to “send in the feds” to Chicago if 16 their mayor did not fix the “carnage,” and compared the city unfavorably to Afghanistan. In 2019, 17 in describing Los Angeles, New York, and San Francisco, he referred to these “sanctuary cities 18 run by liberal people” as places where “people living there are living in hell,” and threatened that 19 he might “intercede” or “may do something to get that whole thing cleaned up.” In 2020, he 20 repeatedly threatened Plaintiffs Portland and Oakland.

21 68. Separately, since President Trump took office, Americans have engaged in some of 22 the largest protests in our nation’s history. The day after his inauguration, between 3.2 million and 23 5.2 million people marched in the streets to protest for women’s rights and against the President.
24 Hundreds of thousands protested again for the same reason on the same day in the following years.
25 Since January 2017, millions of people have participated in protests across the country, including 26 protests at federal property, monuments, memorials, and statues, as well as at state and local 27 property, monuments, memorials, and statues.

1           69.     Despite President Trump’s repeated threats, and despite thousands of protests by 2 millions of Americans, Defendants never previously asserted or exercised the authority they are 3 now asserting and exercising under the Policy, nor, on information and belief, engaged in the 4 related Practice.

5           70.     An alleged source of the authority for the Policy is 40 U.S.C. § 1315. Under 6 subsection (a) of that statute, the Secretary of Homeland Security protects the buildings, grounds,
7 and property that are owned, occupied, or secured by the federal government.

8           71.     Although the Federal Protective Service (“FPS”), a division of DHS, is typically 9 the main provider of security and law enforcement services at federal government facilities, the 10 Secretary of Homeland Security may transfer DHS officers or agents specifically “for duty in 11 connection with the protection of” that federal property. 40 U.S.C. § 1315(b)(1).

12           72.     The scope of 40 U.S.C. § 1315 is clear. The statute states that the Secretary of 13 Homeland Security: “shall protect the buildings, grounds, and property that are owned, occupied, 14 or secured by the Federal Government (including any agency, instrumentality, or wholly owned 15 or mixed-ownership corporation thereof) and the persons on the property.” Id. § 1315(a).

16           73.     The authority granted off federal property is limited—section 1315 only allows 17 designated employees to perform authorized duties outside of federal property “to the extent 18 necessary to protect the property and persons on the property.” Id. § 1315(b)(1). Further, in the 19 statute’s six specifically enumerated powers, only one power, § 1315(b)(2)(E), allows for activity
20 “on and off the property in question.” Per the canon of expressio unius est exclusio alterius, 21 including that these powers extend “on and off” federal property in one subsection implies that the 22 five other enumerated powers do not likewise extend “on and off” the property, unless they are to 23 advance the specific goal articulated in subsection (b)(1).

24           74.     Outside of federal property, the Secretary of Homeland Security may enter into 25 agreements with federal agencies and with state and local governments for officers and agents 26 designated under section 1315 “to enforce Federal laws and State and local laws concurrently with 27 other Federal law enforcement officers and with State and local law enforcement officers.” Id.
28 § 1315(e). Similarly, the Secretary “may utilize the facilities and services of Federal, State, and

1 local law enforcement agencies, with the consent of the agencies.” Id. § 1315(d)(3)(emphasis
2 added).

3 75. Based on information and belief and on publicly available facts such as those 4 recited here, until as recently as May 2020, there had been no policy or practice through which
5 Defendants unilaterally deployed or commanded federal law enforcement under 40 U.S.C. § 1315
6 for general police purposes; to respond to or quash civil protests; to protect and surveil non-federal 7 property, monuments, memorials, or statues; or to unilaterally take over non-federal property.

8 76. For example, as recently as April 2020, hundreds of protestors gathered at the 9 Michigan State Capitol in Lansing to protest executive orders and shelter-in-place orders in light
10 of the COVID-19 pandemic.

11 77. The Michigan State Capitol was completed in 1878, has been listed on the National 12 Register of Historic Places since 1971, and was designated as a National Historic Landmark in 13 1992. The Capitol and its grounds contain at least one monument, three memorials, and several 14 statues. The Capitol is 0.1 miles from the Charles E. Chamberlain Federal Building and Post 15 Office.

16 78. During these so-called “lockdown protests,” many protestors openly carried
17 firearms in or around the Capitol, forcibly entered the Michigan State Capitol, issued threats
18 against Michigan Governor Gretchen Whitmer, and verbally assaulted Michigan state police.

19 79. As another example, as recently as May 2020, hundreds of protestors gathered at 20 the California State Capitol in Sacramento to protest executive orders and shelter-in-place orders
21 in light of the COVID-19 pandemic.

22 80. The California State Capitol was completed in 1874, has been listed on the National 23 Register of Historic Places since 1973, and was designated as a California Historical Landmark in 24 1974. The Capitol and its park are home to numerous monuments, memorials, and statues,
25 including the World Peace Rose Garden, the California Peace Officers’ Memorial, the Vietnam
26 Veterans Memorial, and the Thomas Starr King Memorial. The Capitol is one mile from the local 27 federal courthouse and under one mile from the local DHS office.

1           81. During these so-called “lockdown protests,” protesters gathered at the Capitol in 2 violation of stay-at-home orders, confronted California Highway Patrol officers, and displayed
3 depictions of California Governor Gavin Newsom as a Nazi in front of a Swastika banner.

4           82. In April and May, protestors also gathered outside the State Capitol in Salem, 5 Oregon. At least one protestor appears to be open carrying a rifle in news footage. Members of the 6 far-right militia groups the “Three Percenters” and “Proud Boys” also attended the protests.
7 Several of the protests were allegedly organized by militia groups in violation of Oregon Governor
8 Kate Brown’s stay-at-home orders.

9           83. Based on information and belief, federal law enforcement officers were not 10 deployed in response to any of these so-called “lockdown protests”; not to surveil the protestors
11 or public officials; not to assess threats to public buildings, monuments, memorials, or statues; not 12 to protect against civil unrest; and not to otherwise engage in general policing.

13 Existing Framework for Local Law Enforcement Mutual Aid or Cross Designation with Other
14 Government Agencies

15           84. As described above, there are numerous examples of how local law enforcement, 16 including Plaintiffs’ police departments, collaborate with or receive assistance from other law
17 enforcement agencies, including federal law enforcement agencies such as Defendants and their 18 subcomponents.

19           85. Coordinating with local law enforcement has, outside of the Policy and Practice, 20 been fundamental to how federal law enforcement agencies interact with their local counterparts.

21           86. Even in circumstances where the local jurisdiction has policies that are directly in 22 opposition to the federal law enforcement agency’s activities, the federal agencies, including 23 Defendants, have nonetheless coordinated with local agencies in some fashion, given the 24 longstanding recognition of the importance of such coordination.

25           87. For example, 28 C.F.R. § 0.112 governs special deputation powers of the USMS, 26 which is a bureau within DOJ. Pursuant to this section, the USMS Director is authorized to 27 deputize, in relevant part, “[s]elected federal, state, or local law enforcement officers whenever the 28 law enforcement needs of the U.S. Marshals Service so require.” 28 C.F.R. § 0.112(b).

1           88.     The duties of the USMS include protecting the federal judiciary, apprehending
2 federal fugitives, managing and selling seized assets illegally acquired by criminals, housing and 3 transporting federal prisoners, and operating the Witness Security Program.

4           89.     Separately, Plaintiffs have also long entered into and relied on “mutual aid”
5 agreements with fellow local governments, such as other city and county governments. These 6 mutual aid agreements set forth the circumstances under which mutual aid partners will come to 7 the assistance of a member of the agreement. For example, Oakland has requested assistance from 8 its mutual aid partners, such as Alameda County and surrounding cities, in responding to natural
9 disasters or to certain violent “Occupy” protests a decade ago. It is not uncommon for mutual aid
10 partners to request dozens or even hundreds of officers to assist with significant needs. Indeed, in 11 response to the recent demonstrations, Portland has sought and received mutual aid from numerous 12 other local law enforcement agencies.

13           90.     No matter the originating source of the mutual aid, Plaintiffs’ police departments 14 follow specific procedures when any outside law enforcement participate in their operations, or 15 when outside law enforcement perform operations in their cities.

16           91.     Those procedures typically include that, when any outside law enforcement agency
17 comes to assist Plaintiffs’ police departments, those outside agents or officers first check in at the 18 local staging center or emergency operations center, learn of the operation plan, and are connected 19 in some manner to the department’s communications systems. These universal steps are designed 20 to protect all law enforcement officers and ensure they are operating with similar information and 21 shared means of communication.

22     Nationwide Protests for Racial Justice and Police Reform

23           92.     On May 25, 2020, George Floyd was tragically killed by Minneapolis police and a 24 video of his death was widely circulated in the media. On May 26, 2020, people gathered in 25 Minneapolis in protest. Shortly thereafter, people gathered throughout the nation, including in 26 Plaintiffs’ jurisdictions, to advocate for police reform and racial justice.

1           93.     Polls have suggested that between 15 million and 26 million people participated in 2 these protests, making them the largest demonstrations in American history. Between May 22 and 3 August 22, approximately 93% of protests were peaceful.

4           94.     Incidents of property damage and violence, however, were reported in many 5 jurisdictions in the country. Incidents of property damage occurred in suburban California, and 6 armed civilians and other non-state actors committed acts of violence in states including Florida,
7 Indiana, and Tennessee.

8           95.     People began to gather in Downtown Portland on or around May 29, 2020, 9 including at an event titled “A Eulogy for Black America” organized by the Portland chapter of 10 the NAACP.

11           96.     On May 29, 2020, Portland Mayor Ted Wheeler issued a statement that he stood 12 “in solidarity with those who grieve for the senseless death of George Floyd” and committed to 13 standing alongside “our black community and not just call out racism when we see it, but 14 meaningfully take a stand against it.”

15           97.     In Portland, protests continued in June. The first few days of June were identified 16 as having the largest crowds of the Portland George Floyd protests, with numbers exceeding 17 10,000 people each day. During this time, a much smaller group of people engaged in significant 18 property damage and violence directed at police. Notwithstanding some criminal activity, the 19 majority of the protests remained peaceful, and toward the end of June, the scale of protests began 20 to decrease. The focal points of protests during June were the Justice Center (which houses the 21 Portland Police Bureau’s (“PPB’s”) Central Precinct and primary offices, as well as the 22 Multnomah County Detention Center) and other PPB and Multnomah County buildings.

23           98.     At this time, President Trump continued his past practice of frequent and repeated
24 threats to deploy uninvited federal law enforcement and/or military power to progressive cities.

25           99.     Protests continued nationally throughout June 2020, along with the President’s 26 threatening rhetoric.

1 President Trump Issues the Executive Order; Defendants Institute the Policy

2 100. On June 26, 2020, President Trump signed Executive Order 13933, entitled 3 Protecting American Monuments, Memorials, and Statues and Combating Recent Criminal 4 Violence.

5 101. The Executive Order announced that the federal government would: (a) prosecute
6 anyone vandalizing or desecrating public monuments, memorials, and statues; government
7 property; or religious property; (b) prosecute anyone inciting related violence; and (c) withhold 8 federal support from local and state governments that failed to protect such structures from 9 vandalism.

10 102. The Executive Order further stated that if the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary 11 of Homeland Security, or the Administrator of General Services requested federal personnel “to 12 assist with the protection of Federal monuments, memorials, statues, or property,” they shall be 13 provided by the Department of Defense, DOJ, and/or DHS.

14 103. Defendants rapidly began to implement this Executive Order, in light of the 15 President’s perceived motivation of quelling protests, targeting Democratic cities, and establishing 16 broad federal police presence in certain cities.

17 104. Based on information and belief, such implementation constitutes all of or is a 18 substantial part of the Policy.

19 105. First, on July 1, 2020, Defendant Wolf announced—pursuant to the Executive 20 Order—the formation of PACT within DHS. PACT was charged with “conduct[ing] ongoing 21 assessments of potential civil unrest or destruction and allocat[ing] resources to protect people and 22 property,” including “potential surge activity to ensure the continuing protection of critical 23 locations.”

24 106. Second, Defendants began changing or continuing to change guidance regarding 25 the lawful scope of federal activity under 40 U.S.C. § 1315. Rather than limiting federal 26 involvement under that statute to federal laws or property, Defendants expanded the ability of 27 federal agents to address threats to any public monument, memorial, or statue, regardless of its 28 federal nature.

1           107. For example, a July 2020 leaked, unclassified document entitled “Job Aid: DHS
2 Office of Intelligence & Analysis (I&A) Activities in Furtherance of Protecting American
3 Monuments, Memorials, Statues, and Combatting Recent Criminal Violence” (“Job Aid”) shows
4 that parts of the Defendants’ intelligence community were now authorized to monitor and collect
5 information regarding protest activities beyond suspected or planned attacks on federal facilities,
6 including threats to damage or destroy any public monument, memorial, or statue.

7           108. The “Job Aid” was intended to “expand[] intelligence activities necessary to 8 mitigate the significant threat to homeland security articulated in the President’s executive order
9 of June 26, 2020.”

10           109. Finally, Defendants began deploying, cross-designating, and/or commanding
11 federal law enforcement agents pursuant to the Executive Order and the Policy.

12           110. Specifically, Defendant Wolf announced the deployment and pre-position of Rapid 13 Deployment Teams across the country ahead of the July 4th holiday. Defendant Wolf stated that 14 the task force would not “stand idly by while violent anarchists and rioters seek not only to 15 vandalize and destroy the symbols of our nation, but to disrupt law and order and sow chaos in our 16 communities.”

17           111. Taken together, the Executive Order, the creation or amendment of internal 18 guidance documents, the creation of the PACT, the creation of other cross-designated federal law 19 enforcement teams, and the deployment and operations of such teams, are, form part of, or are 20 results of, the Policy.

21           112. The Policy constitutes “final agency action.”

22           Deployment and Other Activities in Portland

23           113. The following recitations are merely limited examples of why the Policy and/or 24 specific acts in furtherance of the Policy constitute final agency action under which rights and 25 obligations have been determined and from which legal consequences have flowed.

26           114. It is unclear how many deployments of federal agents were made in July pursuant 27 to the Policy.

1           115. In the days before Defendants deployed federal personnel to Portland, the crowds
2 attending demonstrations had shrunk. By early July 2020, only about 150 people could be seen
3 gathering in downtown Portland on any given night.

4           116. On or about July 2, 2020, Defendant Wolf ordered the deployment of DHS, USMS,
5 U.S. Customs and Border Protection (“CBP”), and the FPS to Portland in response to civil protests
6 as part of Operation Diligent Valor.

7           117. Defendants did not seek Portland’s consent. Defendants did not act at the direction
8 of PPB incident command that had been policing nightly protests for over a month.

9           118. The federal forces deployed to Portland from CBP included members of BORTAC,
10 a paramilitary unit of the United States Border Patrol. BORTAC troops wear military-type 11 uniforms and armament, are trained for tactical raids on organized gangs smuggling persons or 12 drugs into the United States, and have in the past been deployed to such places as Afghanistan and 13 Iraq.

14           119. On information and belief, BORTAC troops have no training in civilian crowd 15 control.

16           120. Through Operation Diligent Valor, Defendants sent teams of agents—untrained in 17 crowd control and wearing military fatigues—onto Portland’s streets. Their uniforms bore no
18 governmental, administrative or personal names, just the word “police” in tape. Federal agents
19 used tactics and munitions that escalated violence in Portland.

20           121. On or about July 11, 2020, federal agents allegedly fired impact munitions into an 21 unarmed crowd. One of the bullets struck a protestor and fractured his skull.

22           122. Starting on or about July 14, 2020, federal agents drove around Portland in 23 unmarked vans and detained individuals associated with the protests. Federal agents were 24 patrolling and detaining individuals far beyond the immediate vicinity of the federal courthouse.
25 Agents allegedly seized at least one individual who was more than two blocks from the courthouse
26 and not engaged in any activity related to federal property.

27           123. Upon information and belief, federal agents seized multiple protestors and held
28 them for hours before releasing them for lack of probable cause. The federal agents gave no

1 justification for why they detained particular residents, searched their belongings, and placed
2 residents in cells for hours before reading them their Miranda rights.

3 124. Far from imposing peace in the City's streets, the tactics and munitions used by 4 federal agents antagonized demonstrators, escalated the protests, and caused further unrest.

5 125. On July 22, 2020, federal agents fired tear gas into a crowd that included Portland
6 Mayor Wheeler.

7 126. Later reports of internal DHS documents showed that the Office of Intelligence
8 Analysis also collected and analyzed messages between protesters in Portland, specifically 9 surveilling protesters' communications via the Telegram messaging app, discussing where to take 10 the protests and how to avoid officers. The purpose of this monitoring is still unknown. It is also 11 unknown whether the surveillance was limited to the protection of federal property or gathered on 12 federal property.

13 127. On July 29, 2020, the Governor Brown reached a negotiated agreement with the 14 federal government. Defendants agreed to withdraw federal agents from Portland with assurance 15 that Oregon State Police would take on additional duties guarding the safety of the federal 16 courthouse in Portland.

17 Justifications for the Policy Are Pretextual

18 128. Although the purported purpose of the deployment was to protect federal property
19 that had been vandalized or threatened during protests, anonymous statements from White House
20 Officials indicate such purpose was mere pretext. The sources alleged that President Trump 21 became interested in federal operations against protestors in Portland as a way to convey a "law-22 and-order message" and to "amplify strife in cities."

23 129. As stated above, DHS has cited 40 U.S.C. § 1315 as the legal basis for Operation 24 Diligent Valor and the general practice of deploying federal troops to Portland, despite the 25 observed scope and operations of agents being well beyond the purpose or function of protecting 26 federal persons or property.

27 130. The U.S. Crisis Monitor found that prior to that deployment, "over 83% of 28 demonstrations in Oregon were non-violent. Post-deployment, the percentage of violent

1 demonstrations [rose] from under 17% to over 42% [in Oregon], suggesting that the 2 federal response has only aggravated unrest.”

3 131. Despite statements justifying deployments as responses to crime or “anarchy,”
4 crime rates in Plaintiffs’ communities have been decreasing overall; neither city is in the list of top 5 10 United States cities with the largest number of violent crimes per 100,000 residents. Moreover,
6 Plaintiffs’ crime rates do not differ dramatically from those in other, Republican-run cities. For 7 example, violent crime rates in Fresno, Jacksonville, Oklahoma City, and Tulsa—cities with 8 Republican mayors—far exceed the violent crime rates in Portland. These cities also have murder
9 rates at twice that of Portland.

10 132. A comprehensive review by the Armed Conflict Location and Event Data 11 (“ACLED”) Project and the Princeton University Bridging Divides Initiative underscores the 12 overall peaceful nature of the social justice-related protests in summer 2020. Between May 25,
13 2020, and August 22, 2020, there were 7,750 Black Lives Matter-related demonstrations in 2,440
14 locations in all 50 states and Washington, D.C. Overall, in summer 2020, there were at least 10,600
15 demonstrations across the United States. Of those, more than 93% involved only peaceful protests.
16 And according to ACLED, violence occurred at around 220 locations.

17 133. President Trump and Defendants have repeatedly made public comments revealing
18 that the officially stated goal of operations such as those in Portland is not protecting federal 19 property. Instead, their statements suggest that the animating and invidious purpose for these 20 actions—that is, for the Policy—is to punish progressive cities and leaders and violently quell the 21 exercise of constitutionally protected activity. Specifically, the President’s, Defendants’, and 22 Policy’s purpose is to further the view that diverse and/or progressive cities and their leaders, and 23 movements for racial justice and police reform, are dangerous and extreme circumstances that 24 should be suppressed.

25 134. President Trump has also repeatedly commented that the purpose of deployment
26 under the Policy of federal agents to Portland was to “quell” the protests, and that the goal was to 27 “clean out this beehive of terrorists.” He has stated that protesters are “anarchists” who “hate our 28 country.” And in describing the deployment to Portland under the Policy, President Trump stated:

1 “We’ve done a great job in Portland . . . Portland was totally out of control, and they went in, and
2 I guess we have many people right now in jail. We very much quelled it, and if it starts again, we’ll
3 quell it again very easily. It’s not hard to do, if you know what you’re doing.”

4 135. In addition, Defendant Wolf affirmed that actions taken under the Policy were 5 without other governments’ consent, asserting: “The city of Portland has been under siege for 47
6 straight days by a violent mob while local political leaders refuse to restore order to protect their 7 city . . . I reiterate the Department’s offer to assist local and state leaders to bring an end to the 8 violence perpetuated by anarchists.”

9 136. Local and state leaders have not accepted that offer.

10 137. Local and state officials have repeatedly and vehemently stated their opposition to 11 the federal deployment in Portland. Oregon Attorney General Ellen Rosenblum filed a lawsuit
12 against the federal government to stop its deployment and tactics. Oregon Governor Brown stated:
13 “This political theater from President Trump has nothing to do with public safety. The President
14 is failing to lead this nation. Now he is deploying federal officers to patrol the streets of Portland 15 in a blatant abuse of power by the federal government.”

16 138. From the outset, the City of Portland has expressed its opposition to the deployment
17 of federal agents under Operation Diligent Valor without its consent.

18 139. Only a few days after the federal agents were deployed, on July 8, 2020, Portland’s 19 Deputy Police Chief Chris Davis made a public statement that the presence of federal agents, who 20 are “governed by their own policies and procedures,” only “complicates things” for PPB.

21 140. On July 19, 2020, Mayor Wheeler stated the following:

22 What’s happening here is, we have dozens, if not hundreds of federal troops
23 descending upon our city. And what they’re doing is, they are sharply escalating the 24 situation . . . our local and state law enforcement officials had contained the situation
25 . . . The tactics that the Trump administration are using on the streets of Portland are 26 abhorrent . . . this is completely unconstitutional.

27 141. In response to the tactics and munitions used by federal agents, and consequent 28 public outcry, on July 22, 2020, Portland’s City Council adopted Resolution 37496, which prohibits PPB cooperation with any federal agents deployed to Portland under an executive order.

1 In response to Defendants' actions under the Policy, on July 28, 2020, Oakland's City Council
2 adopted Resolution No. 88276 ("Directing And Authorizing The City Attorney And The City
3 Administrator To Take Any And All Lawful Necessary Steps To Protect The Rights Of The People
4 And The City Of Oakland Against President Trump's Threats To Take Actions That Result In
5 Harm To The People Of Oakland Or The City Of Oakland, And Against Any Related Actions
6 Federal Officers Take That Result In Harm To The People Of Oakland Or The City Of Oakland").

7 142. The actions taken by Defendants in Portland under the Policy were and are not
8 taken pursuant to any known lawful federal authority.

9 Plaintiffs Remain at Risk Under the Policy

10 143. Rather than retreat from the activities in Portland, Defendants have expressed an 11 intent to expand the presence of federal law enforcement throughout the United States.

12 144. President Trump has indicated that, under the Policy, Defendants will continue to 13 target cities he views as progressive, stating in early September: "They'll make every city look 14 like frankly, a Portland, or you look at other Democrat-run cities. Look at what's happened in New 15 York, as high as 300% increase in crime. Chicago, Baltimore, take a look at Oakland. All 16 Democrat-run top 10 cities in the country and long beyond that, all Democrat-run."

17 145. As recently as September 21, 2020, President Trump continued to propagate
18 disinformation about Plaintiffs. He stated: "What they're talking about, you look at Portland, you 19 look at Chicago, you look at New York, you look at Baltimore and Oakland and all—these are 20 Democrat-run cities that are horrible on crime, there's no law and order, no cash bail, no anything."

21 146. Though most federal agents were temporarily pulled out of Portland, President
22 Trump has threatened that they can return at any time. The President also has stated the federal 23 government will further escalate any conflict if local law enforcement does not rein in "anarchists 24 and agitators." He has consistently stated that he will not hesitate to send in federal authorities if 25 the local government could not stop "crime and violence" from breaking out.

26 147. The President's threats and warnings are not limited to federal property. He recently 27 announced a plan to send law enforcement to polling places on election day, stating: "We're going 28

1 to have sheriffs, and we're going to have law enforcement. And we're going to have hopefully
2 U.S. attorneys, and we're going to have everybody and attorney generals."

3 148. The President's provocations continue. He recently issued a memorandum
4 purporting to direct Defendants to review federal funding provided to "anarchist" cities, including 5 Portland, and to withdraw such funding to punish these cities.

6 149. Defendants continue to take new or continuing unlawful actions under the Policy.
7 For instance, DHS has erected and refused to remove a fence and barriers around the Hatfield
8 Federal Courthouse in Portland, which are in the City-controlled public right-of-way. The fence
9 and barriers, which extend into adjacent Main Street, effectively block an entire bike lane without 10 Portland's permission. The fence and barriers also extend onto Third Avenue and effectively block 11 vehicular travel in one lane.

12 150. The only statutory authority DHS has offered to Portland to justify the fence is 40
13 U.S.C. § 1315.

14 151. The fence was first erected by FPS on July 18, 2020. According to a statement 15 from U.S. Attorney Billy J. Williams, the federal government's stated purpose of the fence was 16 "to de-escalate tensions between protesters and federal law enforcement officers, and to allow 17 much-needed building repairs to begin."

18 152. The fence is not on federal property, and FPS did not seek permission before 19 erecting the fence. In order to lawfully erect the fence, Portland City Code Chapter 17.24 requires
20 a permit to be obtained from the Portland Bureau of Transportation ("PBOT"). FPS obtained no 21 such permit.

22 153. Portland has asked FPS multiple times to move its fence out of the right-of-way 23 and onto the sidewalk adjacent to the Courthouse. FPS has not yet done so and has taken the 24 position that they are permitted to install the fence and associated barriers pursuant to 40 U.S.C.
25 § 1315.

26 154. In an October 7, 2020, email to Portland officials, FPS indicated its contractor had 27 moved the fence to allow access to the storm drain and expected to move the fence back from the 28

1 bike lane “in the next few weeks.” This is merely the latest assurance by FPS that it will move its 2 fence.

3 155. A July 14, 2020, document obtained by Oregon Public Broadcasting indicated that 4 the federal government intended to rent the fence from its contractor for three to six months.

5 156. Defendants continue to have a presence and activities in Portland, and there is a
6 continued dispute regarding the scope of their authority under 40 U.S.C. § 1315, including the 7 ability to unilaterally take over City-controlled or -owned property under a pretext of securing 8 federal property.

9 Defendant Wolf Was and Is Unlawfully Acting as Secretary of Homeland Security, and Any 10 Aspects of the Policy Promulgated or Implemented Under His Purported Authority Must Be Set
11 Aside

12 157. Federal service in Senate-confirmed positions is governed by, among other statutes, 13 the Federal Vacancies Reform Act (“FVRA”), 5 U.S.C. § 3345 et seq. If a person is acting 14 unlawfully under the FVRA, their actions and their policies are “without force and effect.” 5 U.S.C.
15 § 3348(d)(1). An action promulgated “without force and effect” “may not be ratified.” Id.
16 § 3348(d)(2).

17 158. Congress has delegated the U.S. Government Accountability Office (“GAO”) to 18 play a core role in FVRA compliance: namely, per the FVRA, the GAO must collect information 19 about vacancies, and if the GAO “makes a determination that an officer is serving longer than the 20 210-day period including the applicable exceptions to such period under section 3346 or section 21 3349a, the Comptroller General shall report such determination immediately” to various 22 authorities, including Congress. 5 U.S.C. § 3349.

23 159. On August 14, 2020, the GAO issued a report under its FVRA duties and authority, 24 entitled “Department of Homeland Security—Legality of Service of Acting Secretary of 25 Homeland Security and Service of Senior Official Performing the Duties of Deputy Secretary of 26 Homeland Security.” In sum, the report finds that Acting Secretaries “Wolf and [Ken] Cuccinelli 27 were named to their respective positions of Acting Secretary and Senior Official Performing the 28 Duties of Deputy Secretary by reference to an invalid order of succession” and that “[b]ecause Mr.

1 Wolf draws his authority to serve as Acting Secretary from [an invalid] Delegation, Mr. Wolf
2 cannot, therefore, rely upon it to serve as the Acting Secretary.”

3 160. The GAO report also analyzed whether Defendant Wolf could be lawfully serving 4 under the succession provisions of the Homeland Security Act (“HSA”), 6 U.S.C. § 113(g)(2), and 5 found that he could not.

6 161. In addition to these findings from the GAO, numerous lawsuits have raised the 7 same or similar questions about Defendant Wolf’s authority, and have asked courts—under the 8 FVRA, the HSA, or other laws regarding agency authority—to set aside various policies
9 promulgated under that purported authority. See, e.g., Immigrant Legal Resource Ctr. v. Wolf, 10 2020 WL 5798269, at *9 (N.D. Cal. 2020) (holding that “[p]laintiffs have shown that they are 11 likely to succeed on the merits of their claim that Mr. Wolf was not validly serving in office” and 12 enjoining enforcement of the challenged rule); Casa de Maryland, Inc. v. Wolf, 2020 WL 5500165, 13 at *23 (D. Md. 2020) (holding that “because Wolf filled the role of Acting Secretary without 14 authority, he promulgated the challenged rules also ‘in excess of . . . authority’” and enjoining the 15 rules’ enforcement); see also Bullock v. U.S. Bureau of Land Mgmt., 2020 WL 5746836 (D. Mont.
16 2020) (holding that William Perry Pendley, the person exercising authority of the Director of the 17 Bureau of Land Management, served unlawfully for 424 days and enjoining him from exercising
18 that authority); L.M.-M., v. Cuccinelli, 442 F.Supp.3d 1, 29, 34 (D.D.C. 2020) (holding that Acting 19 U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (“USCIS”) Director Cuccinelli “was designated to 20 serve as the acting Director of USCIS in violation of the FVRA” and “because Cuccinelli was 21 exercising the authority of the USCIS Director in violation of the FVRA, the directives were not 22 issued ‘in accordance with law,’ and must, accordingly, be set aside under the APA”).

23 162. The lawsuits, like the GAO report, generally explain that because the FVRA
24 generally bars acting officials from serving for more than 210 days in a position that requires 25 Presidential appointment and Senate confirmation, 5 U.S.C. § 3346, and because the last Senate-
26 confirmed DHS Secretary resigned on April 10, 2019, no one could have lawfully acted in that 27 role under the FVRA, without appointment and confirmation, after November 6, 2019. Defendant
28 Wolf assumed his office on November 13, 2019.

1           163. The lawsuits, also like the GAO report, generally further explain that the HSA sets
2 an order of succession in the event of a vacancy, 6 U.S.C. §§ 113(a)(1)(A), (a)(1)(F) and (g)(1), 3 and if certain enumerated positions are vacant, the Secretary may designate a “further order of 4 succession,” id. § 113(g)(2), but that because the Acting DHS Secretary prior to Defendant Wolf
5 unlawfully changed the order of DHS succession, Defendant Wolf cannot lawfully serve in his 6 role.

7           164. Finally, the lawsuits generally ask courts to set aside and/or enjoin actions by 8 officials acting unlawfully in federal agency roles, because those actions are “without force and 9 effect,” 5 U.S.C. § 3348(d)(1), “may not be ratified,” id. § 3348(d)(2), and were therefore 10 promulgated “in excess of statutory authority” and not “in accordance with law,” id. §§ 706(2)(C), 11 (2)(A).

12           165. These lawsuits have been largely successful.

13           166. On information and belief, Defendant Wolf promulgated and/or implemented all,
14 some, or part of the Policy challenged in this lawsuit, and any aspects of the Policy promulgated 15 and/or implemented under his authority must be set aside and/or enjoined.

16           Related Practice of Unlawfully Commandeering Portland’s Law Enforcement Officers

17           167. In addition and related to the Policy, Defendants continue to engage in a related 18 Practice that also asserts authority not delegated to them under the Constitution or under other 19 legal authority.

20           168. On or about September 21, 2020, the City of Portland, Oregon State Police, and 21 several federal law enforcement agencies, including the USMS, began logistics planning for an 22 anticipated rally of the Proud Boys in Portland on Saturday, September 26, 2020.

23           169. The Proud Boys are an extremist pro-White hate group. Members of the Proud
24 Boys, which appeared at the 2017 “Unite the Right” rally in Charlottesville, Virginia, “regularly
25 spout white nationalist memes and maintain affiliations with known extremists” and “are known 26 for anti-Muslim and misogynistic rhetoric.”

27           170. In anticipation of the Proud Boys rally, on September 25, 2020, Governor Brown
28 declared a state of emergency and issued an executive order for the purpose of implementing a

1 coordinated law enforcement response. As part of the order, Governor Brown temporarily assumed
2 control of local law enforcement, including PPB, the Multnomah County Sheriff's Office, the 3 Gresham Police Department, and the Port of Portland Police.

4 171. Governor Brown appointed Multnomah County Sheriff Michael Reese and Oregon
5 State Police Superintendent Travis Hampton to serve as incident commanders in the law
6 enforcement coordination area, and they therefore assumed control of PPB, Multnomah County
7 Sheriff's Office, Gresham Police Department, and Port of Portland Police.

8 172. The Governor's executive order, by its own terms, became effective at 12:01 A.M.
9 Pacific Time on Saturday, September 26, 2020, and expired at 12:01 AM Pacific Time on Monday,
10 September 28, 2020. Governor Brown's executive order and state of emergency were then 11 terminated at 6:00 AM on September 27, 2020.

12 173. Pursuant to a direction given by Superintendent Hampton, on September 25, 2020,
13 PPB Chief Charles Lovell authorized fifty-six officers, sergeants, and lieutenants from PPB's 14 Rapid Response Team, which typically handles protests, to be deputized as federal agents for the 15 purposes of tactical response to the anticipated rally and disturbance of the peace caused by the 16 Proud Boys.

17 174. Because of the Governor's executive order and over the course of dealing with 18 Oregon State Police, PPB anticipated that the deputation would be limited to the weekend 19 surrounding the Proud Boys hate-related event or so long as the state of emergency remained in 20 effect.

21 175. After the expiration of the state executive order, the federal deputation was in fact 22 no longer needed.

23 176. On September 29, 2020, Portland City Attorney Tracy Reeve wrote to the U.S.
24 Attorney's Office in Portland to clearly and expressly communicate the City's withdrawal of 25 consent to the federal deputation of the fifty-six PPB officers.

26 177. City Attorney Reeve explained that the Governor's executive order had terminated, 27 and PPB "was back under the control and direction of the City of Portland, and specifically Police 28 Commissioner and Mayor Ted Wheeler and the Portland City Council." Because the executive

1 order terminated, “[t]he City of Portland [did] not consent to the continuing federal deputization
2 of PPB officers and hereby formally withdr[e]w[] its consent to this deputization effective
3 immediately.”

4 178. Neither the U.S. Attorney’s Office nor any other federal agency, including the 5 USMS, responded to City Attorney Reeve’s communication.

6 179. Instead, on September 30, 2020, U.S. Attorney Williams and United States Marshal
7 for the District of Oregon Russ Burger issued a press release regarding the deputation of the PPB 8 officers.

9 180. The release stated that the “U.S. Marshal will not cancel the cross-deputation of 10 local and state law enforcement officers.” In defense of their decision to commandeer Portland’s
11 police force, U.S. Attorney Williams and United States Marshal for the District of Oregon Burger
12 stated that continued deputation would provide “accountability and deterrence” for “criminal acts” 13 and would support “front line law enforcement officers and their families in a way that they have 14 not seen from City Hall.”

15 181. Despite Defendant agencies’ purported desire to hold individuals accountable for 16 and deter criminal acts, it is the responsibility of PPB and other local law enforcement to generally 17 address criminal activity in Portland. It is the responsibility of the State of Oregon and City of 18 Portland to enact laws and enforce laws that strike the proper balance between deterring criminal 19 activity and supporting First Amendment expression. And it is the responsibility of Portland, as 20 the employer of PPB officers, to support and protect local law enforcement.

21 182. On October 2, 2020, Mayor Wheeler, as Police Commissioner, directed PPB 22 officers to take no further action of any kind pursuant to the federal deputation, including the 23 enforcement of any federal law.

24 183. Nonetheless, because the federal government has refused to recognize Portland’s 25 withdrawal of consent to deputation, Portland remains concerned about public confusion over the 26 chain of command for the deputized PPB officers and the appearance that the officers could be 27 ordered to respond to a federal chain of command, including by being ordered to enforce federal 28 law.

1 184. The practice of continued deputation of Portland's officers limits the City's law
2 enforcement discretion, creates potential conflict between Defendants and Portland over the use
3 and tactics of Portland's own officers and other law enforcement personnel, and unlawfully usurps
4 the legislative and governance prerogative of local officials.

5 185. The Practice of continued, non-consensual deputation of Portland's law
6 enforcement officers unconstitutionally infringes on Portland's authority to end the deputation and 7 unconstitutionally compels local officers to continue to serve as federal law enforcement officials,
8 whether in name or in scope of authority.

9 Harm to Plaintiffs

10 Economic Injury

11 186. Plaintiffs have already suffered economic harms and will continue to suffer such 12 harms under the Policy and Practice.

13 Portland's Economic Harms

14 187. At the time of the federal government's deployment into Portland, protests in the 15 City were growing more peaceful and were more easily managed on a day-to-day basis by PPB.

16 188. As a direct result of the unlawful intervention by Defendants, Portland experienced 17 a significant increase in violent protests and civil disturbance. Dr. Robert Pape and his team of 18 researchers at the University of Chicago examined 122 protest events in Portland between May 19 28, 2020, and August 6, 2020, and found that violence behavior increased and peaceful protests
20 decreased during the 25 days when federal agents were present.

21 189. Following the removal of federal agents from the streets of Portland, PPB was 22 required to expend additional resources on crowd management and maintaining peace.

23 190. As a direct result of the unlawful intervention of Defendants, PPB was required to 24 spend additional money on overtime for patrol officers and other resources in response to the 25 heightened tensions within Portland.

26 191. Since July 2020 and continuing to the present, Portland's elected leadership and 27 other city officials have spent hundreds of hours in meetings, discussions, and other planning
28

1 efforts to respond to the presence of federal agents and to plan for possible additional federal 2 intervention under the Policy.

3 Oakland's Economic Harms

4 192. Although Plaintiff City of Oakland has not yet been subject to direct federal 5 intervention under the Policy, it has nonetheless already suffered and will continue to suffer
6 economic harms.

7 193. In response to the Policy, Oakland has also engaged in new outreach through the 8 departments that are members of its Emergency Operations Center, activities that would not have 9 been necessary and resources that would not have been required but for the Policy.

10 194. Oakland's elected leadership has devoted time since July 2020 preparing for 11 possible federal intervention under the Policy.

12 195. Oakland's economic harms will significantly increase if the City becomes a target
13 of deployment under the Policy, for many reasons. One such reason is the City's "mutual aid"
14 agreements, as described above. The City's mutual aid agreements with other governments have 15 never contemplated coming to the assistance of a sister government in the event of unprecedented
16 federal intervention, such as the interventions that have occurred and may occur under the Policy.

17 196. Oakland has had mutual aid requests rejected when the aid sought does not comport
18 with the agreements or conflicts with their partners' policies.

19 197. Oakland will suffer significant economic harm if it cannot rely on mutual aid. In 20 the limited instances in which mutual aid has been unavailable, for instance, the Oakland Police
21 Department has been forced to cancel days off, pay substantial additional overtime, and divert 22 officers from their assigned duties.

23 198. Defendants did not take either Portland or Oakland's economic harms into account
24 in enacting the Policy.

1                    Budgetary and Other Uncertainty; Impairment of Ability to Provide Services

2                    199. Plaintiffs depend on the clear delineation of and communication about federal,
3 state, and local police authority to safely govern and police their communities.

4                    200. Plaintiffs must know or reasonably expect when federal law enforcement agents
5 will be or could be deployed in their cities, both as a constitutional and safety matter.

6                    201. Plaintiffs have historically worked closely with Defendants' local representatives
7 to ensure the safety of the federal property Defendants have authority to protect.

8                    202. Even when the federal government has, in the past, intervened involuntarily in 9 cities, counties, or states, it has done so using lawful processes, such as by filing enforcement 10 actions in court or, in extreme and rare circumstances, formally invoking powers such as the 11 Insurrection Act and following such statutes' requirements for a declaration. The Act is not 12 invoked secretly or ambiguously. 10 U.S.C. § 254.

13                    203. The current Policy represents an entirely new process by which cities may find 14 federal law enforcement in the midst of civil protests, throughout their jurisdictions, and surveilling 15 their residents well beyond federal crimes or properties.

16                    204. Plaintiffs' uncertainty about whether, when, and with what parameters federal 17 agents may be deployed to their cities under the Policy prevents them from appropriately advising 18 their police departments and fire departments, among others, and from fully planning their budgets.

19                    205. Further, Plaintiffs' police departments, among other departments, have a strong and 20 abiding interest in the community relationships they have formed, often over many years, with 21 advocates, faith leaders, youth groups, and others in their jurisdictions. These relationships are 22 crucial to addressing racial justice issues, de-escalating and interrupting violence, and engaging in 23 successful long-term reform efforts. These relationships are also premised on Plaintiffs' police 24 departments being able to fulfill the terms of their agreements, both formal and informal, with their 25 community partners. Uncertainty regarding whether, when, and why federal law enforcement 26 authorities, who lack any knowledge of these crucial agreements and understandings, may 27 intervene in Plaintiffs' streets, harms Plaintiffs' capacity to honor their commitments to their 28 residents and reduce violence in their communities.

1           206. Finally, because the full scope of the Policy is vague and unknown, Plaintiffs' city
2 officials have no certainty about whether any particular decision they might make will lead to 3 federal intervention under the Policy.

4           207. Together, these injuries perceptibly impair Plaintiffs' ability to provide the services
5 they were formed to provide, and frustrate Plaintiffs' goals and values.

6           208. Under the Policy, federal enforcement actions are likely to violate or contravene
7 Plaintiffs' otherwise lawful policies and values.

8           Activity Considered Impermissible by Local Policy Permitted Under the Policy

9           209. Plaintiffs have specific policies, practices, and procedures for activities such as the 10 use of force or use of surveillance by law enforcement authorities.

11           210. The City of Portland has a use of force policy, Directive 1010.00, and a crowd 12 control policy, Directive 0635.10. These policies govern a number of PPB policies, practices, and 13 procedures in responding to demonstrations, including PPB's use of impact munitions and 14 chemical agents. The use of chemical agents has been further restricted by order of Portland's 15 Police Commissioner, consistent with the City's values on policing.

16           211. The City of Oakland has a use of force policy, DGO K-3, and a crowd control
17 policy, Training Bulletin III-G. Those documents govern a number of Oakland Police Department 18 policies, practices, and procedures, including its use of nonlethal impact weapons and chemical 19 agents, as well as video and photographic recording of protesters engaged in protected First 20 Amendment activity.

21           212. These policies and trainings are intended to govern Plaintiffs' police departments'
22 interactions with their communities. Based on those policies and trainings, in Plaintiffs'
23 communities, residents have expectations for their interactions with local law enforcement.
24 Federal law enforcement officers have not been trained in municipal community policing, critical 25 civilian crowd management, and/or de-escalation techniques. The unconstrained actions of federal 26 forces undermine the work of local law enforcement, including ongoing violence prevention 27 programs and community engagement.

28

1           213. Under the Policy, Plaintiff City of Portland has been unable to adhere to its local
2 policies favoring de-escalation of potentially volatile situations because Defendants' actions under
3 the Policy have inflamed local passions, encouraged violence, and generated the need for PPB
4 response where it otherwise would not have been needed.

5           214. Under the Practice, PPB officers have a reasonable likelihood of being 6 commandeered into engaging in activity that violates their local policies via their unconsented-to 7 deputation by Defendants. Defendants' unlawful deputation of PPB officers also presently harms
8 the City's public-accountability and community-engagement policies by propagating the false
9 narrative that City police are operating under Defendants' authority and not under the direction
10 and control of the City of Portland's elected officials.

11           Frustration of Federal Court Orders; Separation of Powers

12           215. Plaintiffs are each, separately, under federal court orders that govern the activities 13 of their police departments in various ways.

14           216. Plaintiff City of Portland's police department operates in part under a Negotiated 15 Settlement Agreement in United States v. City of Portland, Case No. 3:12-cv-02265-SI (D. Or.
16 2012), as well as recent injunctions in Don't Shoot Portland v. City of Portland, Case No. 3:20-17 cv-00917-HZ (D. Or. 2020) and Index Newspapers LLC v. City of Portland, Case No. 3:20-cv-
18 01035-SI (D. Or. 2020).

19           217. Plaintiff City of Oakland's police department operates under a longstanding 20 Negotiated Settlement Agreement in Delphine Allen. v. City of Oakland, Master Case File No.
21 C00-4599-TEH (N.D. Cal. 2012), as well as under a recent injunction in Anti Police-Terror Project
22 v. City of Oakland, Case No. 20-cv-03866-JCS (N.D. Cal. 2020).

23           218. Collectively, these various court orders bind Plaintiffs' police departments'
24 activities, including governing many of their policies, practices, and procedures, and limiting their 25 use of various forms of force.

26           219. Under the Policy, as carried out in, at a minimum, Portland, Defendants used arrest
27 techniques, force, and surveillance that would facially violate Plaintiffs' federal court orders.
28

1           228. Defendants may only exercise authority conferred by statute. City of Arlington v.
2 FCC, 569 U.S. 290, 297-98 (2013).

3           229. Defendants' Policy is "final agency action" under the APA because it is fairly
4 characterized as Defendants' final word on the matter and has legal consequences for Plaintiffs'
5 resident protestors during civil protests, as well as, independently, for Plaintiffs facing economic 6 harms and federal encroachment on police powers and the "take over" of their jurisdictions. See
7 U.S. Army Corps of Engineers v. Hawkes Co., Inc., 136 S. Ct. 1807, 1813 (2016) (quoting Bennett
8 v. Spear, 520 U.S. 154, 177-78 (1997)); see also New York v. U.S. Immigration & Customs 9 Enforcement, 431 F. Supp. 3d 377, 386-88 (S.D.N.Y. 2019).

10           230. Agency action need not be in writing, or ever known to the public, to be judicially
11 reviewable as "final" action. See Aracely, R. v. Nielsen, 319 F. Supp. 3d 110, 138-39 (D.D.C.
12 2018); Wagafe v. Trump, 2017 WL 2671254, at *1, *10 (W.D. Wash. 2017); Venetian Casino
13 Resort, LLC v. EEOC, 530 F.3d 925, 931 (D.C. Cir. 2008) (concluding that "the record" as a whole 14 "leaves no doubt" that a policy exists, even though "the details ... are still unclear").

15           231. Furthermore, each instance where Defendants, through their officers, employees,
16 and agents, directly or constructively, unlawfully deployed or commanded federal law
17 enforcement to act in excess of or contrary to law constitutes "final agency action" under the APA.

18           232. 40 U.S.C. § 1315(b)(1) allows the Secretary of DHS to designate certain federal 19 employees "as officers and agents for duty in connection with the protection of property owned or 20 occupied by the Federal Government and persons on the property, including duty in areas outside 21 the property to the extent necessary to protect the property and persons on the property." These 22 authorized duties include enforcing federal laws, making arrests if federal crimes are committed 23 in the presence of an officer, and conducting investigations on and off the property for crimes
24 against the property or persons on the property.

25           233. 40 U.S.C. § 1315(d)(3) further allows the Secretary to "utilize the facilities and 26 services of Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies, with the consent of the agencies."

27           234. 40 U.S.C. § 1315(e) also allows the Secretary to "enter into agreements with 28 Federal agencies and with State and local governments to obtain authority for officers and agents

1 designated under this section to enforce Federal laws and State and local laws concurrently with 2 other Federal law enforcement officers and with State and local law enforcement officers” “[]for 3 the protection of property owned or occupied by the Federal Government and persons on the 4 property.”

5 235. These statutory provisions do not authorize the designation of employees for 6 general law enforcement purposes in domestic United States cities where the intent, mission, and 7 purpose of the designation is not reasonably connected to such federally stated interests.
8 Significantly, 40 U.S.C. § 1315 does not represent Congressional authorization to suppress 9 insurrections under the Militia Clause. See U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 15.

10 236. Further, these statutory provisions do not authorize the expansion of federal 11 property into City- or State-owned rights-of-way, or the takeover of City property for federal 12 purposes, without the consent of the non-federal agencies, as Defendants assert.

13 237. The Policy therefore oversteps the constitutional limitations on the federal police
14 powers, including as enumerated in the Militia Clause, the Republican Form of Government
15 Clause, and the Tenth Amendment, and is not in accordance with and exceeds Defendants’
16 authority under 40 U.S.C. § 1315 because it (a) authorizes the designation of such agents to quell
17 civil protests and surveil and engage with threats to damage or destroy any public monument, 18 memorial, or statue, and (b) authorizes the expansion of federal physical boundaries and the take-19 over of City rights-of-way for the purposes of securing federal property, without the express 20 consent of the City.

21 238. Defendants’ unlawful actions have caused, are causing, and will continue to cause
22 harm to Plaintiffs as alleged above, and there is a substantial likelihood that the requested relief 23 will redress this harm.

(Administrative Procedure Act—Arbitrary and Capricious)

(Against All Defendants)

(5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A))

239. Plaintiffs incorporate by reference the allegations set forth in each of the preceding paragraphs of this Complaint.

240. 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A) provides that a court shall hold unlawful and set aside agency action found to be arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law.

241. Long-established principles of federalism, paired with congressional limitations, restrict the ability of the federal government to unilaterally deploy domestic military or police interventions.

242. Defendants have adopted a Policy to circumvent these limitations and deploy federal agents to quash civil protests, while publicly justifying the actions in the name of federal property protection. The motivation animating Defendants' Policy is the "takeover" of City police forces and powers, and is untethered to strictly federal interests or activities.

243. Defendants' purported justification for the Policy is wholly pretextual and, thus, arbitrary and capricious under the Administrative Procedure Act.

244. In enacting the Policy, Defendants have also acted arbitrarily and capriciously because Defendants did not fully consider the foreseeable harms of their policy and did not adequately explain the decision-making rationale behind the policy change, beyond a pretextual rationale.

245. In implementing the Policy, Defendants failed to consider, among many things, the direct and destructive impacts on local governments in their administration of general public safety, and the aforementioned harms that have and will flow to Plaintiffs.

246. Defendants' unlawful action has caused, is causing, and will continue to cause harm to Plaintiffs as alleged above, and there is a substantial likelihood that the requested relief will redress this harm.

THIRD CLAIM FOR RELIEF

(Federal Vacancies Reform Act; Homeland Security Act)

(Against Defendant Wolf)

(5 U.S.C. § 3345 et seq.; 6 U.S.C. § 113)

247. Plaintiffs incorporate by reference the allegations set forth in each of the preceding paragraphs of this Complaint.

248. The Secretary of Homeland Security may be appointed by the President only with the advice and consent of the Senate, 6 U.S.C. § 112(a)(1), and when the Office of the Secretary is vacant, the order of succession is governed by the FVRA and/or the HSA.

249. Under those authorities, Defendant Wolf is not legally authorized to hold the position of Acting Secretary.

250. Under those authorities, Defendant Wolf is not legally authorized to perform the duties and functions of the Secretary of Homeland Security.

251. Because Defendant Wolf is without legal authority to hold his position or to perform its duties or functions, any contributions he made to the Policy or steps he took or is taking to enact or enforce the Policy “shall have no force or effect,” 5 U.S.C. § 3348(d)(1), “may not be ratified,” id. § 3348(d)(2), and must be set aside.

FOURTH CLAIM FOR RELIEF

(Administrative Procedure Act—In Excess of Authority)

(Against Defendant Wolf)

(5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(C))

252. Plaintiffs incorporate by reference the allegations set forth in each of the preceding paragraphs of this Complaint.

253. Because Defendant Wolf is not legally authorized to hold the position of Acting Secretary, any action he took to contribute to, direct, revise, promulgate, enact, or enforce the Policy is “in excess of authority” under the APA and therefore must be held to be unlawful and set aside.

(Administrative Procedure Act—Not in Accordance with Law)

(Against Defendant Wolf)

(5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(C))

254. Plaintiffs incorporate by reference the allegations set forth in each of the preceding paragraphs of this Complaint.

255. Because Defendant Wolf is not legally authorized to hold the position of Acting Secretary, any action he took to contribute to, direct, revise, promulgate, enact, or enforce the Policy is “not in accordance with law” under the APA and therefore must be held to be unlawful and set aside.

SIXTH CLAIM FOR RELIEF

(Anti-Commandeering)

(Plaintiff City of Portland Against Defendants Barr and DOJ)

(U.S. Const., amend. X)

256. Plaintiffs incorporate by reference the allegations set forth in each of the preceding paragraphs of this Complaint.

257. The Tenth Amendment to the United States Constitution preserves the states’ historic, sovereign, and fundamental autonomy to regulate their own affairs, including and especially the operations of their state and local governments.

258. General police powers are among those reserved to the States. “A state’s ability to regulate its internal law enforcement activities is a quintessential police power.” United States v. California, 921 F.3d 865, 887 n.11 (9th Cir. 2019), cert. denied, 2020 WL 3146844 (June 15, 2020).

259. States are permitted to delegate their police powers to their municipalities. “[T]he delegated power of municipalities is as broad as the police power of the state, except as that power may be restricted by terms of the grant or by the state constitution.” D.C. v. John R. Thompson Co., 346 U.S. 100, 109 (1953).

1 the Tenth Amendment, and is not in accordance with and exceeds Defendants’ authority under 40
2 U.S.C. § 1315 because it: (a) authorizes the designation of such agents to quell civil protests and
3 surveil and engage with threats to damage or destroy any public monument, memorial, or statue;
4 and (b) authorizes the expansion of federal physical boundaries and the take-over of City rights-
5 of-way for the purposes of securing federal property, without the express consent of the City.

6 266. Defendants’ purported justification for the Policy is wholly pretextual and, thus,
7 arbitrary and capricious under the Administrative Procedure Act.

8 267. In enacting the Policy, Defendants have also acted arbitrarily and capriciously
9 because Defendants did not fully consider the foreseeable harms of their policy and did not 10 adequately explain the decision-making rationale behind the policy change, beyond a pretextual 11 rationale.

12 268. Because Defendant Wolf is without legal authority to hold his position or to 13 perform its duties or functions, any contributions he made to the Policy or steps he took or is taking 14 to enact or enforce the Policy “shall have no force or effect,” 5 U.S.C. § 3348(d)(1), “may not be 15 ratified,” id. § 3348(d)(2), and must be set aside.

16 269. Because Defendant Wolf is not legally authorized to hold the position of Acting 17 Secretary, any action he took to contribute to, direct, revise, promulgate, enact, or enforce the 18 Policy is “in excess of authority” under the APA and therefore must be held to be unlawful and set 19 aside.

20 270. Because Defendant Wolf is not legally authorized to hold the position of Acting 21 Secretary, any action he took to contribute to, direct, revise, promulgate, enact, or enforce the 22 Policy is “not in accordance with law” under the APA and therefore must be held to be unlawful 23 and set aside.

24 271. An actual, present, and justiciable controversy exists between Plaintiffs and 25 Defendants concerning the legality of the Policy and regarding whether Defendant Wolf has legal 26 authority to hold his position or perform its duties or functions.

27 272. Plaintiffs seeks a declaratory judgment from this Court that the Policy is not in 28 accordance with law, in excess of statutory authority, contrary to constitutional right, or without

1 observance of procedure required by law pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 706(2); that the Policy is arbitrary,
2 capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law within the meaning of 3 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A); that Defendant Wolf is without legal authority to hold his position or to 4 perform its duties or functions; and that aspects of the Policy promulgated under the purported
5 authority of Defendant Wolf must be set aside and/or enjoined.

6 273. Defendants DOJ and Barr have unduly interfered with Portland's police functions
7 as delegated to it by the State of Oregon, in violation of the Tenth Amendment, by refusing to 8 cancel the deputation of the PPB officers at Portland's request.

9 274. An actual, present, and justiciable controversy exists between Portland and 10 Defendants DOJ and Barr concerning the constitutionality of Defendants' refusal to cancel the 11 deputation.

12 275. Portland seeks a declaratory judgment from this Court that Defendant DOJ's and 13 Defendant Barr's refusal to cancel the deputation of PPB officers is violative of the Tenth 14 Amendment and the anti-commandeering doctrine.

16 PRAYER FOR RELIEF

17 Wherefore, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Court:

- 18 1. Issue an order holding unlawful, vacating, and setting aside Defendants' Policy;
- 19 2. Declare that the Policy is not in accordance with law, in excess of statutory 20 authority, contrary to constitutional right, or without observance of procedure required by law
21 pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 706(2);
- 22 3. Declare that the Policy is arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or 23 otherwise not in accordance with law within the meaning of 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A);
- 24 4. Declare that aspects of the Policy promulgated under the purported authority of 25 Defendant Wolf must be set aside and/or enjoined;
- 26 5. Declare that Defendant DOJ's and Defendant Barr's commandeering of local law
27 enforcement is unlawful under the Tenth Amendment and order them to immediately
28 cancel the at-issue deputation of PPB officers;

Subject: Index Newspapers -- Portland Civil Unrest Litigation -- Stay of Preliminary Injunction Denied by Ninth Circuit

Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner – This afternoon, the Ninth Circuit issued the attached order regarding the Government’s request for a stay pending the appeal of the preliminary injunction in the Index Newspapers matter involving journalists and legal observers. In short, the Ninth Circuit found that “the Federal Defendants have not made a strong showing that they are likely to succeed on the merits of plaintiffs’ claims. Nor have they shown that they are likely to suffer irreparable injury as a result of the district court’s preliminary injunction. Further, a stay of the district court’s injunction would substantially injure both the City and the plaintiffs.” This order does not impact the appeal which will proceed with briefing next week. However, our request for a stay while the appeal proceeds was denied, and the administrative stay that was granted by the Ninth Circuit on August 27 has been lifted. This means the preliminary injunction that was ordered by the District Court on August 20 is restored into effect. (b)(5)

(b)(5)

(b)(5) As a reminder, and as reflected in the thread below, pursuant to the preliminary injunction, the Federal Defendants are enjoined from the following actions:

1. Arresting, threatening to arrest, or using physical force directed against any person whom they know or reasonably should know is a Journalist or Legal Observer, unless the Federal Defendants have probable cause to believe that such individual has committed a crime. Further, Journalists and Legal Observers are not required to disperse following the issuance of an order to disperse.
2. Seizing any photographic equipment or ordering such person to stop photographing, recording, or observing a protest, unless the Federal Defendants are also lawfully seizing that person.
3. If Federal Defendants seize property from a Journalist or Legal Observer, such Federal Defendant shall, as soon thereafter as is reasonably possible, make a written list of things seized and shall provide a copy of that list to the Journalist or Legal Observer.
4. The Judge outlined what might be considered indicia of being a Journalist to include: visual identification as a member of the press, such as by carrying a professional or authorized press pass, carrying professional gear such as professional photographic equipment, or wearing a professional or authorized press badge or other official press credentials, or distinctive clothing, that identifies the wearer as a member of the press. Of note, the Judge also indicated that standing off to the side of a protest, not engaging in protest activities, and not being intermixed with persons engaged in protest activities, would also equate to indicia of being a Journalist.
5. The Judge also outlined what might be considered indicia of being a Legal Observer to include: wearing a green National Lawyers Guild-issued or authorized Legal Observer hat (typically a green NLG hat) or wearing a blue ACLU-issued or authorized Legal Observer vest. Again, the Judge indicated that standing off to the side of a protest, not engaging in protest activities, and not being intermixed with persons engaged in protest activities would also equate to indicia of being a Legal Observer.
6. The Federal Defendants are not precluded from issuing otherwise lawful crowd-dispersal orders for a variety of lawful reasons and shall not be liable for violating this injunction if a Journalist or Legal Observer is incidentally exposed to crowd-control devices after remaining in the area where such devices were deployed after the issuance of an otherwise lawful dispersal order.

Subject: Index Newspapers -- Portland Civil Unrest Litigation -- Preliminary Injunction Ordered Today

Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner – This afternoon, Judge Simon issued the attached Preliminary Injunction against the U.S. Government, including the Department of Homeland Security. The terms of the Preliminary Injunction are very similar to those outlined in the Temporary Restraining Order issued on July 23 and extended on August 6. In short, the Federal Defendants are enjoined from the following:

1. Arresting, threatening to arrest, or using physical force directed against any person whom they know or reasonably should know is a Journalist or Legal Observer, unless the Federal Defendants have probable cause to believe that such individual has committed a crime. Further, Journalists and Legal Observers are not required to disperse following the issuance of an order to disperse.
2. Seizing any photographic equipment or ordering such person to stop photographing, recording, or observing a protest, unless the Federal Defendants are also lawfully seizing that person.
3. If Federal Defendants seize property from a Journalist or Legal Observer, such Federal Defendant shall, as soon thereafter as is reasonably possible, make a written list of things seized and shall provide a copy of that list to the Journalist or Legal Observer.
4. The Judge outlined what might be considered indicia of being a Journalist to include: visual identification as a member of the press, such as by carrying a professional or authorized press pass, carrying professional gear such as professional photographic equipment, or wearing a professional or authorized press badge or other official press credentials, or distinctive clothing, that identifies the wearer as a member of the press. Of note, the Judge also indicated that standing off to the side of a protest, not engaging in protest activities, and not being intermixed with persons engaged in protest activities, would also equate to indicia of being a Journalist. This was a modification to the TRO terms.
5. The Judge also outlined what might be considered indicia of being a Legal Observer to include: wearing a green National Lawyers Guild-issued or authorized Legal Observer hat (typically a green NLG hat) or wearing a blue ACLU-issued or authorized Legal Observer vest. Again, the Judge indicated that standing off to the side of a protest, not engaging in protest activities, and not being intermixed with persons engaged in protest activities would also equate to indicia of being a Legal Observer. This was a modification to the TRO terms.
6. The Federal Defendants are not precluded from issuing otherwise lawful crowd-dispersal orders for a variety of lawful reasons and shall not be liable for violating this injunction if a Journalist or Legal Observer is incidentally exposed to crowd-control devices after remaining in the area where such devices were deployed after the issuance of an otherwise lawful dispersal order.

A matter of contention and extensive testimony through declarations included whether Federal Defendants would be ordered to wear additional unique identifying markings. Judge Simon ordered the parties to confer regarding the placement of unique identifying markings on uniforms and/or helmets so that they can be identified at a reasonable distance and without unreasonably interfering with the operational needs of the officers/agents. (b)(5)

(b)(5)

Finally, we were ordered to provide the terms of the Preliminary Injunction to the officers/agents (and their supervisors) currently operating within Portland in support of FPS within 14 days. (b)(5)

Subject: RE: Index Newspapers -- Portland Civil Unrest Litigation -- TRO Extended

Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner – The attached Temporary Restraining Order that was issued on July 23, 2020, against the U.S. Government, including the Department of Homeland Security, was extended by Judge Simon today for an additional 14 days. This extended TRO will expire on August 20 at 5:00pm PT. Judge Simon denied our motion for reconsideration wherein we argued that the TRO was unworkable for various reasons, including that demonstrators were masquerading as press and perpetrating acts of violence.

The Preliminary Injunction Hearing is calendared for August 18. (b)(5)

Subject: Index Newspapers -- Portland Civil Unrest Litigation -- TRO Likely/Imminent

Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner -- The hearing for the Index Newspapers TRO was held earlier today in Portland and we wanted to provide you a brief summary and also notify you of the likelihood that a 14-day TRO will be granted with regard to the use of force and arrests against and of journalists and legal observers. Present at the hearing was attorney Matthew Borden for the plaintiffs and Main DOJ Civil (attorney Andrew Warden) representing the Government. The plaintiffs argued they have presented voluminous evidence (approximately 20 declarations) showing the federal defendants are harming identifiable journalists and legal observers in Portland, chilling free speech. The plaintiffs further argued they will suffer harm in the future because they are continuing to attend these protests and have suffered similar harm even after the TRO was filed.

DOJ argued, as it did at the Oregon AG TRO hearing yesterday, that a TRO would chill officers from making split-second decisions necessary to protect themselves and federal property. DOJ also argued that there is no evidence the federal defendants targeted or retaliated against any individual because the individual is a journalist or legal observer. DOJ further argued that extending the judge's TRO against the City of Portland to the federal defendants would be unworkable. Under that TRO, journalists and legal observers with certain identifiable characteristics are not required to disperse when the City issues a crowd control order. DOJ argued that officer safety would be at risk if the federal defendants' agents need to take extra time to determine whether an individual is a protestor, who must disperse, or a journalist, who may remain. Finally, DOJ argued the plaintiffs have other forms of relief available to them, such as Bivens claims, which are more appropriate than a TRO.

Judge Simon went through a series of questions and made comments that appeared damaging to the Government's arguments. Judge Simon asked whether DOJ had any evidence that journalists or legal observers caused any damage to federal property. DOJ indicated it had no such evidence. The Judge then pointed out that when someone is identified as a journalist and there is no probable cause to believe the individual committed any crime and the individual is then shot at with rubber bullets, the harm can reasonably be inferred to be because the individual is a journalist. Next, the Judge asked the Government why a TRO with language mirroring the TRO issued against the City would be unworkable when that TRO has worked well and led to a stipulated preliminary injunction between the plaintiffs and the City that includes much of the same language. To make his point further, he allowed the City to speak about how well the order was working. In a remarkable development, the City relayed its support of the plaintiffs' request for a TRO against the federal defendants. DOJ did not have a direct response to this point.

Seeing the writing on the wall, DOJ attempted to limit the scope of such an order, arguing there was no need for prohibiting the arrest of journalists or the taking of their equipment because there is no evidence the federal defendants have engaged in those activities. DOJ also asked for there to be a specific intent component to the TRO. Judge Simon noted these arguments but appeared to signal he would issue a TRO with similar language to the TRO issued against the City.

Judge Simon clearly indicated that he is inclined to issue a TRO and noted the importance of journalists providing the public with information about events involving the Government. DOJ argued that it would prefer a preliminary injunction, which it could immediately appeal. Judge Simon indicated that he would likely issue a TRO. The Judge also indicated that he is willing to work with the parties if the TRO proves unworkable. (b)(5)

Subject: Index Newspapers -- TRO Motion Filed in District of Oregon

Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner – We write to update you on the temporary restraining order request filed in Portland against DHS and the U.S. Marshals Service on Friday, July 17. As you may be aware, on June 28, several journalists and legal observers filed a class action complaint against the City of Portland alleging that police officers used force to dissuade and prevent them from covering protests after the death of George Floyd. The news organization, Index Newspapers LLC, was later added as a plaintiff. The plaintiffs obtained a TRO against Portland on July 2. The TRO indicated that Portland police officers may not arrest, threaten to arrest, or use force against journalists or legal observers unless they have probable cause to believe that the journalist or legal observer has committed a crime, and that journalists and legal observers may remain at the scene of a protest after officers give an order for protestors to disperse. Additionally, the TRO indicates that officers shall not seize photographic or audio recording equipment from journalists or legal observers.

Late Friday, July 17, the plaintiffs amended their complaint to add DHS and USMS as defendants and subsequently requested a TRO against the federal defendants. The TRO requests essentially the same injunctive relief that the Court granted in its TRO against the Portland Police. In their request for a TRO, the plaintiffs allege that journalist Mathieu Lewis-Roland was covering protests near the Portland federal courthouse in the early hours of July 12, wearing a t-shirt that clearly identified him as press. The plaintiffs further allege that when federal agents emerged from the courthouse to disperse protesters they ventured off federal property, “chased” Mr. Lewis-Roland, and shot him ten times in the side and back with plastic bullets, causing “wounds, lacerations, and contusions.” The plaintiffs separately allege that journalist Garrison Davis was covering the same protest wearing a press helmet and carrying a visible press pass. The plaintiffs allege federal agents fired a canister of tear gas into Mr. Davis’ back and “shot directly at him with pepper bullets and other munitions.”

To obtain a TRO, the plaintiffs must establish (1) a likelihood of success on the merits of their claim for injunctive relief; (2) a likelihood of irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief; (3) that the balance of equities tips in their favor; and (4) a preliminary injunction is in the public interest. The plaintiffs argue they will succeed on the merits because they were engaged in First Amendment-protected activities at a public location and that the federal defendants retaliated against them for participation in those activities. The plaintiffs appear to argue that the fact the federal defendants knew they were engaged in these activities and then proceeded to shoot at them anyway constitutes retaliation. The plaintiffs argue that there is a high likelihood of irreparable harm, as well as a public interest in granting the TRO, because the federal defendants’ actions prevent the plaintiffs from documenting the protests and the conduct of the federal defendants at those protests.

The DHS opposition to the TRO motion is due at 5:00pm PT tomorrow, and the plaintiff's reply is due on Wednesday. The Court will hold a hearing on the TRO motion on Thursday, July 23.

Subject: RE: Index Newspapers -- Portland Civil Unrest Litigation -- Preliminary Injunction Ordered Today

Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner – As we relayed last week, on August 20, the U.S. District Court in Oregon issued a Preliminary Injunction pertaining to DHS enforcement activities in Portland relating to journalists and legal observers. One of the terms of the Preliminary Injunction is a requirement to provide verbatim copies of the first seven provisions of the Preliminary Injunction (pages 58-61 of the attached) to (1) all employees, officers and agents currently assigned or deployed in Portland, Oregon as part of Operation Diligent Valor; (2) any employees, officers or agents who are subsequently deployed to Portland, Oregon as part of Operation Diligent Valor; and (3) all employees with any supervisory or command authority over any persons deployed to Portland, Oregon as part of Operation Diligent Valor.

CBP personnel either in or deployed to Portland or with supervisory or command authority over any personnel deployed to Portland as part of Operation Diligent Valor are required to read the seven operative sections of the Preliminary Injunction. Additionally, the attached PI Guidance offers explanation and context of each section of the PI. (b)(5)

Subject: Index Newspapers -- Portland Civil Unrest Litigation -- Preliminary Injunction Ordered Today

Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner – This afternoon, Judge Simon issued the attached Preliminary Injunction against the U.S. Government, including the Department of Homeland Security. The terms of the Preliminary Injunction are very similar to those outlined in the Temporary Restraining Order issued on July 23 and extended on August 6. In short, the Federal Defendants are enjoined from the following:

1. Arresting, threatening to arrest, or using physical force directed against any person whom they know or reasonably should know is a Journalist or Legal Observer, unless the Federal Defendants have probable cause to believe that such individual has committed a crime. Further, Journalists and Legal Observers are not required to disperse following the issuance of an order to disperse.
2. Seizing any photographic equipment or ordering such person to stop photographing, recording, or observing a protest, unless the Federal Defendants are also lawfully seizing that person.
3. If Federal Defendants seize property from a Journalist or Legal Observer, such Federal Defendant shall, as soon thereafter as is reasonably possible, make a written list of things seized and shall provide a copy of that list to the Journalist or Legal Observer.
4. The Judge outlined what might be considered indicia of being a Journalist to include: visual identification as a member of the press, such as by carrying a professional or authorized press pass, carrying professional gear such as professional photographic equipment, or wearing a professional or authorized press badge or other official press credentials, or distinctive clothing, that identifies the wearer as a member of the press. Of note, the Judge also indicated that standing off to the side of a protest, not engaging in protest activities, and not being intermixed with persons engaged in protest activities, would also equate to indicia of being a Journalist. This was a modification to the TRO terms.
5. The Judge also outlined what might be considered indicia of being a Legal Observer to include: wearing a green National Lawyers Guild-issued or authorized Legal Observer hat (typically a green NLG hat) or wearing a blue ACLU-issued or authorized Legal Observer vest. Again, the Judge indicated that standing off to the side of a protest, not engaging in protest activities, and not being intermixed with persons engaged in protest activities would also equate to indicia of being a Legal Observer. This was a modification to the TRO terms.
6. The Federal Defendants are not precluded from issuing otherwise lawful crowd-dispersal orders for a variety of lawful reasons and shall not be liable for violating this injunction if a Journalist or Legal Observer is incidentally exposed to crowd-control devices after remaining in the area where such devices were deployed after the issuance of an otherwise lawful dispersal order.

A matter of contention and extensive testimony through declarations included whether Federal Defendants would be ordered to wear additional unique identifying markings. Judge Simon ordered the parties to confer regarding the placement of unique identifying markings on uniforms and/or helmets so that they can be identified at a reasonable distance and without unreasonably interfering with the operational needs of the officers/agents. We expect additional litigation over this matter and will keep you updated.

Finally, we were ordered to provide the terms of the Preliminary Injunction to the officers/agents (and their supervisors) currently operating within Portland in support of FPS within 14 days. (b)(5)

Subject: RE: Index Newspapers -- Portland Civil Unrest Litigation -- TRO Extended

Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner -- The attached Temporary Restraining Order that was issued on July 23, 2020, against the U.S. Government, including the Department of Homeland Security, was extended by Judge Simon today for an additional 14 days. This extended TRO will expire on August 20 at 5:00pm PT. Judge Simon denied our motion for reconsideration wherein we argued that the TRO was unworkable for various reasons, including that demonstrators were masquerading as press and perpetrating acts of violence.

The Preliminary Injunction Hearing is calendared for August 18. (b)(5)

Subject: Index Newspapers -- TRO Motion Filed in District of Oregon

Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner – We write to update you on the temporary restraining order request filed in Portland against DHS and the U.S. Marshals Service on Friday, July 17. Additionally, the TRO indicates that officers shall not seize photographic or audio recording equipment from journalists or legal observers.

Late Friday, July 17, the plaintiffs amended their complaint to add DHS and USMS as defendants and subsequently requested a TRO against the federal defendants. The TRO requests essentially the same injunctive relief that the Court granted in its TRO against the Portland Police. In their request for a TRO, the plaintiffs allege that journalist Mathieu Lewis-Roland was covering protests near the Portland federal courthouse in the early hours of July 12, wearing a t-shirt that clearly identified him as press. To obtain a TRO, the plaintiffs must establish (1) a likelihood of success on the merits of their claim for injunctive relief; (2) a likelihood of irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief; (3) that the balance of equities tips in their favor; and (4) a preliminary injunction is in the public interest. The DHS opposition to the TRO motion is due at 5:00pm PT tomorrow, and the plaintiff’s reply is due on Wednesday. The Court will hold a hearing on the TRO motion on Thursday, July 23.

From DHS OPS:

BLUF: At this time for St. Louis, the FBI continues to plan on having adequate resources in the city and do not have plans on utilizing DHS contingency forces at this time. Therefore, DHS will only execute our contingency if something totally unexpected were to occur. At this point, there is a low probability that any DHS forces will be needed in St. Louis.

FBI and DOJ forces along with other State/local agencies have the situation well in hand. That said, DHS OPS is offering contingencies.

1. Air surveillance: CBP/AMO can offer up (b)(7)(E) and (b)(7)(E) with (b)(7)(E) capability. It will take these aircraft approximately (b)(7)(E) hours to get on scene from initial request (about (b)(7)(E) hours for pre-flight preps and about (b)(7)(E) hours flight time to St. Louis).
2. Ground Forces: In addition to funding limitations noted last evening and authorities issues
  1. FPS:
    1. Inside St. Louis, FPS will have (b)(7)(E) District Commander, (b)(7)(E) Area Commanders and (b)(7)(E) officers (total (b)(7)(E)). Within a (b)(7)(E) hour radius of St. Louis, FPS could call in an additional (b)(7)(E) officers for a maximum of (b)(7)(E).
    2. FPS will also provide LNOs to the various command posts and EOC inside St. Louis for coordination.

3. FPS was going to inquire with SAC on how to get local authorities/powers cross-designated to DHS LEOs if DHS LEOs were requested for support off of Federal property. If used for security around federal facilities, we are all set with our own organic authorities to include other DHS components who could be brought in to augment FPS. Currently though, no DHS component has LE powers off of federal property unless the locals convey such authority. If your SAC ever sought about using DHS LEOs in that role, we would seek assistance in coordinating with the locals to get the appropriate legal authorities cross-designated to DHS.
  4. Funding for DHS support on non-federal property is the other issue requiring a funding solution to avoid an Anti-Deficiency Act (ADA) violation. Funding is a non-issue if DHS is kept to securing federal property.
2. ICE:
1. ICE has a standby Rapid Deployment Team of [REDACTED] on a [REDACTED] at Benning, GA. If additional DHS ground forces were requested, we would launch this team first. USCG would be the transport provider. Once this team arrived in St. Louis, the aircraft could gas up and relaunch to Detroit to pick up the ICE team and return to St. Louis.
  2. Both teams in GA and MI are proactively working to get USMS deputization completed today. If this ICE contingency were utilized and the team(s) were employed off federal property, they would both need local authorities transferred as well. And there's the funding piece noted above for off federal property support.
3. USCG
1. USCG can transport the ICE team(s) as noted above.

CBP Portland Team Sit Rep 09/26/2020 to 09/27/2020:

At 1100 PST, September 26, 2020, USBP SOG, YUMA SOD, SAN DIEGO SOD, and BLAINE SOD with MRT met with US Marshals, HSI SRT and Federal Protective Service (FPS) Team leaders for a briefing at the Edith Green Federal Building. FPS will be deployed at the (b)(7)(E) and HSI SRT will be deployed at the (b)(7)(E). The courthouse will be sealed and all minor violations against the Federal property will not solicit a law enforcement response. Federal enforcement action from the Federal buildings will only take place as requested by FPS as a response to major felonies occurring, including attempts to breach the courthouse, setting fire to the structure, or attempts to barricade the egress points. USBP Agents will conduct quick reaction force (QRF) duties in support of FPS operations providing security and safety to Federal property/personnel as requested by FPS. Triggers for launching FPS with USBP to support local law enforcement and Oregon State Police as a QRF for today's events will be mass shootings, overwhelming Portland Police Bureau and/or Oregon State Police in violent counter protests, and casualties caused by protestors clashing.

No FPS or CBP personnel will be assigned to the (b)(7)(E) but will respond to emerging situations as deemed necessary.
